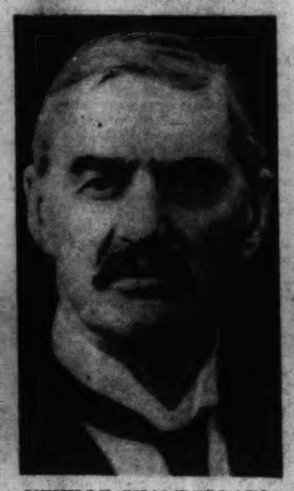
Europe's 'Big 4' Meet Today To Decide for Peace or War

FOUR MEN, SPEAKING FOR MORE THAN 600,000,000 OF THE WORLD'S PEOPLE, MEET today around a Munich conference table to settle whether there shall be peace or war. The men—Neville Chamberlain, of Great Britain; Adolf Hitler, of Germany; Edouard Daladier, of France, and Benito Mussolini, of Italy—are as diverse as the millions they represent. Upon the fateful words of these men will depend whether 1938 is another 1914, with all the horrors of war that date implies:

BENITO MUSSOLINI—One time bricklayer and a corporal in the Italian army in the World War, Mussolini surged suddenly to leadership of the first Fascist state after a long history of ardent Socialism. He marched to power at the head of a legion of black shirted Fascists October 22, 1922, when Italy wavered between monarchy and communism and is now leader of 58,568,846 people. Always thunderous on the platform, his first move of great international significance was in 1935 when he conquered Ethiopia and proclaimed Italy an empire. He is 55, and is considered an ally of the Nazi Reich.



NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN—Lean, austere 69-year-old prime minister of Great Britain, who took office May 28, 1937, to become political head of 486,726,503 people. His "realistic" policy led to the resignation, February 21, 1938, of dapper Anthony Eden, then foreign minister. Chamberlain twice has flown to Germany for conferences with Chancellor Hitler and Monday bluntly warned that invasion of Sudeten Czechoslovakia would bring France, Russia and Great Britain to arms. While other statesmen bore the empire's burden in bloody 1914, Chamberlain was a Birmingham alderman.

ADOLF HITLER—Belligerent leader of 71,903,285 Germans and former Austrians, he is recognized abroad chiefly by his wistful mustache and his vagrant forelock. Born the son of a none-too-wealthy Austrian, and now 49, he made his living as a house painter, a bricklayer and finally served in the Austrian army, where he won the Iron Cross. In 1923 he led the abortive "beer hall putsch" in Munich; it raised him to the political leadership of the Reich March 5, 1933. Hitler since has made Germany a military power by scrapping the Versailles Treaty, and has brought Europe to the brink of war.

EDOUARD DALADIER—This latest of French premiers, dour and professorial, went into office April 10, 1938, succeeding Leftist Leon Blum. Heading a home and colonial empire of 102,161,779 inhabitants, he already has assumed a truculent attitude in the present crisis. His powerful Maginot Line facing Germany is manned, reservists have been called to the colors and many of Blum's wage and hour concessions to labor have been recalled in the face of possible war. A veteran statesman of 54, he was a professor in 1914 before entering the French army which he now has partly mobilized.

Chamberlain's Story of Fight For Peace

He Pictures Dark Prospect to Commons As He Speaks His Efforts Bear Fruit
Word Comes of Hitler's Desire for Parley
Parliament Gives Him Wild Ovation

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 28.—Prime Minister Chamberlain, weary from long weeks of striving to save the peace of Europe and the empire, and discouraged over the possibility of success, went before a packed House of Commons today to give what the world feared was an account of the failure of negotiations with Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

As the prime minister's voice carried through the chamber the ominous words: "We are faced with a situation which has had no parallel since 1914," it appeared possible that his momentous address might end with a request for a declaration of war, as did Sir Edward Grey's a little more than 24 years ago.

As he recounted the history of the Czechoslovak-Sudeten dispute, its growth into a Czechoslovak-German dispute, and on into a crisis that involved all Europe, there still appeared little in his words to lift the gloom.

Then a messenger fought through the crowds jamming all entrances to the chamber. He handed a few sheets of paper to Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, who gave them hurriedly to his chief.

Chamberlain paused in his speech to read the message. He hurried on, revealing that Mussolini of Italy had agreed, at his request, to urge on Fuehrer Hitler a peace conference—a peace conference to prevent war, not to end one after years of bloody struggle.

Then he announced, his face glowing:

"I have now been informed by Hitler that he invites me to meet him in Munich tomorrow morning . . . I cannot say more."

The House of Commons broke into a wild demonstration of joy and relief.

Text of Premier's Address

The text of Chamberlain's speech follows:

Shortly before the House adjourned at the end of July, some questions were addressed to me as to the possibility of summoning the House before the time arranged and during the recess in certain eventualities.

Those eventualities referred to possible developments in Spain, but the matter which has brought us together today was one which at that time was already threatening but which we all hoped would find a peaceful solution before we met again.

Unhappily these hopes have not been fulfilled.

Today we are faced with a situation which has had no parallel since 1914. To find the origins of the present controversy it would be necessary to go back to the constitution of the state of Czechoslovakia with all its heterogeneous population. No doubt at the time when it was constituted, it seemed to those then responsible that it was the best arrangement that could be made in the light of conditions as they then supposed them to exist.

One cannot help reflecting that if Article XIX of the (League of Nations) Covenant providing for revision of treaties by agreement had been put into operation, as was contemplated by friends of the Covenant, instead of waiting until passions became so exasperated that revision by agreement became impossible, we should have avoided the crisis.

Therefore for that omission all members of the League must bear their responsibility. I am not here to apportion blame among them. The position we had to face in July was a deadlock. Negotiations had been going on between the Czechoslovak government and the Sudeten Germans, and there were fears that if the deadlock were not speedily broken the German government might presently interfere. Before His Majesty's government there were three alternative courses we might have adopted:

Either we could have threatened to go to war with Germany if she attacked Czechoslovakia; or we could have stood aside and allowed matters to take their course; or, finally, we could attempt to find a peaceful settlement by way of mediation.

Britain Had No Treaty Liabilities

The first of these courses was rejected. We had no treaty liabilities to Czechoslovakia. We had always refused to accept any such obligations and, indeed, this country, which does not readily resort to war, would not have followed us if we had tried to lead it into war to prevent a minority from obtaining autonomy or even from choosing to pass under some other government.

The second alternative was also repugnant. However far this territory may be in Europe, a spark there might give rise to a general conflagration. We felt it our duty to do everything in our power to help the contending parties come to an agreement.

We addressed ourselves to the third course—the task of mediation. We felt that the object was good enough to justify the risk.

And when Lord Runciman had expressed his willingness to undertake our mission, we were happy to think we had secured a mediator of long experience, of well-known qualities of firmness, tact and sympathy, and one that gave us the best hopes of success. That Lord Runciman did not succeed is no fault of his.

We, and indeed all Europe, must ever be grateful to him and his staff for their long and exhausting efforts on the behalf of peace, in course of which they gained the esteem and confidence of both sides.

On the twenty-first of September, Lord Runciman addressed to me a letter reporting the result of his mission. That letter is printed in the White Paper, but I may conveniently mention some of the salient points of the story.

On the seventh of June, the Sudeten German Party had put forward certain proposals which embodied eight points of Herr Henlein's speech at Carlsbad on the twenty-fourth of April. The Czechoslovakian government, on their side, had embodied their proposals in their draft of a nationality statute, language bill, and administrative reform bill. At the middle of August, it had become clear to Lord Runciman that the gap between these two proposals was too wide to permit of negotiations between the parties on that basis.

In his capacity as mediator, he was successful in preventing the Sudeten German Party from closing the door to further negotiations, and

Berlin, Sept. 28. — The venue of Thursday's historic meeting in Munich of Europe's four statesmen will be the "Fuehrerhaus."

This is one of the newest palatial executive mansions built under Nazi auspices on reconstructed Koenigsplatz Square.

The building is of noble proportions.

The time of the meeting has not been definitely fixed.

If the three invited statesmen encounter no delays in arriving, however, it was said, 11 a. m. (5 a. m., E. S. T.) would be a convenient time for the participants to meet Hitler at the conference table.

Berlin, Sept. 28.—Immense relief was felt in official and private circles here this evening when news trickled through of a four-man conference in Munich tomorrow, which may be destined to prevent a European catastrophe at the eleventh hour.

After the war scare widely prevailing in Germany during recent days this new ray of hope was greeted joyfully.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler was cheered by a relatively small number of pedestrians when he unexpectedly drove along the Wilhelmstrasse about 8:30 tonight. The Fuehrer, with his entourage, was on his way to Anhalter Station to board his private train for Munich.

Berlin newspapers had not yet mentioned the conference in sight. After being announced by the London and Paris wireless, however, the welcome news traveled quickly by word of mouth, even before being announced over the German radio.

It was interesting to note the difference in the spontaneous "heils" which greeted the Fuehrer when he left the German capital with the

Hungary Asks To Be Considered

Budapest, Sept. 28 (AP).—Hungary submitted a new note to Czechoslovakia on the minorities question today stating "it would be considered very suitable for the safeguarding of peaceful developments could the Hungarian claims be settled simultaneously with the German problem."

Rome, Sept. 28.—Premier Mussolini moved swiftly today at the urgent request of Prime Minister Chamberlain, which was followed by an appeal from President Roosevelt, to induce Reichsfuehrer Hitler to swerve from the policy which appeared to be leading to European war.

His action led to profound relief and jubilation everywhere among Italians and foreigners, all of whom felt that war had been narrowly averted.

After first persuading his ally to postpone mobilization for at least 24 hours to allow a discussion of the Czechoslovakia situation by Germany, France, England and Italy, Mussolini, accompanied by his son-in-law and foreign minister, Count Ciano, set out for Munich this evening by train.

The news that Il Duce had taken the initiative swept over Rome by word of mouth this afternoon, bringing with it enormous relief. It answered the heartfelt wish of every Italian, who had grown increasingly gloomy throughout the day as each report from Prague brought fresh news of nearing catastrophe.

Events moved in rapid and dramatic fashion. Early this morning Lord Perth called on Count Ciano and presented a telegram from Chamberlain, urgently requesting Il Duce to intervene with the Fuehrer in the interest of peace. This was at 10:30. About an hour later, Lord Perth made a second visit with a fuller version of Chamberlain's proposal.

The British Ambassador was informed that instructions had been sent to the Italian Ambassador in Berlin to tell Hitler that while Italy would fulfill completely her pledges (Mussolini publicly promised to stand by Germany if she became involved with other powers over the Czech trouble) nevertheless, Italy hoped that Hitler would see his way to postpone action, pending roundtable discussions.

In the meantime, the American Embassy had sent informally to the World Talks Hinted

'Meddling' Avoided

Gratification at the White House and State Department yesterday greeted the decision of Germany's chancellor to confer again on the Czechoslovak crisis.

Diplomats here agreed that the silken net of persuasive good-neighbor diplomacy which President Roosevelt had spread world-wide had contributed considerably to the new development in the interest of peace, but the Administration itself was cautious as to the outcome of the four-power conference at Munich today, and efforts to get Americans home from Europe were not relaxed.

The fact that President Roosevelt, only the night before, had wired Chancellor Hitler that "present negotiations . . . can be continued if you will give the word," and had suggested "a conference of all the nations directly interested in the present controversy" was not lost sight of in jubilant reflection over the conference call.

Throughout the day there was something of a parade of diplomats to the State Department.

Hans Heinrich Dieckhoff, German ambassador, who has just returned from Berlin, paid a "courtesy call" and later received reporters at his home to lay before them an exposition of Germany's case.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador, called at the State Department three times. He said the situation abroad was brighter.

The Czech minister, Vladimir Hurban, another caller, said the Munich conference was "satisfactory on the one hand but full of danger on the other." He held that previous concessions made by the Czechs had brought that country close to national suicide, and expressed fear that today's conference might seek to bring pressure on the state for even more territorial concessions.

At the same time something of a world conference, possibly supplanting the Versailles and subsequent treaties with a more equitable and lasting foundation for

Prague, Sept. 28.—Opinion in Czechoslovakia tonight was concerned over tomorrow's four-premier conference at Munich, being fearful of a sell out, and asking why Czechoslovakia and her ally, the Soviet Union, were not invited to participate with Germany, Italy, Great Britain and France.

A member of the Prague Parliament said tonight he was afraid Munich would be the scene of a world price-fixing conference, and he asserted that logically Czechoslovakia must be present at any conference settling her fate.

A member of the cabinet of former Premier Hodza, which resigned last week after yielding to the Anglo-French plan for the cession of Sudetenland, indicated the failure to invite the Soviet Union was an effort to split Moscow from Paris and London.

Another Czechoslovak put it this way: "We're afraid they'll sell us out without hearing us."

London, Sept. 28.—The haunting fear of another world war was lifted temporarily at least from the minds of millions of people this afternoon, when Prime Minister Chamberlain dramatically announced in Parliament that he is flying to Munich tomorrow to confer with Reichsfuehrer Hitler, Premier Mussolini and Premier Daladier, in an effort to arrange a peaceful transfer of Sudetenland from Czechoslovakia to Germany.

Carries Secret Proposals

Chamberlain is taking with him certain proposals to end the dangerous quarrel between the Germans and the Czechs. The nature of these proposals is secret, but it is rumored that an international police of Britons, French and Italians may be formed to maintain order in the Sudeten areas, pending their annexation to Germany.

[Government officials in Prague warned that any "international army" will be vigorously resisted, the United Press said.—Editor's note.]

Hitler had demanded this annexation by next Saturday under pain of invasion by his mighty forces, but he may be persuaded to wait until October 15 or November 1.

In any event, an oppressed, war-sick world has gained a respite, an armistice and perhaps a permanent peace, subject to a sudden upsurge of common sense and good will upon the part of the four men who control Europe's destinies at this moment.

In the modern history of Parliament there have been only two of these scenes which could approach today's for nerve-racking excitement and epochal importance.

One's mind went back to that day in August, 1914, when the foreign minister, Sir Edward Grey, broke the news that Britain would be at war with Germany in a few hours; and to that day in December, 1936, when King Edward VIII abdicated and went into exile.

One thought also of Armistice Day, 1918, when a war, lasting more than four years, ended with the loss of millions of lives and with a peace which helped to produce chaos in many countries and Hitlerism in Germany.

War Call Was Expected

Today Parliament reassembled in emergency session, under an imminent shadow of war. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday remained—three more days before Hitler would carry out his threat to march into Czechoslovakia, at the risk of fighting the World War all over again.

When the prime minister rose to speak, some thought he might have to wind up with a declaration of war; the majority thought war was inevitable by Saturday.

The prime minister may have thought so himself; he may have been as surprised as anyone else at the sudden arrival of good news from Berlin, which enabled him to announce that Hitler had postponed mobilization of his army for twenty-four hours and had invited Chamberlain, Daladier and Mussolini to Munich to talk things over on a man-to-man basis, instead of writing out futile notes, letters, communiques and ultimately, perhaps, war declarations.

The transition from war to peace came like magic. This correspondent sat in the gallery directly behind Lord Halifax, the foreign secretary; Earl Baldwin, who preceded Chamberlain as Prime Minister; the Duke of Kent

Trade Cotton For Silver, Pittman Urges

12.9c a Pound Price Says Wallace Realizes Cites India, China

Charging that Administration efforts to lift cotton prices had failed, Chairman Pittman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, yesterday proposed exchange of American cotton for foreign silver under a system of "barter and trade."

Pittman proposed "trading" 10 pounds of cotton for one ounce of silver, under a plan for exporting 13,400,000 bales of cotton and importing 670,000,000 ounces of silver. Silver certificates issued against the silver, he said, could be used to pay owners or holders of the exported cotton 12.9 cents a pound. Pittman denied the plan was "inflationary" and declared "it would not be sufficient to reach the point of sound reflation."

Sees "Imminent Disaster"

Contending the cotton producing industry is faced with "imminent disaster," the Nevada Senator said Secretary of Agriculture Wallace recognizes the "desperate situation."

"His temporay expedients, provided for the purpose of raising the price of cotton to parity through paying the planter to reduce acreage and through lending Government money upon the unmarketable surplus of cotton at prices above the export price, have not only proved an absolute failure but must result in a great loss to the Government and a continuing destruction of foreign markets for American cotton."

The August 1 carry-over of 13,400,000 bales of cotton, 7,000,000 of it under Government loans, Pittman said, provides virtually a full year's supply on hand, with the prospect of a 12,000,000-bale crop this year.

Points to India, China

This year's reduction of cotton producing acreage to 27,000,000 acres, he estimated, would cost the Government $129,000,000. Unless a foreign market can be found, he said, another "enormous" loss will be taken on loan cotton.

Pittman said a market could be found in China and India where there are large "hoarded quantities of silver." He said the President already has the power to purchase and import the 670,000,000 ounces of silver necessary for the trade. He estimated the 670,000,000 ounces would coin $864,300,000 or be the basis for an issue of silver certificates to that amount.

Pittman said the Government would neither make nor lose anything on the transaction but "simply conduct the trade and coin the monetary metal into legal tender currency, under existing law."

Light Blackboards To Brighten Up Schools Studied

Plans to chase the long-developed gloom out of several of Washington's school buildings with white interior paint and cream-colored blackboards were being studied yesterday by J. J. Crane, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of buildings.

The cream-colored blackboards would reverse the old order, he said. Children would use charcoal crayons, the markings of which could easily be washed away. Crane explained this would brighten up things by doing away with the dingy, chalk-smeared slate blackboards now in use here.

Crane believes brighter classrooms would give brighter teaching and brighter children. He said white paint is now used successfully in Minneapolis schools and that children keep halls and walls clean. He wants to see some of Washington's older schools done over on the interior with pure white gloss paint on walls and ceilings. Crane's own office in the Franklin Building, Thirteenth and K streets, has been redecorated in white and he says the result is "good."

Eskimo Banned For Mural Scrolls In Puerto Rico

The Treasury Department is taking no chances on a repetition of the Rockwell Kent mural fiasco.

Announcing a competition yesterday for two murals to decorate the courthouse and postoffice in Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, the department's painting and sculpture section made it clear that:

1. Only residents of the island may compete.
2. No inscriptions in any obscure language or dialect will be allowed.

Industrialists Held Backing Nazis in U. S.

Dies Aide Charges Link No Names Named Further Inquiry Asked

By the Associated Press.

A House committee on un-American activities received testimony yesterday that certain "Fascist-minded" American industrialists probably were supporting an organized Nazi movement in this country.

The testimony was given by John C. Metcalfe, of Chicago, a slight young man with a Hitler-like mustache, who became a member of the German-American Bund to study its operations from the inside. He is an investigator for the committee now.

Metcalfe said some of the evidence he had obtained indicated a link between "high up American industrialists" and the bund. He suggested that with further inquiry "we would be able to get definite and tangible proof that something of this sort exists and who these people are."

All Linked to Reich

Previously Metcalfe had testified that Nazi activities in this country "are traceable to and linked with government-controlled agencies in Germany," and, unless checked, may cause "great unrest and serious repercussions."

He described the Bund as an organization devoted to the dissemination of Nazi propaganda; composed almost entirely of Germans, both aliens and naturalized Americans, who have come here since the World War; and as similar to Germans in Czechoslovakia."

Metcalfe asserted, however, that about nine-tenths of the German-American element of the United States opposed Bund activities.

Plan Sabotage Ring

He said the Bund planned to draft men from its storm troop division for a "sabotage machine and spy net to be put in operation in the event that the United States should go to war with Germany."

Metcalfe said he was a member of a unit at Astoria, Long Island, and that Hermann Schwarzmann, leader of the post, told the storm troops there last June 1 that when the people "rise up" in America, "there will be bloodshed and fighting," and "we shall have to do our part."

Bund activities are concentrated in the New York area, he testified, but Milwaukee, Los Angeles, St. Louis, Seattle, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Detroit and Chicago were mentioned as cities in which the Bund had at least youth organization activities.

Hague Inquiry To Give Data To Grand Jury

U. S. Investigation Done Thomas May Add Charge Other Cases Studied

The Justice Department yesterday completed its inquiry into the alleged kidnaping of Norman Thomas, Socialist Party chairman, by members of Mayor Frank Hague's Jersey City police force five months ago.

Attorney General Cummings said evidence collected by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents will be laid before a Federal grand jury convening at Newark, N. J., the week of October 17.

Thomas was hustled out of Jersey City April 30, when he attempted to make a speech without a permit. Later the Socialist leader charged Hague's "sinister power" had reduced Jersey City constituents to "a slavery which cannot be exceeded by anything in Rome or Berlin."

Thomas filed a formal complaint against two police officers before a United States commissioner and later supplied the Justice Department with a list of 28 witnesses. A grand jury hearing was scheduled July 5, but it was agreed not to proceed pending a Justice Department investigation. Cummings said the grand jury will be called back October 17. He said counsel for Thomas has been invited to submit any additional information he desires.

Cummings also announced his investigation "into alleged violations of the Federal civil rights statutes is going forward" and a comprehensive study has just been completed of the testimony in the injunction suit against Hague before Federal District Judge William Clark, at Newark. This "free speech" suit against the Jersey City Mayor by the C. I. O., the American Civil Liberties Union and other plaintiffs, is still pending.

"Certain incidents in the civil rights picture are still the subject of investigation by agents of the department," Cummings said. "It is expected, however, that this investigation will be concluded in the near future."

Hoover Calls New Deal Reactionary

Scores 'Immorality' Hits 'False Liberalism' Sees Objectives 'Hoary'

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Sept. 28.—Former President Herbert Hoover accused President Roosevelt tonight of attempting to form a new political party under a false banner of liberalism and declared "if this sort of stuff is liberal, then George III, Hitler, Stalin and Boss Tweed are liberals."

"What President Roosevelt is leading is not liberalism; instead of bringing the past up to the present he is bringing the present back to the past," Hoover said in a prepared address, the first of three in which he will "explore this proposed party."

Asserting the time has come "to take the gloves off," Hoover flung eight specific charges of "political immorality" at the Administration of his successor before a Missouri Republican Club rally.

He accused it of making 300,000 political appointments without civil service examinations so that "working for the Government becomes a racket, not a career."

Relief Called Stench

Second, he charged that relief administration had been misused for vote-getting purposes so boldly that in Kentucky an investigating Senate committee "had to stigmatize this stench."

As his third charge, Hoover asserted there was "at least a moral violation of the spirit of the corrupt practices act" when "Democratic propaganda books" containing the autograph of President Roosevelt were sold "to corporations for $250 in Mr. (James A.) Farley's name."

Hoover's fourth charge was that the New Deal has been deceitful in its financial program, professing to place collections for old-age insurance in a reserve fund but using them in reality for current expenses.

Hits Roosevelt Methods

Fifth, Hoover accused the Administration of pursuing "social justice" at the expense of "personal conscience," using methods which caused even Democratic Senators and newspapers to criticize with such phrases as "impairs the dignity of his office."

Sixth, he said the present Government built up a huge propaganda machine "impregnated with suppression of fact, distortion of statistics, creating of misleading slogans, building of prejudice or hate."

Seventh, he accused the New Deal of creating class hate.

"In the three years of depression stress before the New Deal, the man-days lost by strikes and lockouts averaged 5,000,000 a year," Hoover said.

Objectives Are "Hoary"

"In the five years of the New Deal, they have averaged 18,000,000 per year."

Eighth, he charged that President Roosevelt professes to be liberal while embracing objectives "hoary with reaction." Hoover asserted that "destruction of the independence of the judiciary" dates back to Charles I; destruction of "the independence of the legislative arm" back to George III; that centralization of government "is one of Mr. Hitler's successful ideas;" that "devaluation of currency is a trick of Roman Emperors," and in the matter of deficit financings "you might look up the inscription at the feast of Belshazzar."

Dr. Morgan Seeks To Halt 'Hindering' Of TVA 'Duties'

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 28 (AP).—A petition was on file in District Federal Court today in which Dr. A. E. Morgan, ousted TVA chairman, seeks to enjoin TVA Directors David E. Lilienthal and H. A. Morgan from "hindering" him as a "member and chairman" of the Tennessee Valley Authority Board.

Filed by Dr. Morgan's attorneys, the plea was part of an amendment to the former TVA head's suit contesting the power of President Roosevelt in removing him for "contumacy."

Hearings on the suit are to be held in November.

CUMMINGS

"Do you think the President can be concerned with Pennsylvania politics with the international situation as it is?" the Senator added.

Guffey said those who would substitute for the President in Pennsylvania included Postmaster General Farley, Attorney General Cummings, Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior; Henry W. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture; Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, and Representative Lewis, recently defeated for a Maryland senatorial seat.

Chicago, Sept. 28 (AP).—Lester J. Dickinson, of Iowa, former Republican Senator, said today the November election should not "give encouragement to an Administration inclined to involve America with other democracies of the world in enforcing a quarantine against aggressor nations."

Dickinson, again a senatorial candidate, addressed Chicago Republican candidates at a luncheon.

"This country can best be served," he said, "by putting into positions of influence men who believe in peace and who will resist this Administration in seeking to give free advice to either side in Europe if thereby we may become a party to the European struggle."

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 28 (AP).—Former Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti asserted tonight that Gov. Earle told him he withheld a State police report on accusations of irregularities in Erie District gravel contracts to "protect" David L. Lawrence, Democratic State chairman.

Margiotti told a Pennsylvania legislative committee investigating political campaign charges against Earle and 13 associates that he "repeatedly" asked the Governor for the report and was refused.

After State police investigated contracts awarded for State highway contracts in the Erie District more than a year ago, Earle announced inferior gravel had been delivered on State projects.

The Governor dismissed H. H. Temple, chief highway engineer, and E. A. Griffiths, a district engineer, for "negligence."

The Interior Department said yesterday that Secretary Ickes would travel into almost every section of the country on his speaking tour between September 30 and October 21.

Although Ickes declined to attach November election significance to his trip at a recent press conference, his associates said he reserved the privilege of expressing himself on political issues.

This, they said, would be particularly true of his first address of the tour, before the Democratic State Convention at Grand Rapids, Mich., on the evening of September 30. The next talk will be at Baltimore, Md., October 7, at the eastern regional conference of the National Negro Congress.

Vandenberg Predicts More 'Yes-But' Men

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 28 (AP).—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, praised politics' "yes—but man" and predicted "still more" of him in 1940 in an address prepared for delivery before the Michigan League of Women Voters tonight.

Identifying the "yes—but man" as representative of "non-partisan politics," Senator Vandenberg said he himself was "perhaps as well known today as a 'coalitionist' as I am in the role of a partisan Republican."

"This does not mean," he said, "that I have ceased to be a partisan. What it does mean is that I can see that the other fellow's party is not always wrong and that mine is not always right."

The Senator attacked the social security act because funds from the "so-called 'full reserve'" behind old age pensions, he charged, are used to pay "general running expenses of a spend-thrift government."

U. S. Saved Citizens But Lost $296,000

More than 6,000 Americans who were rescued from war-blazing Europe in August, 1914, by American gold forgot their debt to Uncle Sam.

The Treasury lent $717,301 to Americans caught in Europe without funds. Of 13,597 persons so aided, 6,006, representing an outlay of $296,837.08, hadn't paid up at last reports.

Canada to Name Unit To Study Alaska Road

Ottawa, Sept. 28 (Canadian Press).—Prime Minister Mackenzie King has agreed to appoint a Canadian commission to co-operate as a fact-finding body with a similar United States commission on the proposed United States highway through British Columbia and Yukon territory to Alaska.

Premier T. D. Pattullo of British Columbia, who has been in Ottawa conferring with Dominion ministers, made the announcement today.

MOST BALDNESS CAUSED BY 'GUESSING'

BALDNESS is preventable in about 90% of all cases. Most men become bald because they guess at the causes of their hair-loss and then apply guesswork lotions or treatments.

Thomas treatment effectively prevents baldness because it replaces guesswork with scientific accuracy and precision. When a Thomas expert examines your scalp he determines exactly which of the 14 local scalp disorders are causing, or have caused your loss of hair. He then directs the 20-year proved Thomas treatment to overcome those specific causes. Your abnormal hair-fall stops; your dandruff disappears; scalp itch ceases; and new hair starts to grow on the thin and bald spots.

Come in and learn more about this reliable method of scalp treatment. No charge is made for a complete scalp examination.

46 Indicted, 13 as Suspects In Policy Game

Grand Jury Acts
Talismans in Evidence
Embezzlement Charged

Thirteen persons seized in the police drive against the numbers racket here were among 46 indicted by the District grand jury yesterday. All were accused of operating lotteries and of possessing numbers slips. Dream books and talismans were among the evidence presented.

Vincent W. Kramer, alias Dziegielsik, of 625 Mellon street southeast, was accused of embezzlement on the complaint of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Covall that they paid him $5,850 to build them a home at 2405 U street southeast. He failed to finish the work, they said. Detective Sergt. Herbert J. Wanataker's report said Kramer acknowledged receiving $4,850 but asserted he signed receipts for $1,000 without receiving the money, to help the Covalls obtain a loan.

Accused of violating the lottery laws were William Rosenberg, 33; Helen Johnson, 28, colored; George D. Governor, 33, colored; William H. Hooper, 40, colored; William T. Butler, 31; Tommie L. Wathen, 28, colored; Paul Scott, 28, colored; Cleveland Howard, 26, colored; Griffin S. Smith, 27, colored; Finley Trammell, 27, colored; Samuel Madeoy, 58; Mary Thomason, 40, colored, and Brown Thomason, 43.

Others indicted were:

First degree murder, Calvin Walton, 38, colored, for the pistol death of Newman McLester, 32, colored, in a lunchroom brawl September 11.

Second degree murder, Frank C. Guy, 42, colored, for the death as a result of a blow of Edna Reddick, 37, colored, May 28.

Robbery, Harry L. Lewis, 18, colored, Orange, Va., and Carl McCue, 20.

Housebreaking, Charles Cook, 32, colored.

Housebreaking and larceny, William M. Smith, jr., 28, colored; Robert W. Davis, 21; Willie H. Morton, 28, colored, and Thomas Lee, 23, colored.

Receiving stolen property, Henry B. Pollor, 39.

Grand larceny, Walter Rowe, 38, Baltimore, colored (three indictments); Travis Glasgow, 45, colored (two indictments), and Samuel Robertson, 42, Baltimore, colored.

Joy riding and grand larceny, Norman L. Griffin, 19, colored; William J. Barnes, 20, colored; William A. Reed, 28.

Joy riding, Mack Young, 38; Hezekiah Rue, 21, colored; Charles M. Barbous, 17, colored, and Lester M. Prror, 23, colored.

Embezzlement, Jerome Clrake, 33 (two indictments), and Lawrence R. Winton, 43.

Forgery and uttering forged instrument, Jerome Clark, 35, and William A. Reed, 28 (five indictments).

Selling a substitute as butter, Herman Hoover, 34.

Using mails to defraud, James C. Lonz, 39.

Forging Government checks—Mary T. O'Brien, 20.

Obtaining property by false pretenses, Bert Watson, 28, and Charles Kappel, 38.

Larceny after trust—Herbert E. Ryan, 49.

Selling mortgaged property—L. Alex Pierson, 37.

Violating narcotic act, Thomas H. Ryan, Frank T. Neighbors and Percy B. Azerodo, 38.

Charges ignored by grand jury, William L. Bryan, jr., joy riding; Harold Miller, 32, colored, carnal knowledge; Samuel Block, 27, numbers charges; John Al Schavis, 29, and Ernest Schavis, 20, colored, housebreaking and larceny.

Wife-Beater Spurns Probation, Gets 25 Days

Leonard C. Lowe, 1237 G street northwest, refused probation in Police Court yesterday and went to jail for 25 days because his wife testified against him on an assault charge.

Mrs. Lowe told the court her husband struck her in the face August 30. Judge Newman suspended a 25-day sentence and referred the case to the probation officer.

As he was about to leave, Lowe is reported to have remarked:

"If she feels that way about it, I'd rather go to jail."

Colored Man Faces Attack-Theft Trial

Francis N. Johnson, colored, 23, first block Logan place northwest, was held for grand jury action yesterday, charged with the attack-robbery of Miss Verne Lynch, telephone operator, of 1908 K street northwest.

Miss Lynch testified that she was walking at North Capitol and Pierce streets last Friday when she was attacked from behind by a man who grabbed her pocketbook. Resisting, she was struck in the face and knocked down, while her assailant fled with $25. She later identified Johnson in a line-up.

Author of Barroom Ballad Visits D. C.

Parking his trailer on the outskirts of the city, John Henry Titus, 92, who wrote "The Face on the Bar Room Floor" and other poems, made a sightseeing tour of the city before continuing on his jaunt to Florida.

'Face on Barroom Floor' Author Here on Tour at 92

Silver-Haired Lecturer Wrote 1,200 Poems
Numerous Parodies Held 'Maudlin'

The man who wrote "The Face on the Barroom Floor" came to town yesterday, hale and hearty at 92 and full of talk about his writings and life in general.

He is John Henry Titus and he's on a lecture tour that has lasted for the past 30 years and has taken him into all parts of the United States, as well as into far corners of the world.

The famous poem which has resounded and rolled among the rafters of taverns and inns throughout America for more than half a century portrays a romance which bloomed and faded at the 'Old Pine Tavern" in Jefferson, Ohio, birthplace of Titus.

Blue eyes flashing and his long, silver hair swinging almost to his shoulders, Titus sat in a trailer camp on the outskirts of Washington yesterday with his 48-year-old wife and in stirring style recited countless numbers of the 1,200 poems he has written—including "The Face on the Barroom Floor," which he occasionally breaks into:

"Astir the pine in sombre lay.
"Twas a-barmy autumn night,
"And a goodly lot was there
"That oversaw Joe's barroom
"As Court upon the square . . ."

Speaking of the numerous parodies and imitations of "The Face on the Barroom Floor," Titus scoffs. "Just maudlin attempts to win sympathy where it is not needed," he says. And he swings off into another part of his poem.

"Say, Joe, a brace, and I'll feel better an' glad,
And draw right here in mem-ry the one that drive me mad.
Fetch the char your mark the whisky score,
And see her face in fancy on the barroom floor."

The poem was written about an artist friend of Titus' father, who stopped at the tavern in Jefferson during the gold rush to California, and fell in love with a girl there, so the author says.

Painting a picture of his best friend, Joe, the artist caught an expression on the face of the girl, watching Joe, which he mistook for infatuation. He left, while Joe remained to become bartender at the tavern. The girl married the tavern owner.

"The Face on the Barroom Floor" is the story of the artist's return to the tavern to find the "ghost of his lost love," Titus said.

"My writings are my life," Titus said. "My poems are the soliloquy of my soul—technique gives way to a divine passion."

The silvery haired patriarch has spoken in all parts of the country and last year read his poems in New Orleans, La., at a Louisiana Day celebration.

In all his 92 years—he was born February 1, 1846, he says—he has never been ill. He wrote his first poem at the age of 12, "The Awkward Boy," published in the old McFarland reader used more than 80 years ago in primer grades, he said.

His education he gleaned from the classics and the teachings of his father, William K. Titus, who edited the abolitionist paper, the Sentinel, in Jefferson, Ohio, in which the famous poem first appeared in 1872. The paper was owned by William D. Howells, famous writer of the early 1800s, Titus said, whose writings he followed fervently.

Titus said his father, born in Greenwich, Conn., was a boyhood friend of Edgar Allan Poe and Washington Irving and made frequent trips with them on the Hudson River and in the Sleepy Hollow region.

Titus said he had "never suffered corns or religion."

He explained this by saying that "some people I've seen have looked bilious with religion. Birtue lies in the center; to vary to extreme is radical."

Titus has published only a few of his writings, but he says he will publish them all "in time." He says he can recite 800 of the poems he has written.

He arrived in Washington from Baltimore without any lectures on his schedule. His destination is Florida, where he will give a few lectures and then return to New York to set up a concession at the 1939 World's Fair.

Plumber Beats Bride Dead for Waking Him

Tries to Kill Himself
Uses Rolling Pin
Inquest Set at 11:30

Her skull crushed, a bride of a few months was found yesterday by police in a bedroom in her two-room apartment a few feet away from the gas-filled kitchen in which her husband was found slumped over a chair, unconscious.

The woman, Mrs. Viola Katherine Nichols, 32, beauty shop operator, was taken to Emergency Hospital where she died after a few minutes. The husband, Clarence Edward Nichols, 29, a plumber, was revived by physicians and taken to the police station.

Nichols told police he beat his wife with a rolling pin and then tried to take his own life. He said he struck her in a fit of anger after she had awakened him several times during the night.

An autopsy, however, revealed that strangulation was the immediate cause of death, police said, instead of the blows inflicted with the rolling pin. Her injuries consisted of a fractured hyoid bone in her throat and a fractured skull, they reported.

Wanted to Talk

Coroner A. Magruder McDonald will conduct an inquest today at 11:30 a. m. No charges have been booked against Nichols.

The woman was killed, police revealed last night, a few hours after she heard that her husband had a wife and three children living in West Grove, Pa., and that he was wanted for desertion and nonsupport by the Pennsylvania State police.

This information was turned over to Detective Sergt. John Wise, of the police homicide squad, by Charles Proctor, attorney, who said Mrs. Nichols had asked him to investigate rumors of her husband's earlier marriage. Proctor showed Wise a letter from the former wife, which arrived and was shown to Mrs. Nichols the day before her death.

Detective Wise quoted Nichols as saying his wife "punched" him early yesterday morning and said she wanted to "talk about something."

"I told her to let it wait until morning and went back to sleep. Then she punched me again, and I went into the kitchen and got the rolling pin. I put it down by my side of the bed and told her I'd crack her with it if she awakened me again," Wise quoted Nichols as relating.

"When she punched me again, I guess I just saw red," Wise said he was told. When asked how many times he had struck his wife, Wise said Nichols replied:

"It could have been once or it could have been a hundred times."

Wed Less Than a Year

Nichols and his wife, both of whom had been married before, were married less than a year ago. He had been attempting to set up a plumbing business for himself in East Falls Church, Va., according to roomers in the house at 1303 P street, in which he and his wife lived.

"He was always very nice to her and seemed to respect her so much," a neighbor said, adding that Mrs. Nichols retired Tuesday night about 9:30 after complaining of a slight headache.

Police cruising in the neighborhood of the P street house were radioed after Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Hawvermale, who live in a basement apartment, heard moans coming from the Nichols' apartment and noticed water dripping through the ceiling.

Breaking down the door of the apartment, police found the body of Mrs. Nichols face down on the floor in the bedroom, the bedclothes stuffed in a corner between the bed and the wall. In the kitchen they found Nichols slumped over a chair beside streaming jets of the gas stove. Water was running from the spigot at the sink and had overflowed upon the floor.

Beaten With Rolling Pin.

The body of Mrs. Viola Katherine Nichols, 32, above, was found beside the bed in her two-room apartment at 1303 P street yesterday by police. Clarence Edward Nichols, 29, in inset, husband of the dead woman, was found slumped over a chair in the gas-filled kitchen. He is being held by police awaiting outcome of a coroner's inquest today at 11:30 a. m.

What's Coming Off Here! Just Model Robbery

Three wax models in the display windows of the Emily Shop, 1300 block F street northwest, apparently were the subjects of robbery (by the window dresser) last night, as police scout cars, motorcycle police and members of the robbery squad responded to a hurry call of robbery.

Dashing up F street, with sirens blowing, the scout cars stopped traffic at Thirteenth and F streets, expecting to frustrate a robbery.

But, alas, the window dresser had just disrobed the wax models and some prankster called police about the big holdup.

Poles Stand On Ultimatum Despite Talks

Demand Teschen 1,600,000 at Arms 48-Hour Deadline

By the United Press.

Teschen, Polish - Czechoslovak Frontier, Sept. 28.—Polish officials said tonight that tomorrow's four-power meeting in Munich will not be permitted to alter a Polish ultimatum calling for Czechoslovakia's surrender of the Teschen area within 48 hours.

Either the Czechs evacuate Teschen Silesia before Saturday or the Polish army will "march in and take it," it was stated.

The Munich meeting may save western Europe from a devastating war, but can have no effect on Poland's demands, it was explained.

Poland has 1,600,000 troops under arms and still is awaiting Prague's answer to her proposals for surrender of the Teschen belt in which live the bulk of a Polish minority of 82,000 under Czech rule.

Poland claims that the Czechs seized Teschen Silesia in January, 1919, while the Poles were fighting the Bolsheviks to the east.

President Benes of Czechoslovakia, it was announced yesterday, has already agreed "in principle" to a territorial revision and Poland's demands were understood to call for occupation of the disputed area by Polish troops by Saturday.

The Polish deadline conformed with that previously set by Reichsfuehrer Hitler for surrender of the Sudeten German districts of Czechoslovakia to the Reich.

(Dispatches from Prague said the Polish minister there delivered a note to President Benes but that its contents were kept secret.)

Sporadic fighting between Czechs and Poles continued in this town, which straddles the border and which will be the advance field headquarters for any Polish forces sent into Czechoslovakia.

Residents tonight experienced their first air-raid precautions "black out."

In the small town of Punc two Czechs were killed when a Czech "People's Guard" was said to have crossed the Osla River with machine guns and hand grenades. At Frysztat, in the center of a rich coal district, crowded with jobless Polish miners, a Czech ammunition truck was captured. The ammunition was carted into a forest.

Poles "Determined"

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—Jean Walewski, chairman of the foreign affairs committee of the Polish Diet, said today Poland was "absolutely determined" to obtain from Czechoslovakia the territory inhabited by Poles.

"We don't wish the Czechs any harm," he said in a Warsaw address broadcast in the United States. "We don't want to knock them out. We want to get back the land inhabited by the Poles which the Czechs deprived us of in 1918. Then nothing shall prevent peaceful relations between the two countries."

Tokyo Silent, Probably Neutral If Europe Wars

Tokyo (Thursday), Sept. 29 (AP).—The official attitude toward the European crisis was still carefully guarded today but what shreds of evidence there were indicated Japan would try to remain neutral in event of general European war.

United States Ambassador Grew yesterday asked the Tokyo government to send a peace appeal to Reichfuehrer Hitler and President Benes.

Foreign Minister Gen. Ugaki replied that his government would give the proposal "serious consideration."

Japanese felt a European conflict might divert Europe's interest from the Orient, exhaust both Britain and France, and diminish opposition to Japanese ambitions.

The strongest factor tending to drag Japan into the conflict would be the entry of Soviet Russia into a European war. Authoritative quarters admitted in such event Japan might seize the opportunity to attack Siberia.

1,700 Japanese Annihilated in Trap, Chinese Say

Special Cable to The Post.

Hankow, Sept. 27 (delayed).—A Japanese regiment was enveloped and practically annihilated in a nine-hour battle southwest of the Juichang-Wuning highway Sunday night, according to a dispatch of the Central News Agency, official Chinese news service.

The dispatch estimated the Japanese casualties at 1,700 killed and wounded, and the Chinese casualties at 320.

The Chinese lured 2,000 Japanese southwest of the Juichang-Wuning highway into a valley between Yingtao and Mechai mountains, and closed in on all sides.

Further Chinese reports estimate thatthe Japanese suffered 3,000 casualties n the last week's assaults in the vicinity of Tienchiachen on the north bank of the Yangtze River.

A Chinese base hospital at Tayeh, 80 miles east of Wuchang, was destroyed by a Japanese air raid yesterday, killing 80 wounded soldiers.

A Better Way to Treat Constipation!

When you're constipated, it's a great temptation to be satisfied with quick relief. But medicines may become a habit. And they don't keep constipation from returning. It's so much better to get at the cause of the trouble!

If you eat what most people do, chances are the only thing the matter is you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean how much you eat. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

What to do? Eat Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. This crunchy cereal contains both "bulk" and the intestinal tonic, vitamin B1. And it's not a drug, not a medicine! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by grocers. Served by restaurants.

Europe's "big four" headed for the Bavarian city tonight, seeking a new way to avoid war. Here heads of the Italian, English, French and German governments will meet. Their decision to confer snatched the world from the brink of war. German mobilization was postponed 24 hours.

No More Delay Is Possible, Berlin Warns; Hitler Entrains for Munich Peace Parley

comparatively thin applause given Dr. Paul Josef Goebbels when—ignoring tomorrow's meeting and the international diplomatic steps preceding it—the minister of propaganda expounded national enthusiasm at this critical hour at a mass meeting summoned in the Lustgarten.

A semi-official communique issued tonight warns the foreign statesmen who are foregathering at Munich that "Czechoslovak crisis doesn't permit delay—not in view of German preparations." It may be assumed the author of the communique had already read Chamberlain's message to Parliament this afternoon, in which the British prime minister spoke of the possibility of reaching an agreement within a week. The communique continues:

"Immediate Transfer"

"The situation asks categorically for immediate action. In view of this situation and led by the desire for a last effort at a peaceful transfer of the Sudetenland to the Reich, the Fuehrer has invited government chiefs of Italy, France and Britain for a personal conference. He hopes this conference at the last hour will lead to an agreement on measures to become operative immediately for transference of the Sudetenland by the Czechoslovak government."

At 11:15 a. m. Andre Francois Poncet called on Hitler at the chancellery and stayed fully an hour. The French Ambassador was succeeded by Sir Nevile Henderson, his British colleague, whose visit also lasted an hour. Whatever these men may have suggested, it seemed doubtful whether they would have been able to convince the Fuehrer of the suitability of what may be termed an international heart-to-heart talk without the intervention of Mussolini, Hitler's "great friend in Rome."

Plea at Zero Hour

When Il Duce telephoned Der Fuehrer, he persuaded him in a 45-minute conversation to postpone his intended military measures for at least 24 hours. It may well be called an attempt at the zero hour to save the peace of Europe.

As felt only too keenly during the recent days, modern means of communication can speed mobilization and the movements of armies, but they can also assist on occasions in halting dangerous, precipitate action by statesmen and generals. Approximately a war—it seemed to be nearer than even most persons outside three or four European chancelleries could have known—was disclosed by Chamberlain this afternoon in the House of Commons. Hitler apparently really meant to mobilize at 2 p. m. today and thus launch his invasion of Czechoslovakia.

In view of Hitler's grim determination to take the Sudetenland by military force, "and immediately," it seems more than doubtful whether the joint efforts in Berlin of representatives of the British and French governments would in themselves have been effective in inducing Hitler to abandon a single iota of his program.

Goebbels Sees Peace

Berlin, Sept. 28 (AP).—Propaganda Minister Goebbels told a Berlin throng late today that he foresaw a peaceful solution of the dispute "within a few days" without mentioning the Munich gathering.

In historic Lustgarten, Goebbels merely said:

"I, as a man in the know of things, can tell you we neither can nor want to retreat, as the Fuehrer has pledged his word to support the Sudetens, but the solution is imminent.

"Herr Benes (president of Czechoslovakia) now will be forced to stick to his promise."

New Proposals Reported

This last might be taken as an indirect reference to the Munich conference. The Prague government had yielded to the original Anglo-French cession proposal but balked when Hitler demanded settlement by or on Saturday.

Semiofficial quarters said that the British and French governments had submitted "new proposals" for solution of the crisis.

"In this connection," these sources explained, "Chamberlain offered to meet with the Fuehrer again in a personal discussion. At the same time Mussolini offered his help in search for an immediate solution.

"In consideration of these conditions and the fact that previous proposals do not meet the situation justly, and especially from the wish to attempt a peaceful cession of the Sudeten regions to the Reich, the Fuehrer invited the government heads of Italy, France and England to a personal discussion."

Ask Representation

London, Sept. 28 (AP).—Jan Masaryk, Czechoslovak minister to London, in a letter to Prime Minister Chamberlain tonight asked that his country be represented by a spokesman, expert or observer, if not by a delegate ranking equally with those of Britain, Germany, France and Italy.

The Czechoslovak cabinet met tonight following the announcement of the Munich conference, a Prague dispatch by Reuters said.

The dispatch said President Benes presided at the meeting.

The soldier premier, Jan Syrovy, postponed his scheduled broadcast tonight as a result of the meeting.

A Prague dispatch to Havas, the French news agency, today said authoritative Czechoslovak sources denied reports in Paris and Rome that Benes had resigned as one of Premier Mussolini's conditions for mediation.

Parran Warns Of Yellow Fever, Malaria Perils

Caution on the part of travelers, plus continued vigilance and thoroughness by quarantine officers, should be adequate to keep out of the United States the virulent forms of yellow fever and malaria now prevalent in South America, Surgeon General Thomas Parran said yesterday.

Just returned from the quadrennial Pan-American Health Conference held in Bogota, Colombia, the head of the U. S. Public Health Service said yellow fever and malaria problems were among the most urgent discussed at the parley by health directors of 20 American republics.

He said the conference heard that yellow fever is raging in the jungles of Brazil, Peru and Colombia. Successful results are being obtained, however, with a vaccine which has been administered to 600,000.

The malaria which is wreaking so much havoc, Dr. Parran said, is carried by a mosquito believed to have been borne across the South Atlantic from Africa in 1930 by military planes or warships.

Premier Gen. Jan Syrovy canceled a speech scheduled for tonight simultaneously with the fall of confidence in the nation's allies. Confidence rises and falls constantly, but is normally at zero since their pressure forced the Hodza cabinet to yield to partition.

The Czech people are still fatalistically facing the possibility they may have to wage a lone fight against Germany. This possibility will be there until the Syrovy cabinet agrees to follow the Hodza commitment to surrender the Sudetendland. The Syrovy cabinet has not yet promised this, despite the guarantee of Prime Minister Chamberlain that it would do so.

Destruction Held Goal

It is pointed out here that the Hodza commitment was made when Reichsfuehrer Hitler was claiming only the Sudeten areas, and not for the destruction of Czechoslovakia, which is considered here now to be his goal.

Czechoslovakia took a half holiday today. Stores and banks were closed from noon on in observation of the name day of St. Wenceslaus, the patron saint of Bohemia.

The current situation forced postponement of the annual ceremony of presenting King Wenceslaus' sword to the head of the state, now Gen. Syrovy. Yet flowers were banked on the Wenceslaus equestrian statue in the square named in his honor at Vaclavske Namesti, Prague's main street. His skull crown and helmet and other relics were exhibited at the St. Vitus Cathedral, where they were the objects of peasant women's prayers.

Prague Hails Roosevelt

Prague, Sept 28 (AP).—President Roosevelt's second peace message to Reichsfuehrer Hitler met with a warm response in Czechoslovak circles today. The fact that the American President duplicated his first gesture cheered Czechoslovaks. Sources close to the government expressed the hope that Mr. Roosevelt might gain his point solely through persistent pressure on Germany not to toss negotiations overboard.

Italy

foreign office the text of President Roosevelt's appeal to Hitler. It was followed by a personal appeal from the President to Mussolini to use influence for peace. Ambassador Phillips, returning from Florence this afternoon, was met at the station by officials of the American Embassy. He drove directly to the Palazzo Venezia an dwas received by Il Duce at 4 o'clock for about 15 minutes. No information about the nature of Il Duce's reply is available at the embassy here.

The Japanese Ambassador, acting on instructions from Tokyo, following Roosevelt's appeal, also called on Il Duce, and is understood to have made similar representations about the urgency of immediate intervention.

All day long crowds formed around the newspaper stands where the venders had outlined the full page headlines in red chalk. Every face had a look of deep anxiety. Although hope was almost gone, several Italians to whom this correspondent spoke, said:

"If the Duce would only intervene he would save us all from war."

Where the first news of the four-power conference originated, it is impossible to say, but about 4:30 this afternoon, the report swept through the center of the city that "Il Duce will mediate." In the course of 15 minutes, everybody seemed to know it. People burst into laughter and ran to telephones to tell friends and, all Rome breathed a great sigh of relief.

Il Duce has responded to the pleas, spoken or unspoken, of every Italian. His departure for Munich leaves them confident that the difficulties will be ironed out and that the horrors of a war fought over a question which has already been decided in principle, will be spared them. "Il Duce never fails."

In diplomatic circles there was great elation. There has been increasing anxiety for some days at the failure of any of the great powers to call on Mussolini for assistance as the only man whose word would have weight with Hitler.

Hitler Invites Parley After Plea by Duce

and the Archbishop of Canterbury. All four were a group picture of dejection, anxiety and misery.

At exactly 3:39 o'clock Lord Halifax gazed moodily below to the floor jammed with Conservatives, Laborites, Liberals and one Communist. Fidgeting, Lord Halifax raised a long index finger to the top of his head and toyed with a strand of his thinning gray hair.

At 3:40 he perked up in his seat. A breathless foreign office messenger had clattered up the stairs.

The foreign secretary ripped open the wide, official envelope, cast one hurried glance at its brief contents and offered a sight of it to Earl Baldwin, who was on his left. The rugged, heavy face of the former prime minister was transformed with joy.

Lord Halifax kicked his way through a tightly packed row of peers and diplomats to deliver the message to Chamberlain before he concluded his speech.

The foreign secretary beckoned to the prime minister's adviser, Sir Horace Wilson, who in turn beckoned to the prime minister's secretary, Lord Dungrass. The latter grabbed the message and ran downstairs. He took it to Sir John Simon, who looked at it and passed it on to Chamberlain, tugging at the prime minister's coattails.

A Terrific Climax

The Prime Minister was in the midst to thanking Mussoloni for influencing Hitler to postpone mobilization of the Reichswehr for 24 hours. For the first time in many years, hundreds of M. P.'s gratefully applauded Il Duce.

Now came the terrific climax. Chamberlain had delivered his recital of events in chronological order and the last-minute message from Lord Halifax provided him with a perfect finish; a happy ending to a sorry tale.

Those members of Parliament who had been crowded out downstairs and had to stand up in the side galleries, cupped hands to their ears to hear better.

"That is not all," resumed the prime minister, raising his voice gleefully. "I have something further to say to the House yet.

"I have now been informed by Herr Hitler that he invites me to meet him at Munich tomorrow."

At, this announcement all rules of decorum of the House of Commons were shattered. Cheering, hand-clapping, whistling and stamping of feet thundered forth from all sections of the cathedral-like chamber. M. P.'s who had been provided with the official "White Paper" containing the correspondence which Hitler and Chamberlain had exchanged, waved and rustling papers high over their heads. Diplomats joined in the applause, with the Italian Ambassador, Count Dino Grandi, leading the cheering at his end of the house.

Chamberlain Is Ready

The uniformed attendants who, under the rules and regulations, should have ejected the demonstrators, clapped a little themselves.

The prime minister interrupted the demonstration to say of Hitler:

"He has also invited Signor Mussolini has accepted the invitation solini has acceptde the invitation and I have no doubt that M. Daladier will also accept."

With a catch in his voice, Chamberlain murmured feelingly:

"I need hardly say what my answer will be."

Again there were demonstrations seldom if ever equaled in the staid House of Commons.

Gently, with an unpraised hand, Chamberlain stilled the hubbub and went on throatily:

"I am sure there could not be a member in this House who did not feel his heart leap when he heard that the crisis had been once more postponed.

"We have been given once more an opportunity of trying what reason, good will and discussion can do to settle this problem.

"It is for me now to go and see how I can make this last effort.

"I trust that we may meet again in happier circumstances."

After short speeches by the leaders of the Labor, Liberal and Communist parties, the Commons adjourned until Monday, when it will hear the result of the Hitler-Chamberlain-Mussolini-Daladier peace parley in Munich.

Toward the end of this remarkable speech, Chamberlain, although smiling with relief, had grown deathly white. He had difficulty in catching his breath and he leaned heavily on the dispatch box in front of him. His work done for the day, he slumped back on to the bench and tears of joy coursed down his cheeks.

Sir John Simon leaned over to sympathize and congratulate him and wound up by thumping his chief on the back. He, too, wept.

As members filed out of the Commons to spread the news, Chamberlain rested where he was. Lady Astor, Winston Churchill and scores of members went up to him and shook his hand. The harassed Prime Minister, who had been alternately a hero and a betrayer since he began his personal dealings with Hitler, was once more a hero and he beamed appreciation of the latest turn of events. One Laborite free-thinker observed that a miracle had come to pass.

"All Right This Time!"

The prime minister received another tremendous reception when he motored home to 10 Downing street with his wife, who had been a gallery listener at the Commons.

Waving his hat in response to cheers and handclaps, he cried out to the mob:

"It's all right this time!"

Queen Mother Mary was in tears as she left the private gallery from which she listened to the news.

Tragedy—the world's greatest tragedy, a major war—hung like a fog over the House of Commons when it convened at 2:45 o'clock.

Seldom, if ever, has the Commons been more crowded, more overexcited, more melancholy. Seldom has a prime minister had to undergo such an ordeal of self-justification on the eve of what everybody supposed would be war.

Britain's two living former premiers were in attendance. On the floor, at the head of the opposition bench, sat the ever-youthful David Lloyd George, with his devilish tongue and his faint halo of immaculately white hair. This was Britain's wartime leader who never misses a chance to accuse his successors of cowardice.

Upstairs, no longer allowed on the Commons' floor, sat the sleepy lion of yesteryear, Earl Baldwin, whose foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, had been dropped by Chamberlain—the same Chamberlain who had been discounted by Lloyd George as a "good Lord Mayor of Birmingham in a lean year."

A pale sun filtered through the stained glass windows on the M. P.'s, seated on their benches, seated on the floor behind the Speaker's chair and standing in the galleries.

The one speaker to whom all listened was a lean, erect, solemn figure. Chamberlain—his friends respectfully refer to him as "The Undertaker"—was wearing a black, formal coat, formal trousers of dark striped gray and a gates-ajar collar of vintage 1910.

Because of the importance of the occasion, Chamberlain spoke from carefully prepared notes. Now and then he wrung his thin hands with nervousness. Now and then his normally thin precise voice collapsed with emotion. His gestures were few. Three-quarters of the time he stood facing the opposition, with his back to his Conservative supporters. Occasionally he remembered his own men, removed his spectacles, swung sideways to let the Conservatives hear his words, swung back, replaced his spectacles and read on to the opposition.

"One of the particular difficulties in dealing with a totalitarian government is the lack of any means of establishing contact with the personalities in whose hands lie the final decisions," Chamberlain observed.

So Chamberlain went to see Hitler himself at Berchtesgaden and "very soon became aware that the situation was much more acute and much more urgent than I had realized."

At this meeting Hitler firmly demanded "self-determination" for the Sudetens and promised to give it to them even at the risk of another world war.

"Today we are faced with a situation which has had no parallel since 1914," said the prime minister.

Having exhausted the sad tale of Henlein and Benes and Runciman, Chamberlain at length got around to what the whole House was interested in—the secrets of his conversations with Hitler.

Chamberlain returned to London and persuaded the British and French governments to consent to the annexation of the Sudeten areas by Hitler. Czechoslovakia was forced to fall in line.

A week later Chamberlain flew back to Hitler and discovered sorrowfully that Hitler had raised his terms. Ironical laughter greeted Chamberlain's report that Hitler admitted he never expected Chamberlain to return a second time. For he never expected his self-determination arguments to be accepted in London, Paris and Prague.

"I don't want the honorable members to think that he was deliberately deceiving me," Chamberlain protested. "I don't think so for one minute."

Chamberlain told how he sent his letter across the Rhine asking Hitler to put his stiffer terms in writing for the sake of clarity. Hitler replied with a memorandum in which, for the first time, he set October 1 as the limit beyond which he would not wait to annex Sudetenland.

Chamberlain said he told Hitler the memorandum was an ultimatum, and "bitterly reproached" him for his failure to respond to Chamberlain's peace efforts.

There was more mocking laughter as Chamberlain said that despite his reproach his conversation with Hitler was cordial, except that Hitler did bring up the "awkward question of colonies." At the mention of Hitler's yearning to recover Germany's old colonies there was more sarcastic laughter. Chamberlain rebuked the scoffers, saying:

"This is no subject for idle laughter. It is our words which count at a moment like this, and they ought to be fully weighed."

Chamberlain proceeded to tell how Czechoslovakia, last Sunday, rejected Hitler's raised terms and how on Monday he sent Sir Horace Wilson to Hitler with the final plea and warning.

That also having failed, Chamberlain resorted to what he described as a "last, last" appeal to Hitler. Early this morning he sent the following personal message to Der Fuehrer:

"I feel certain that you can get all essentials without war and without delay. I am ready to come to Berlin myself at once to discuss with you arrangements for the transfer with you and representatives of the Czech government, together with representatives of France and Italy, if you desire.

"I feel convinced that we could reach agreement with you in a week. However much you distrust the Prague government's intentions, you cannot doubt the power of the French and British governments to see that the promises are carried out fully forthwith. As you know, I have stated publicly that we are preparing to see that they shall be carried out.

"I cannot believe that you will take the responsibility of starting a world war which may end civilization for the sake of a few days' delay in settling this long-standing problem."

At the same time Chamberlain sent the following personal message to Mussolini:

"I have today addressed a last appeal to Herr Hitler to refrain from force in settling the Sudeten problem which I feel sure can be settled in a short discussion.

"I have offered myself to go at once to Berlin to discuss arrangements with the German and Czech representatives and, if the chancellor desires, with representatives also of Italy and France.

"I trust your excellency will inform the German chancellor that you are willing to be represented and urge him to agree to our proposals which would keep our peoples out of war.

"I have already guaranteed that the Czech promises shall be carried out and feel confident that full agreement could be reached in a week."

The prime minister continued: "In reply to my message to Signor Mussolini, I was informed that instructions had been sent by the Duce to the Italian Ambassador in Berlin to see Herr von Ribbentrop at once and say that while Italy would fulfill completely her pledges to stand by Germany, in view of the great importance of my request, he (Mussolini) hoped Herr Hitler would see his way to postpone the action which the chancellor had told Sir Horace Wilson was to be taken at 2 o'clock today, for at least 24 hours, so as to allow Signor Mussolini time to re-examine the situation and endeavor to find a peaceful settlement.

"In response Herr Hitler has agreed to postpone mobilization for 24 hours."

With heartfelt thanks, Chamberlain said:

"Whatever views honorable members have had about Signor Mussolini in the past, I believe everyone will welcome his gesture in being willing to work with us for the prevention of war in Europe."

Incredulous whispering ran through the diplomats' gallery. Was the history of the World War being repeated? Italy about to slide away from its alliance with Germany, and enlist with the allies' forces? How much territory in Europe or Africa had been offered to Mussolini as the price of reason and allegiance?

Such cynical conjectures were shelved as the prime minister passed on to the most important announcement of all—that Hitler had backed down to the extent of inviting Chamberlain, Daladier and Mussolini to Munich, at 10 tomorrow, to decide the fate of Europe.

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Sept. 28.— French tension lessened tonight after the announcement of the holding of a four-power conference at Munich tomorrow, to settle the Sudeten German problem.

Twenty-four hours ago war seemed inevitable—an impression created alike by the melancholy tone of resignation in Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech and the warlike preparations in Berlin.

Although warned by the experience of the Godesberg conference against basing excessive optimism on the unexpected new developments, the tension, nevertheless, is less in Paris now than it has been for a week.

More Reserves Called

While a feeling of hope surges through the country, France is remaining vigilant and taking precautions to meet all eventualities.

The minister of national defense called up still another category of reservists—this time the men listed as "Number Eight."

The invitation to attend the Munich gathering was extended by Reichsfuehrer Hitler to Premier Daladier through the French Ambassador in Berlin, Andre Francois-Poncet, this morning, and was immediately accepted. Daladier will fly to Munich tomorrow, leaving here at 8:20 a. m.

The French premier was to have delivered an important radio speech tonight, on the developments of the international crisis. But in view of the impending Munich conference, he delivered only a short address.

Gives Thanks to Nation

"You will understand that on the eve of a negotiation so important, it is my duty to defer explanations which I would have liked to give," said Daladier, "but before my departure I want to address to the people of France my thanks for their attitude of courage and dignity. I specially want to thank the French who have been called to the colors."

This morning Premier Daladier received a group of the Nationalist minority, which demanded the French government should decree no general mobilization, nor take any other measure rendering war inevitable, without first having called Parliament and obtained the consent of the nation's legislators. Later the Rightists called on President Lebrun, and put their views before him.

Daladier declined to give the Nationalists the assurnaces they asked, saying the decision to order a general mobilization was a government prerogative which he didn't intend to abdicate.

Pact With Duce Sought

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Sept. 28.—Persons close to the foreign ministry indicated tonight Premier Daladier would undertake not only to settle the German-Czechoslovak conflict at Munich tomorrow, but also to improve France's strained relations with Italy as a step toward the long-sought "lasting peace."

There was possibility, according to diplomatic circles, that the Munich conference might debate a new British-French plan for settlement of the Sudetenland crisis providing for "symbolic" occupation by Germany before Saturday of the undisputedly Germanic sections, but with an international commission guaranteeing Czechoslovakia's frontiers pending adjustment of other areas.

While the major moves behind the scenes leading to calling of the Munich conference remained official secrets, diplomatic sources reconstructed events in this way:

Ludovic Frossard, a Leftist member of the Chamber of Deputies who had been minister of public works until his resignation in a labor dispute a few weeks ago, submitted a plan for solution of the Czechoslovak crisis to Daladier.

Daladier sent the plan to Hitler through French Ambassador Andre and also to Prime Minister Chamberlain, who ordered the British Ambassador in Berlin to support it.

The plan was sent also, through the Earl of Perth, British Ambassador to Italy, to Mussolini, who later communicated with Hitler.

The plan provided:

Leaders of the four nations to meet as soon as possible for mediation efforts and a supreme effort to save world peace.

The German army to be given symbolic occupation of Sudetenland by being permitted to march into districts the Germanic character of which is uncontested, either on or before Saturday, to satisfy Hitler's demands.

Members of the British Legion of World War Veterans, who already had offered their services, to form a guard between Czechoslovakia proper and the German-occupied regions; and a plebiscite to be held or agreements made between Prague and Berlin to decide disposition of other disputed areas.

Firing Cuts Border Road; Sudetens Advance Into Towns

But Fighting Dies Down on Most of Frontier
Czech Army Retires to Strategic Lines
Awaits Invasion by German Regulars

By the Associated Press.

Schirnding, Germany (At the Czechoslovak Frontier), Sept. 28.—Heavy exchanges of shots between Sudeten Germans and Czechoslovak troops took place today before the Czech first line of defense 3 miles west of Eger.

Their cross-fire closed the Eger-Schirnding road and cut off even pedestrian traffic over the frontier in this region.

Transportation service over the entire German-Czechoslovak frontier already had been suspended as a result of the Czechoslovak general mobilization last week.

As Czech troops fell back at a number of points to more strategic positions to be ready if the German army should attack, Sudeten forces moved up, occupying additional hamlets. The Sudetens also began setting up provisional civil government in the strip they have occupied along the frontier.

They established their own frontier service in the customs house at Muhlbach, abandoned by the Czechs last week after it had been attacked.

German army forces were refraining from setting foot on Czechoslovak soil, but the Sudetens moved freely across the border.

Fighting was generally diminishing.

Inside the Czech lines the backbone of Sudeten resistance had been broken, at least temporarily, by the general mobilization which took all men up to the age of 40 into the army.

German newspapers reported that 40,000 Sudeten deserters from the Czechoslovak army have entered Germany. The Czechs say at least 25,000 Sudetens have been armed in Germany and are making night raids over the border.

Negotiations are under way between German and Czechoslovak officials at Eger for another exchange of Sudeten and Czech prisoners. The Czechs insist, however, that all the gendarmes seized by the Sudetens be liberated before they release several hundred Sudetens being held at Eger.

Several Americans, still stranded in Czechoslovakia, were reported waiting at Eger for a refugee train.

Peace Is About To Break Out, Berliners Say

Public Sighs Its Relief
'God Be Thanked!'
'Hitler's Nerves Best'

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Sept. 28.—There was a mischievous twinkle in the man's eye. "I hear," he remarked with Germanic drollery, "that peace is breaking out October 1."

That was a light-hearted sample of the German public's relief tonight over the brightest in weeks—tomorrow's unprecedented meeting of the No. 1 men of four leading European powers, authoritarians Hitler and Mussolini and democrats Chamberlain and Daladier.

"That means peace!" was the almost unanimous exclamation.

It was the reaction of these men-on-the-street: A clerk, a barber, a housewife, a shopgirl, a truck driver, a fruit stand proprietor, an editor and the man behind the counter of the corner cigar store.

That is to say, it was their reaction once they were convinced of the truth—that the Fuehrer and the others actually were going to Munich to talk peace.

"We've heard so many reports," they said at first, then hopefully, "You're not joking?"

Convinced of the actuality, one murmured, "Gott sei dank! (thank the Lord). There's hope now. After all, why should ten million people have to lose their lives over an affair concerning only three and a half millions?"

To a question as to whether they saw hope in the Munich conference for a favorable settlement of the Sudetenland issue with Czechoslovakia, the answer was almost unanimous.

"Allerhand," they said, meaning, "You said a mouthful."

Tension has been so great in recent weeks with the population wound up by oratory and press reports concerning the "plight" of the Sudeten Germans that announcement of this new chance for peace released a flood of emotion.

The editor commented: "It was just a question of nerves and Hitler had the best nerves of all."

The housewife, who said she had a son in the army along the Silesian border: "I feel sure that Der Fuehrer realized that all his plans, all he has built up so far, would tumble if Germany should go to war. No one wins, everyone loses through war."

Reich Liners Called Home In War Threat

Europa Turns Back
Sailing Is Canceled
Another Leaves N. Y.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 27.—Germany's mighty merchant fleet, built up to high rank again after near dissolution in the World War, steamed swiftly toward home ports tonight under orders apparently designed as precautionary steps in the Czechoslovak crisis.

There was no official explanation of the orders at offices of German lines here, but it was evident the cancelation of at least one voyage, the recall of two liners outward bounds from Bremen, and the sudden sailings of others from New York without passengers resulted from Germany's desire to remove its ships from foreign waters in case of war.

The Hamburg-American liner Hamburg's voyage from her home port tomorrow was canceled and the North German Lloyd liners, Europa and Berlin, which sailed from Bremen yesterday and Saturday, respectively, were recalled. The Hamburg-American's Hansa, which was scheduled to leave New York tonight with 350 passengers, pulled out suddenly this morning with none aboard. The same line's St. Louis, which arrived here today, was ordered to unload and sail for home as quickly as possible. It was to have remained until Friday.

The Red Star liner Westernland, ordered to depart without passengers or cargo for the Azores pending further instructions, was held in Hoboken, N. J., by a Federal court order issued on the complaint of New York bankers, who charged default of a mortgage.

Southampton, England, Sept. 28 (AP).—The recall of the North German Lloyd liner Europa to Germany just before her scheduled departure stranded 400 passengers here today, most of them Americans.

The Europa's passengers made unsuccessful efforts to book passage on the Queen Mary which sailed this afternoon with 2,200 persons aboard, biggest list in her history.

Ships of the Hamburg-American Line due here from New York tomorrow were ordered to proceed directly to Germany and omit their Southampton call.

'I'll End It Now,' Hitler Told Premier

Letters Are Published 'Unbearable,' He Said Held Prague Insincere

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 28.—A declaration by Reichsfuehrer to Prime Minister Chamberlain that the Czechoslovak situation had become unbearable "and will now be terminated by me" was disclosed today with publication of correspondence between Chamberlain and Hitler.

The British government issued a "white paper" disclosing the documents exchanged between the fuehrer and the prime minister in their recent negotiations on Europe's crisis.

In his first letter to Hitler, written at Godesberg last Friday, Chamberlain said he was ready to put up to the Czechoslovak government Hitler's proposal as to the areas to be ceded to the Reich so that Prague might examine the suggested provisional boundary.

Wrote Chamberlain:

"The difficulty I see about the proposal you put to me yesterday arises from the suggestion that the areas should in the immediate futures be occupied by German troops.

"I recognize the difficulty of conducting a lengthy investigation under the existing conditions and doubtless the plan you propose would, if it were aceptable, provide an immediate easing of the tension.

"I do not think you have realized the impossibility of my agreeing to put forward any plan unless I have reason to suppose it will be considered by public opinion in my country, in France and, indeed, in the world generally, as carrying out the principles already agreed upon in an ordinary fashion and free from the threat of force."

"Unbearable," Says Hitler

To this memorandum, Hitler replied:

"I have recognized gratefully that at last, after 20 years, the British government, represented by your excellency, has now decided for its part also to undertake steps to put an end to a situation which, from day to day and, indeed, from hour to hour, is becoming more unbearable.

"If formerly the behavior of the Czechoslovak government was brutal, it could only be described during recent weeks and days as madness.

"In a few weeks, the number of refugees who have been driven out has risen to over 120,000. The situation as stated above is unbearable and now will be terminated by me.

"I can only emphasize to your excellency that the Sudeten Germans are not coming back to the German Reich by virtue of the gracious or benevolent sympathy of the other nations, but on the grounds of their own will, based on the right of the self-determination of nations and of the irrevocable decision of the German Reich to give effect to this will.

"I am not prepared to allow a territory which must be considered as belonging to Germany to be left without the protection of the Reich.

"There is no international power or agreement which would have the right to take precedent over German right.

"The idea of being able to entrust to the Sudeten Germans alone the maintenance of order is practically impossible in consequence of the obstacles put in the way of their political organization, particularly in recent times.

"It is impossible for us to refrain from giving immediate protection to this territory."

In a second letter, sent last Friday, Chamberlain asked Hitler that "No action should be taken, particularly in the Sudeten territory, by the forces of the Reich to prejudice any further mediation which may be found possible."

The final message sent by Chamberlain to Hitler Monday stated:

"A settlement by negotiation remains possible and, with a clear recollection of the conversations which you and I have had and with an equally clear appreciation of the consequences which must follow the abandonment of negotiation and the substitution of force, I ask your excellency to agree that representatives of Germany shall meet representatives of the Czechoslovak government to discuss immediately the situation by which we are confronted with a view to settling by agreement the way in which the territory is to be handed over.

"I am convinced that these negotiations can be completed in a very short time and if you and the Czechoslovak government desire it I am willing to arrange for representation of the British government at such discussions."

Hitler replied that immediate occupation of Sudeten areas by German contingents was no more than a security measure to guarantee quick, smooth achievement of a final settlement which was indispensable.

He declared the Czechoslovak government would be in a position to drag out negotiations and delay final settlement.

Hitler said "you will understand after everything that has passed that I cannot place such confidence in assurances received from the Prague government.

"The British government also would surely not be in a position to dispose of this danger by any use of diplomatic pressure.

"It is clear from my memorandum that German occupation would only extend to the given line and that final delimitation of the frontier would take place in accordance with the procedure which I have already described. The Prague government has not the right to doubt that German military measures would stop within these limits. If, nevertheless, it desires such a doubt to be taken into account, the British, and if necessary also the French government, can guarantee the quick fulfillment of my proposal.

"In these circumstances I must assume that the government in Prague is only using a proposal for occupation of German troops, in order that by distorting the meaning and object of my proposal to mobilize those forces in other countries, in particular in England and France, from which they hope to receive unreserved support for their own aim and thus achieve the possibility of a general warlike conflagration.

"I must leave it to your judgment whether, in view of these facts, you consider you should continue your effort, for which I should like to take this opportunity of once more sincerely thanking you, to spoil such maneuvers and bring the government in Prague to reason at the very last hour."

Glad, Anxious, White House Awaits Peace Talk Results

Roosevelt

world peace, was fondly envisioned by some as a possible offshoot of the Munich parley.

Stress was placed on the phrase in President Roosevelt's cablegram to Hitler in which the President declared that this country would assume no obligations in the "present" negotiations, but added:

"Yet in our own right we recognize our responsibilities as a part of a world of neighbors."

Gratified, Relieved

Official Washington's extreme tension snapped almost audibly as word came of Hitler's invitation to Great Britain, France and Italy to participate in continuing negotiations today in Munich.

Relief was expressed in the White House and the State Department, nerve centers of the delicate but sure maneuvers by which the President and Secretary of State Cordell Hull sought to outline a pathway to peace without involving this country in even the slightest commitments.

White House Press Secretary Stephen T. Early revealed that the President's decision to appeal a second time to Hitler for a continuance of negotiations was made when reports came that the Nazis planned to strike at 2 p. m. yesterday (8 a. m. Eastern standard time.)

Early told reporters that the President decided to send the message at once so it would be in Hitler's hand "before any troop movement took place and before any boundaries were crossed."

He said that 1914 had proved definitely that once troops were on the march they could not be stopped.

Baruch for Dinner

At 4 p. m. the President told Secretary Hull and Undersecretary of State Welles to return at 6 p. m. The latter two stayed two hours exactly, departing as Bernard Baruch, Wall Street expert and head of President Wilson's War Industries Board, entered for dinner.

Newsmen were warned to be on hand at the State Department at 10 p. m. By 9:45 p. m. the office of the director of the Current Information Division was jammed with newsreel and newspaper camermen, radio broadcasters and their equipment, and more than a score of reporters. Shortly after 10 p. m., as notice was flashed downstairs that the cablegram was now on its way to Berlin, the dynamic, white-haired director, Michael McDermott, began reading the message aloud to the correspondents, after a consultation with Early. The room was locked to prevent premature release of the message until its context had been examined, but by 10:30 the throng, perspiring under the photographers' huge stand-lamps, jammed through the doors and raced for the telephones.

Yesterday Early confirmed the indication carried in The Washington Post that the cable was probably the President's final word in the present crisis.

The White House announced at noon that the President had sent a personal message to Premier Mussolini of Italy "in the interest of preserving world peace." This message, Early said, had also been sent out the day before, but its contents were not revealed because of the message's personal nature.

A summary from Rome said last night that in the message "the President of the United States, after having recalled efforts exerted by him to assure a peaceful solution of the German-Czechoslovak conflict and after having emphasized the tragic consequences that a European war would have for everyone, asked Il Duce to lend his aid to settle the controversy by negotiation or other peaceful means and without recourse to force.

"Il Duce took note of the message and asked the Ambassador of the United States to convey to President Roosevelt his thanks and appreciation for the gesture he had made."

Mr. Roosevelt also directed an appeal to the Japanese government in Tokyo, asking that section of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo alignment to persuade Hitler against war. Secretary Hull stated later that this note was a further part of this Government's policy of promoting the settlement of international disputes by peaceful means.

At Tokyo, after United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew had asked for the transmission of a Japanese peace appeal to Hitler and President Benes of Czechoslovakia, a foreign office spokesman expressed himself "in favor of the sincere desire on the part of the American President"

The Czech Legation here was gloomy in contrast to its near-gayety of the night before. When war appeared imminent, and when it appeared that the rest of Europe would fight Hitler over an invasion of Czechoslovakia, the diplomats were cheerfully resigned, speaking broadly, to the death struggle for the nation's independence, believing that the menace of Hitler would be thenceforward removed. But yesterday's switch toward peaceful settlement, with all parties but the nonparticipating Czechs in agreement on a quiet partitioning of the country, apparently distressed Czech officers here.

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, recently returned from a European visit, was a White House caller yesterday. He told reporters that war in Europe is inevitable unless there is a drastic readjustment of continental economics in which the "have not" countries gain access to natural resources.

The omission of Czechoslovakia and Soviet Russia from the Munich conference was deplored in a telegram to President Roosevelt from the American League for Peace and Democracy which held that a conference without their participation offered "no possibility for reaching a peaceful solution since they can speak only as the wolf who promises to guard the sheep.

"The American League for Peace and Democracy," it said, "supports your Tuesday night statement and welcomes both your placing the responsibility for war on Adolf Hitler and your recognition, by issuing the statement, of the need for concerted action for peace. The American League urges that you continue the peace efforts of our Government by immediately requesting that Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union be included in that conference."

A 'New Spirit' Toward Peace

Even as Europe hovers on the brink of war, a new spirit has been let loose in the world with an answer for lasting peace, John Ramsay, president of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, a C. I. O. affiliate, said yesterday in New York, on his return from the Oxford Group World Congress for Moral Rearmament at Interlaken, Switzerland.

At the same time, Edwin N. Lewis, executive secretary of Washington Cathedral, received a cable from 16 British union leaders who attended the congress declaring that labor in all countries can play a decisive part in reconciling nations, "if true to their traditions of placing human and spiritual values before material things." Among the signers were Herbert Elvin, chairman, and Allen Findlay, president of the British Trades Union Congress.

"The biggest problem that I see facing America today," said Ramsay, "is not factionalism but fear—fear of economic insecurity. I have found that fear is not only labor's problem but management's as well—fear of losing a job, of losing business, of outside control. No one is free from it, no one group has a monoply on it."

Gen. J.P. Tracy, Adm. Brumby To Retire Soon

Soldier Is D. C. Native
Both Served Here
Swanson Pays Tribute

The approaching retirement of two members of the national defense high command was announced yesterday.

Brig. Gen. Joseph P. Tracy, a native of Washington, and Rear Admiral Frank M. Brumby, commandant of the Fifth Naval District and Naval Operating Base, Norfolk, both will leave active service next month upon reaching the statutory retirement age.

Regret that the two officers are about to retire was expressed by both Army and Navy officials.

Secretary Swanson wrote Admiral Brumby that "the department . . . takes this occasion to extend to you its heartiest congratulations and appreciation for your long and distinguished service to our Nation. During the time which you have so faithfully and efficiently served, you have the satisfaction of knowing that you have contributed to the accomplishment of these results."

Gen. Tracy graduated from West Point shortly before the Spanish-American War and during the conflict served in Cuba. He was on duty in the Philippines at the time of the insurrection there.

Before the World War he served here as assistant to the chief of artillery as a member of the General Staff and as an attache of the office of the adjutant general.

A graduate of the Army War College, Gen. Tracy was its assistant commandant in 1930. He also has been commandant of the Coast Artillery School, Fort Monroe, Va. Since 1936 he has been in command of the Ninth Coast Artillery District, San Francisco.

Admiral Brumby, former commander of the battle force of the fleet, will be succeeded by Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, commander of cruisers, scouting force.

During the Spanish-American War Admiral Brumby served aboard the battleship New York, flagship of Rear Admiral William T. Sampson. In 1917 he was in command of the cruiser Cincinnati, and the following year was ordered to duty at the Norfolk navy yard.

After commanding the battleship Kansas, he came to Washington in 1921 to be captain of the Navy Yard here.

Admiral Brumby attended the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., from 1926 until 1927, and after a short tour of sea duty returned to the Capital as president of the board of inspection and survey for the Navy Department.

A native of Athens, Ga., he graduated from the Naval Academy with the class of 1895.

Retired From Service

Brig. Gen. Joseph P. Tracy, U. S. A.

Rear Adm. Frank M. Brumby, U. S. N.

He was born in Harrisonburg October 2, 1887, and was graduated in law from Washington and Lee University. In 1917 he attended the officers training school at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ky., and served throughout the war as a first lieutenant. After the war he practiced law in Hazard, Ky.

Mr. Saufley was a member of the American Legion, the Shrine and the Kinghts Templar. He was a deacon in the Presbyterian Church of Hazard.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Jane Carter Saufley; a daughter, Miss Elizabeth Jane Saufley; a brother, Hunter H. Sauey, of Harrisonburg, and two sisters, Mrs. Fred Whitesell, of Richmond, and Mrs. Clyde Friddle, of Moorefield, W. Va.

N.Y. Democrats Urge 4th Term On Lehman

Farley Holds Talks
Governor Undecided
G.O.P. Set for Dewey

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Three-time Gov. Herbert H. Lehman held the key tonight to New York's Democratic gubernatorial situation as party leaders put before him a "unanimous" appeal to be a candidate for a fourth term.

Sentiment for a draft of the banker-Governor, who expressed a preference to campaign for the "short-term" United States Senate seat of the late Royal S. Copeland, swelled hourly as delegates gathered for the party's State convention, opening tomorrow.

Incoming party chieftians agreed in day-long conferences with national and State Democratic Chairman James A. Farley that "Lehman would say only that the state eventually named "will be one that will appeal to all voters."

At the same time is was authoritatively indicated that President Roosevelt would not make a direct appeal to the Governor to make the gubernatorial race.

Pending Gov. Lehman's decision as to whether he would campaign for the State's first four-year governorship, efforts to draft Senator Wagner as an alternative gubernatorial candidate temporarily subsided.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Sept. 28 (U.P.).—The New Deal was assailed by speeches today at the Republican State Convention while delegates prepared to nominate District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, for Governor by acclamation tomorrow.

The rest of the tentative ticket was dislocated when Mayor Rolland Marvin, of Syracuse, notified the executive committee that he would not accept the nomination for the United States Senate.

Representative Barton, of New York, brought the European crisis into the convention when he declared in his keynote address that the election of every additional Republican would mean another vote "against hasty action which might lead the country into war."

He told a wildly cheering audience that the Republican Party would seek co-operation among labor, agriculture and industry, removal of restrictions on business, particularly utilities; elimination of fear of Government competition and reorganization of the railroads, if elected to power nationally.

Comdr. Langsford Dies at Bremerton

Lieut. Comdr. Rufus Burleson Langsford, 54, Supply Corps, U. S. N., died at his home in Bremerton, Wash., on Tuesday.

A native of Texas, Comdr. Langsford enlisted in the Navy in 1903 and was commissioned ensign during the World War.

He was on duty at the Navy helium production plant, Forth Worth, Tex., from 1919 until 1921, and then served as assistant to the supply officer of the battleship Arizona.

Comdr. Langsford, who recently was detached from duty as disbursing officer at Puget Sound (Wash.) navy yard, leaves his wife, Mrs. Annie M. Langsford, of Bremerton.

Labor Board Seeks to Rule U. S. Banks

Forcing Court Fight
Constitutional Question
Commerce Clause Basis

By Felix Cotten.

The National Labor Relations Board has undertaken to apply to banks the regulatory powers granted the Federal Government by the commerce clause of the Constitution, it was disclosed yesterday.

This move, if approved by the course, will blaze a constitutional trail for legislation bringing State as well as national banks under a unified system of Government regulation.

The board, it was learned, has initiated disciplinary proceedings against Giannini-controlled Bank of America National Trust & Savings Co., San Francisco and Los Angeles, for discharging a lawyer who had engaged in union activity.

Holds Bank in Commerce

In assuming jurisdiction, officials explained, the board implied that the Bank of America either was engaged in interstate commerce or affected interstate commerce through its transactions. In consequence, a labor disturbance in the bank would affect interstate commerce.

Towne Nylander, board trial examiner and regional director for the California area, recommended that the board order the bank to reinstate Edward C. Washer, the discharged attorney, pay him for the time he had been out of work, and post at all offices copies of the order together with a statement that it would be complied with.

Attorneys for the bank have filed exceptions to the trial examiner's recommendations and have asked that a date be set aside for oral arguments before the board.

Won't Allow Dismissal

At a hearing before Nylander in Los Angeles, attorneys served notice that, if necessary, they would take the case to the Supreme Court. Nylander denied motions to dismiss on the ground that the bank was not engaged in interstate commerce and that it was a Government instrumentality and therefore exempt under provisions of the labor relations act.

Opinion prevails that the board will uphold the trial examiner, thus heading the case for the Supreme Court and a clear-cut ruling, barring the usual legal mishaps, on whether banks are enterprises engaged in or affecting interstate commerce and thus subject to Government regulation under that power.

Nylander attempted to clinch the board's contention that Bank of America was engaged in and exerted substantial influence on interstate commerce. Check and other transactions by the bank, balances maintained with other banks and by other banks with it, were cited to substantiate the argument in his report.

Does Trade in Credit

"As the railroad or the steamship serves to move the physical goods from one place to another," Nylander declared, "the commercial bank, through its correspondents in the various cities of the United States, serves as a medium for moving the credit—in the form of actual checks or drafts or in the form of a charge against its own funds kept on deposit in such other city—which effects payment for merchandise."

Officials pointed out that the board held that the Bank of America was subject to regulation under the constitutional power to regulate enterprises engaged in or affecting interstate commerce. This would mean, they said, that larger banks would be regarded by the board as in this category.

How far the board will attempt to go in regulating smaller banks, they explained, will be a matter for later decision. Some, however, believed the board would have a "fighting chance" before the courts to blanket all banks under its regulatory authority.

1000 MEN AGREE
—their average opinion rates Old Quaker, now 3 years old, worth $1.00 more* a quart than its actual retail price

One thousand men—from twenty-two states—were asked to try 3-year Old Quaker and rate its worth. Their answers will cause the biggest surprise of the month in the whiskey business—will astonish whiskey experts—bring joy to whiskey buyers.

For the average opinion of these 1,000 men rated 3-year Old Quaker worth $1.39 more a quart than its actual selling price. And they smelled Old Quaker—tasted it—took a drink of it—without knowing its name, age or price.

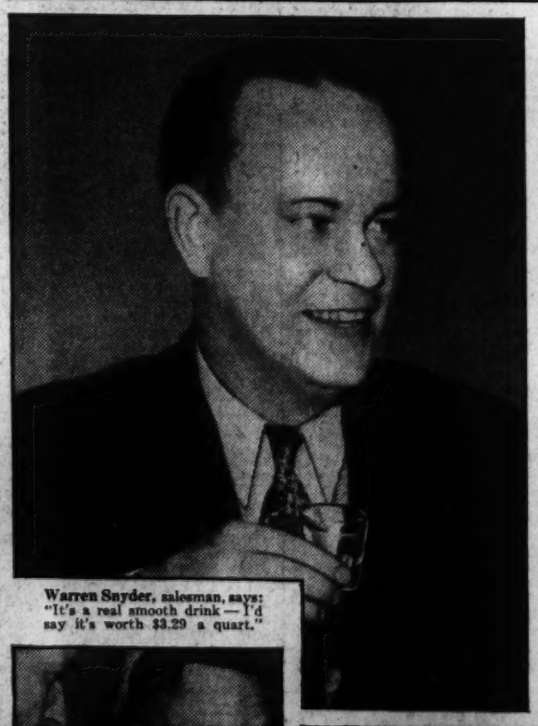
We make the claim: Old Quaker at 3 years has reached its Golden Age. Mature on every count—due to our special methods—which include ageing under scientifically controlled summer temperature and checking 51 times from grain to glass. For the straight enjoyment you get from Old Quaker, we believe you would gladly pay more than the unusually low price asked for this 3-year-old whiskey.

We Invite You To Try It

If what 1,000 men have said is true, we predict every man who loves good whiskey will want to try Old Quaker—3 years old. For in these men's opinions it offers you a clear-cut saving of at least a dollar a quart.

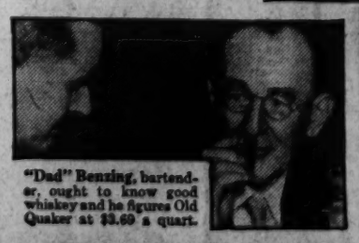
Try it today and see if you agree—then we'll be grateful to hear your frank opinion.

*Average price exactly $1.39 more a quart.

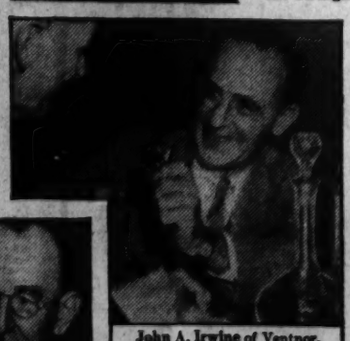


Warren Snyder, salesman, says: "It's a real smooth drink—I'd say it's worth $3.29 a quart."

F. R. Marsh, salesman, thinks 3-year Old Quaker is priced $1.30 a quart below its true worth.



"Dad" Benzing, bartender, ought to know good whiskey and he figures Old Quaker at $3.69 a quart.



John A. Irwine of Ventnor, N. J., has tasted his drink of Old Quaker. Inquiring Reporter Anderson records his answer at close to "$4.00 a quart".

Chamberlain Tells How He Steered Perilous Course Along Brink of War

He was largely instrumental in inducing Dr. Benes, president of Czechoslovakia, to new proposals on the Twenty-first of August which appear to have been regarded by Sudeten Party leaders as a suitable basis for the continuance of negotiations. Prospects for the negotiations being carried to a successful conclusion were, however, handicapped by a recurrence of incidents in Czechoslovakia involving casualties both on the Czech and Sudeten German sides.

Says Henlein Convinced Hitler Wanted Peace

On the first or second of September, Herr Henlein went to Berchtesgaden to consult Herr Hitler on the situation. He was the bearer of a message from Lord Runciman to Herr Hitler expressing the hope that he would give his approval and support to the continuance of negotiations going on in Prague. No direct reply was communicated to Lord Runciman by Herr Henlein, but the latter returned convinced of Herr Hitler's desire for a peaceful solution.

It was after he returned that the Sudeten Germans' leaders insisted on the complete satisfaction of the eight Carlsbad points in any solution that might be reached.

The House will see that during August, Lord Runciman's efforts had been directed with a considerable degree of success toward bringing the Sudetens and Czechoslovakians closer together. In the meantime, however, developments in Germany itself had been causing considerable anxiety to His Majesty's government.

On July 28, the Secretary for Foreign Affairs had written a personal letter to the German Minister for Foreign Affairs, Herr von Ribbentrop, expressing his regret the latter's statement to Sir Nevile Henderson, our Ambassador in Berlin, that the German government must reserve its attitude toward Lord Runciman's mission, regarding the matter as one of purely British concern.

The secretary of state had expressed the hope the German government would collaborate with His Majesty's government in facilitating a peaceful solution of the Sudeten question and so prepare the way to establishing relations on a basis of mutual confidence and co-operation. Early in August we received reports of military preparations in Germany on an extensive scale.

They included the calling up of reservists, service for the second-year of recruits beyond the beginning of October when they would ordinarily have been released, the conscription of labor for the completion of German fortifications on her western frontiers, and measures which empowered the military authorities to conscript civilian goods and services.

These measures, which involved a widespread dislocation of civilian life, could not fail to be regarded abroad as equivalent to partial mobilization and they suggested the German government was determined to find a settlement of the Sudeten question by autumn.

Warned Reich Attitude Threatening

In these circumstances, His Majesty's Ambassador to Berlin was instructed by the middle of August to point out to the German government that these abnormal measures could not fail to be interpreted abroad as a threatening gesture toward Czechoslovakia. They must therefore increase the feeling of tension throughout Europe and they might compel the Czechoslovak government to take precautionary measures on their side.

An almost certain consequence would be to destroy all chance of successful mediation by Lord Runciman's mission, perhaps endanger the peace of every one of the great powers of Europe.

This, the Ambassador said, might also destroy the prospects for the resumption of the Anglo-German conversations. In these circumstances it was hoped that the German government might be able to modify their military measures in order to avoid these dangers.

To these representations, Herr von Ribbentrop replied in a letter in which he refused to discuss military measures and referred to the expressed opinion that the British efforts in Prague had only served to increase Czech intransigeance.

In the face of this attitude, His Majesty's government, through the chancellor of the exchequer, who happened to be speaking at Lanark August 22, drew attention again to some words I had used March 24 on this subject when he declared there was nothing he had to add or vary in the statement which I had made.

(Chamberlain then quoted part of his statement of March 24.)

Toward the end of August, however, events occurred which marked the increasing seriousness of the situation. The French government, in consequence of information which had reached them about the moving of several German divisions toward their frontier, took certain precautionary measures including the calling up of reserves to man the Maginot Line.

On the twenty-eighth of August, Sir Nevile Henderson had been recalled to London for consultations and a meeting of ministers held August 30 to consider his report on the general situation.

On August 31 he returned to Berlin and gave Herr von Kreitzer, the state secretary, a strong personal warning regarding the probable attitude of His Majesty's government in the event of German aggression against Czechoslovakia, particularly if France were compelled to intervene. On September 1 our Ambassador saw Herr von Ribbentrop and repeated to him as a personal, but most urgent message, the warning he had already given the previous day to the state secretary.

His Majesty's government desired to impress the seriousness of the situation upon the German government without the risk of further aggravating the situation by any formal representations which might have been interpreted by the German government as a public rebuff, as had been the case in regard to our representations of May 21.

His Majesty's government had also to bear in mind the approach of the Nazi Party congress. It was to be anticipated that the chancellor would not fail to make some public statement and, therefore, it appeared necessary, in addition to warning the German government of the attitude of His Majesty's government in the United Kingdom, to make every effort in Prague to secure the resumption of negotiations between the Czechoslovak government and the Sudeten representatives on a basis which would offer a rapid and satisfactory settlement.

Accordingly, his majesty's minister in Prague saw Dr. Benes and emphasized to him that it was vital in the interests of Czechoslovakia to offer immediately and without reservation those concessions without which the Sudeten question could not be considered settled. His Majesty's government were not in a position to say whether anything less than the full program would suffice.

In Lord Runciman's opinion, what was known as the fourth plan embodied almost all the requirements of the eight Carlsbad points and formed a basis for negotiations.

The publication of the fourth plan, unfortunately, was followed by the serious incident at Moravska Ostrava.

It would appear from investigation of the British observer that the importance of this incident was very much exaggerated.

The immediate result was a decision on the part of the Sudeten leader not to resume negotiations until the incident had been liquidated.

Immediately measures were taken by the Czechoslovak government to liquidate it. Further incidents took place September 11 near Eger, and in spite of Lord Runciman's efforts to bring both parties together, negotiations could not be resumed.

In view of the unsatisfactory development of the situation in Czechoslovakia, His Majesty's government made further efforts to exercise a restraining influence upon the German government.

The French government had shown itself particularly insistent that nothing should be left undone to make the attitude of His Majesty's government clear to the chancellor himself.

Sir Nevile Henderson was at Nuremberg September 9 and 12 and took every opportunity to impress upon the leading German personalities the attitude of His Majesty's government as set forth in my speech of March 24 and repeated by Sir John Simon August 27.

Franco-British Tie Stressed

It was decided to make personal representations to the chancellor himself. The French government were informed of the warning which had been conveyed by Sir Nevile Henderson at Nuremberg.

On September 9 the cabinet met to consider the situation and decided to take certain precautionary naval measures including the commissioning of mine layers and mine sweepers, and on September 11 I made a statement to the press which received widespread publicity, stressing in particular the close tie uniting Great Britain and France in the probability in certain eventualities of this country going to the assistance of France.

On the morning of September 12 the cabinet met again. They decided no further action could usefully be taken before Herr Hitler's speech at Nuremberg that evening. In that speech, Herr Hitler laid great stress on the defensive military measures taken on the German western frontier. In his references to Czechoslovakia, he reminded the world that on February 22 he had said the Reich would no longer tolerate further oppression and persecution of the Sudeten Germans.

"They demanded the right of self-determination," he said, "and were supported in their demand by the Reich."

Therefore, for the first time, this speech promised the support of the Reich to the Sudeten Germans if they could not obtain satisfaction themselves, and for the first time it publicly raised the issue of self-determination.

It did not, however, close the door on further negotiations in Prague nor demand a plebiscite. The speech also was accompanied by specific references to Germany's frontiers with Poland and France and the general effect was to leave the situation unchanged with a slight diminution of tension.

The speech, however, and in particular Herr Hitler's references to support for the cause of the Sudeten Germans, had an immediate and unfortunate effect among these people. Demonstrations took place throughout Sudetenland, resulting in an immediate extension of the incidents which had already begun September 11.

Serious rioting occurred, accompanied by attacks upon Czech police and officials, and by September 14, according to official Czechoslovakian figures, there had been 21 killed and 75 wounded, the majority of whom were Czechs.

An attempt made by Lord Runciman to bring the Sudeten leaders into a discussion with the Czechoslovakian cabinet failed. On September 14, Herr Henlein issued a statement that the Carlsbad points no longer were enough and that the situation called for self-determination. Thereupon, Herr Henlein fled to Germany, where it is understood he has since occupied himself with the formation of a Sudeten legionary organization reported to number 40,000 men.

In these circumstances, Lord Runciman felt no useful purpose could be served by his publishing a plan of his own.

The house will recall that by the evening of September 14, a highly critical situation had developed in which there was an immediate danger of German troops, now concentrated on the frontier, entering Czechoslovakia to prevent further incidents occurring in Sudetenland or fighting between Czech forces and Sudeten Germans, although reliable reports indicated order had been completely restored in those districts by September 14.

On the other hand the Czechoslovakian government might have felt compelled to mobilize at once and so risk provoking a German invasion. In any event, a German invasion might be expected to bring into operation the French obligation to come to the assistance of Czechoslovakia and so lead to a European war in which this country might well have been involved in support of France.

In these circumstances, I decided the time had come to put into operation a plan which I had had in mind for a considerable period as a last resort.

One of the principal difficulties in dealing with a totalitarian government is the lack of any means of establishing contact with the personalities in whose hands lie the final decision.

I, therefore, resolved to go to Germany myself and interview Herr Hitler and find out in a personal conversation whether there was any hope yet of saving peace.

I knew very well that in taking such an unprecedented course I was laying myself open to criticism on the ground that I was detracting from the dignity of the British prime minister and to disappointment, even to resentment, if I failed to bring back a satisfactory agreement.

First Talk Emphasized Acute Situation

I felt that in such a crisis where the issues at stake were so vital for a million human beings, considerations of that kind could not be allowed to prevail. Herr Hitler responded to my suggestion with cordiality and on September 15 I made my first flight to Munich, and from there I traveled by train to Herr Hitler's mountain home at Berchtesgaden.

I confessed I was astonished at the warmth of approval with which this adventure was everywhere received, but the relief which it brought for the moment was indication of the gravity with which the situation has been viewed.

At this first conversation, which lasted three hours and at which only an interpreter was present besides Herr Hitler and myself, I very soon became aware the situation was much more acute and much more urgent than I had realized.

In courteous but perfectly definite terms, Herr Hitler made it plain he had made up his mind the Sudeten Germans must have the right of self-determination and of returning, if they wished, to the Reich. If they could not achieve this by their own efforts, he said, he would assist them to do so and he declared categorically that, rather than wait, he would be prepared to risk a world war.

At one point, he complained of British threats against Germany, to which I replied he must distinguish between a threat and a warning and that he might have just cause for complaint if I allowed him to think that in no circumstances would this country go to war with Germany when, in fact, there were conditions in which such a contingency might arise.

So strongly did I get the impression that the chancellor was contemplating an immediate invasion of Czechoslovakia that I asked him why he had allowed me to travel all the way, since I evidently was wasting my time.

He said if I could give him there and then the assurance the British government accepted the principle of self-determination, he was quite ready to discuss ways and means of carrying it out.

"If, on the contrary, I told him such a principle could not be considered by the British government, then he agreed it was no use to continue our conversations.

I was, of course, in no position to give there and then such assurance, but I undertook to return at once to consult my colleagues if he would refrain from active hostilities until I had had time to obtain their reply.

That assurance he gave, provided, he said, nothing happened in Czechoslovakia of such a nature as to force his hands, and that assurance has remained binding ever since.

I have no doubt now, looking back, that my visit alone prevented an invasion for which everything had been prepared, and it was clear to me that with German troops in the positions they then occupied, nothing anybody could do would prevent an invasion unless the right of self-determination was granted, and that quickly, to the Sudeten Germans.

And that was the sole hope of a peaceful solution.

I came back to London the next day. That evening the cabinet met and it was attended also by Lord Runciman, who, at my request, had traveled from Prague. Lord Runciman informed us that although in his view responsibility for the final breach in the negotiations at Prague rested upon the Sudeten extremists, nevertheless, in view of recent developments on the frontier, the districts between Czechoslovakia and Germany where Sudeten population was in the majority should be given the full right of self-determination at once.

He considered the cession of the territories to be inevitable and thought it should be done promptly. Measures for peaceful transfer could be arranged between the two governments. The Germans and Czechs, however, would still have to live side by side in many other parts of Czechoslovakia. In those areas, Lord Runciman thought the basis ought to be sought for local autonomy on the lines of the fourth plan published by the Czechoslovak government July 10.

He considered that the dignity and security of Czechoslovakia could only be maintained if her policy, internal and external, were directed to enabling her to live in peace with all her neighbors. For this purpose, in his opinion, her policy should be entirely neutral, as in the case of Switzerland.

His Majesty's government felt it necessary to consult the French government before replying to Herr Hitler and, accordingly, M. Daladier and M. Bonnet were invited to London September 18.

(The prime minister then quoted the text of the communique issued September 19.)

During these conversations, the representatives of the two governments were actuated by the desire to find a solution that would not bring about a European war and, therefore, a solution which would not automatically compel France to take action in accordance with her obligations. It was agreed the only means of achieving this object was to accept the principle of self-determination.

International Guarantee on Border Asked

Accordingly, the British and French Ministers at Prague were instructed to inform the Czechoslovak government that continuance within Czechoslovakia of districts mainly inhabited by Sudeten Germans would imperil the interests of Czechoslovakia herself and all hopes of peace.

The Czechoslovak government were asked to agree immediately to direct the transfer to the Reich of areas inhabited by a population more than 50 per cent German.

The Czechoslovak government were informed that to meet their natural desire for their security in the future, His Majesty's government would be prepared as a contribution to the pacification of Europe to join in an international guarantee in regard to new boundaries of the Czechoslovak state against unprovoked aggression.

Such a guarantee would safeguard the independence of Czechoslovakia by substituting a general guarantee against unprovoked aggression in place of the existing treaties with France and Russia which involved reciprocal obligations of a military character.

In agreeing to that guarantee, His Majesty's government were accepting a completely new commitment. We were not previously bound by any obligations toward Czechoslovakia other than those involved by the Covenant of the League.

(The prime minister then reviewed the further progress of negotiations, pointing out that the British and French Ministers in Prague were instructed to tell the Czechoslovak government there was no hope of a possible solution except on that basis. The Czechoslovak government was urged to accept Anglo-French proposals.)

This they did immediately and unconditionally September 21. Our minister in Prague was instructed to inform the Czechoslovak government September 22 that His Majesty's government were profoundly conscious of the immense sacrifice which the Czechoslovak government had agreed to and the immense public spirit which they had shown.

These proposals had been put forward in the hope of averting general disaster and saving Czechoslovakia from invasion.

Her willingness to undertake them won a measure of sympathy which nothing else could have aroused.

The Czechoslovak government resigned and a government of national concentration under Gen. Syrovy was constituted, but it was emphasized that this government was not a military dictatorship and that it had accepted the Anglo-French proposals.

Poland, Hungary Complicate Problem

We had hoped that the immediate problem would not be complicated at this juncture by the claims pressed by Poland and Hungary. They had, however, demanded similar treatment of their minorities as were accorded German minorities.

The governments of Poland and Hungary have made representations to His Majesty's government and we have replied that we take note of those representations but that we are at present concentrating our efforts on the Sudeten problem, on the solution of which the issue of war or peace in Europe depends. While appreciating their position, His Majesty's government hoped these two governments would do nothing to add to the present delicate situation.

The Polish government had expressed considerable dissatisfaction and troop movements had taken place in the direction of Teschen.

The Hungarian government had been encouraged by conversations of the regent with Field Marshal Goering and conversations of the Hungarian Prime Minister and chief of staff at Berchtesgaden, and mobilization measures had been taken by the Hungarian army.

On September 22, I went back to Germany to Bad-Godesberg-on-Rhine, where the chancellor had appointed a meeting place as being more convenient for me.

Once again I had a warm welcome in the streets of villages through which I passed, which demonstrated to me the desire of the German people for peace, and on the afternoon of my arrival I had a second meeting with the chancellor.

During my stay in London, the government had worked out with the French government arrangements for effecting the transfer of territory proposed, also for the delimitation of the final frontier.

I explained these to Herr Hitler, who was not previously aware of them, and I also told him about the proposed guarantee against unprovoked aggression.

On that point of guarantee he made no objection, but he said he could not enter into any guarantee unless other powers, including Italy, were also guarantors.

I said I had not asked them to enter into a guarantee but that I had intended to ask him if he were willing to enter into a pact of nonaggression with a new Czechoslovakia. He said he could not enter into such a compact while the other minorities of Czechoslovakia were not satisfied, but that when they were satisfied he would then be prepared.

He said he could not accept other proposals which I described to him on grounds they were too dilatory and offered too many opportunities for evasion. He insisted a solution was essential on account of the terrorism and oppression with which the Sudeten Germans were faced.

(Chamberlain said Hitler then gave him an outline of the proposals subsequently embodied in the famous memorandum, "except he did not in this conversation actually name any time limit.")

The honorable members will realise the perplexity in which I found myself in being faced with this totally unexpected situation. I had been told at Berchtesgaden that, if principles of self-determination were accepted, Herr Hitler would discuss with me ways and means of carrying it out.

He told me afterwards he never for one moment supposed I should be able to come back and say that the principle was accepted.

(The prime minister added he did not think Hitler deliberately deceived him.)

When I got back to Godesberg, I thought I had only to discuss quietly with him the various proposals already submitted. I was shocked when, at the beginning of the conversations, he (Hitler) said these proposals were not acceptable and that there were other proposals which I had not contemplated at all.

Wording of Memorandum Like Ultimatum

I felt I had to consider what I had to do. Consequently, I withdrew with my mind full of foreboding as to the success of my mission. I have seen speculative accounts of what happened the next day which suggested that long hours passed whilst I remained on one side of the Rhine and Herr Hitler on the other because I had difficulty in obtaining assurances from him about the removal of his troops.

I want to say at once that that is purely imaginary. There was no such difficulty. We had arranged to resume our conversation at 11:30 the next morning but in view of the difficulty of talking with a man through an interpreter and the fact I could not feel sure that what I had been saying had always been understood and appreciated by him, I thought it would be wise to put down on paper some comments upon these new proposals of his and let him have it sometime before the talks began.

Accordingly, I wrote a letter (which is No. 4 in the White Paper) which I sent him. I sent that soon after breakfast and in it I declared my readiness to convey the proposals to the Czechoslovak government, but I pointed out what I thought to be grave difficulties in the way of their acceptance.

On receipt of this letter the chancellor intimated he would like to say something in reply.

The reply was not received until Wednesday afternoon and contained no more proposals than those which had been described to me the night before. Accordingly, I replied, asking for a memorandum of the proposals and a copy of the map for transmission to Prague, and intimating my intention of returning to England.

The memorandum and map were handed me at my final interview with the chancellor, which began at 10:30 that night and lasted into the small hours of the morning, and at which the German foreign secretary was present as well as Sir Nevile Henderson and Sir Horace Wilson.

For the first time, I found in the memoranda new proposals and I spoke very frankly. I dwelt with all the emphasis at my command upon the risks which would be incurred by insisting on such terms.

I declared the language and manner of the document, which I described as an ultimatum rather than a memorandum, would profoundly shock public opinion in neutral countries and I bitterly reproached the chancellor on his failure to respond in any way to the efforts which I had made to secure peace.

In spite of these frank words, this conversation was carried on on more friendly terms than that which preceded it.

I think I should add that, before saying farewell to Herr Hitler, I had a few words with him in private which I do not think are without importance.

In the first place, he repeated to me with great earnestness what he had already said at Berchtesgaden—namely that this was his last territorial ambition in Europe; that he had no wish to have in the Reich people of other races than German.

Czech Refusal of Demands Caused Crisis

The next day, we received from the Czech ministers the reply of Czech government, which stated they considered Herr Hitler's demands, in their present form, to be absolutely and unconditionally unacceptable.

This reply was communicated to the French ministers. Conversations were resumed next morning with the French ministers and they informed us that if Czechoslovakia were attacked France would fulfill her treaty obligations.

In reply, we said if, as a result of these negotiations, the French forces became actively engaged, we should be pledged to support them.

Meanwhile, as a last effort to preserve peace, I sent Sir Horace Wilson to Berlin September 26 with a personal message to Herr Hitler to be delivered before his speech to be made in Berlin at 8 o'clock that evening; the French ministers entirely approved of this initiative and we issued a communique to that effect. Sir Horace Wilson took with him a letter from me pointing out that the reception of the German memorandum by Czechoslovakia had confirmed the expectations which I had expressed to him at Godesberg.

I, therefore, made a further proposal with a view to arriving at a settlement by negotiation rather than by military force—namely that there should be an immediate discussion between German and Czechoslovakian representatives in the presence of British representatives.

Sir Horace Wilson arrived at Berlin on the afternoon of the 26th and presented this letter to Herr Hitler, who listened to it, but expressed the view he could not depart from the procedure of the memorandum since he felt a conference would lead to further intolerable procrastination.

"I should tell the House how deeply it was impressed on my mind in my conversations with Herr Hitler, and I see it again in every speech he makes, that he has deep rooted distrust and disbelief in the sincerity of the Czechoslovak government. That has been one of the factors in all this difficult story of events.

In the meantime, after reading Herr Hitler's speech in Berlin in which, as I say, he expressed his disbelief in the intentions of the Czech government to carry out their promises, I offered on behalf of the British government to guarantee that the promises which they had made to us and the French government would be carried out.

Hitler Promises to Stay Invasion

Yesterday morning, Sir Horace resumed his conversations with Herr Hitler but, finding his views unchanged, he, upon my instructions, repeated to him in precise terms what I said a few moments ago, that France would fulfill her obligations to Czechoslovakia and should France become engaged in hostilities with Germany, the British government would feel obliged to support her.

Now the story which I have told the house brings us up to last night.

About 12:30 I received from Hitler the reply to my letter sent by Sir Horace Wilson, which is printed in the White Paper. A careful perusal indicates certain indications of his intention. There is a definite statement that troops will not be moved beyond the red line (beyond the Sudeten areas into Czechoslovakia). They are only to preserve order and that a plebiscite will be carried out with a free vote.

It was added he would abide by the results and, finally, he would join in an international guarantee for the remainder of Czechoslovakia, once minority questions were settled.

This was rather a reassuring statement, and I have no hesitation in saying—from the personal contacts I had with him—I believe he means what he says.

But the thing which was uppermost in my mind was that once more the difficulties and obscurities had been narrowed down to points, and it was inconceivable they could not be settled by negotiations. So strongly did I feel this that I felt compelled to send a last appeal.

Appeal for Few Days' Delay Is Successful

I sent the following personal message: "After reading your letter, I feel certain that you can get all the essentials without war and without delay, and I will arrange to go to Berlin myself, at once, to discuss the arrangements with you and the representatives of the Czech government, together with representatives of France and Italy if you desire it.

"I cannot believe you will take the responsibility of starting a world war, which might end civilization, for the sake of a few days' delay in settling this long-standing problem."

At the same time, I sent the following personal message to Premier Mussolini: "I have today addressed a last appeal to Hitler to refrain from force in the Sudeten problem which I feel sure can be settled by further discussion.

"I offered myself to go at once to Berlin to discuss arrangements with the German and Czech representatives—also Italy and France. I trust Your Excellency will inform the German chancellor you are willing to be represented and urge him to agree to my proposal which will keep all of our peoples out of war.

"I have already promised that the Czech promises should be carried out and feel confident a full agreement can be reached in a week."

In reply to the message to Mussolini, we were informed that instructions had been sent to the Italian Ambassador in Berlin to see Herr von Ribbentrop at once and say that, while Italy would fulfill completely her pledges to stand by Germany, in view of the great importance of the request made by His Majesty's government, Signor Mussolini hoped Herr Hitler would see his way to postpone the action which the chancellor had told Sir Horace Wilson was to be taken at 2 p. m. today, for at least 24 hours to allow him (Mussolini) to re-examine the situation and find a peaceful settlement.

In response, Hitler agreed to postpone mobilization for 24 hours.

Whatever views we may have had about Premier Mussolini in the past, I believe everyone will welcome his gesture. He has been willing to work with us—but that is not all!

I have now been informed by Hitler that he invites me to meet him in Munich tomorrow morning.

He has also invited Mussolini and Daladier. Mussolini has accepted and no doubt Daladier will also accept.

I need not say what my answer will be!

There can be no member in this House who did not feel his heart leap when he heard the crisis had been once more postponed. And now there is to be one more opportunity to try by reason of goodwill and discussion to find a solution of the problem which already is within sight of settlement.

I cannot say any more. I hope the House will release me now to go and see what I can make of this last effort, and perhaps, in view of this new development, this debate might be adjourned for a few days.

Then, perhaps, we may meet in happier circumstances.

One of the principal difficulties in dealing with a totalitarian government is the lack of any means of establishing contact with the personalities in whose hands lie the final decision. I therefore resolved (on September 14) to go to Germany myself and interview Herr Hitler and find out in a personal conversation whether there was any hope yet of saving peace.

Offered to Help Delimit Borders Suggested Nonaggression Pact Fuehrer Declined to Accept

London Hopes For Peace, but Guns Remain

Batteries Stud City
Trenches Score Parks
Balloon Barrage Up

By Frank R. Kelley.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Sept. 28.—London lived on in the shadow of war tonight and prepared for the worst, even after the message of hope which Prime Minister Chamberlain gave to the world this afternoon.

A wave of relief swept magically over the crowded streets when tomorrow's Munich conference was heralded on newspaper placards. Yet, with each hour, the city assumed more and more the appearance of an armed camp.

Landmarks known to thousands of American tourists suddenly blossomed with slim barreled anti-aircraft guns and sandbag barricades. Hyde Park looked like a battlefield with batteries of guns bristling on the peaceful green lawns. Gangs of men were digging miles of air-raid trenches, with the aid of floodlights, opposite the fashionable Park Lane and Kensington districts. Soup kitchens were set up to feed the workers.

At dusk the sky was criss-crossed with fingers of light from hundreds of searchlights, probing the clouds for target airplanes which roared busily back and forth across the city to give antiaircraft batteries much needed practice.

Main traffic arteries were choked with trucks carrying sand bags, timber and other defense materials. Heavy trucks belonging to the army and air force carried troops, airmen, ammunition from barracks and storage depots to strategic points in the city and suburbs.

Crowds gathered near Buckingham Palace to watch nine heavy tanks rumble into the courtyard of Wellington Barracks. Sand bags were piled 4 feet high outside the basement windows of the barracks.

11 Guns on the Embankment

One of the first anti-aircraft guns, mounted on an old-fashioned army truck, was set up on the sidewalk near the Obel on the Thames Embankment. Khaki-clad troops roped it off and chalked a "no smoking" sign on a black munitions shed alongside. This gun commanded a fine sweep of the river eastward to the towering dome of St. Paul's Cathedral and southward to Waterloo Station. It guarded the final reaches of the Thames which enemy bombers might use as a guide to central London.

Farther up river another vulnerable spot, the huge electric power plant adjoining Battersea Park, was flanked by guns concealed in trees along the river edge.

Four guns of the latest type were placed in Hyde Park near Marble Arch. They faced northeast. Another battery of four had been set up near Hyde Park corner. The long sweep of the park in between, facing the luxury hotels along Park Lane, had been turned over to diggers, who were putting corrugated iron roofs on a network of trenches.

The trenches are 5 feet wide and 7 deep. They have wood flooring and walls with 6-inch timber supporting the iron coverings. They are entered by sloping runways which lead to gas-tight double doors. When the trenches are completed they will be covered over with 2 feet of earth.

In neighboring Grosvenor Square, truckloads of sand were dumped into the basement area of the new American Embassy. Workmen filled bags with the sand and stacked them against the cellar windows. Inside the windows were covered with plywood. The stairway leading to the basement from the main lobby has been fitted with a gas-proof double door.

Guns Above the Thames

Several bridges crossing the Thames, including Westminster Bridge near the houses of Parliament, and Blackfriars' Bridge, which leads to "Newspaper Row" in Fleet street, had antiaircraft guns mounted on them.

The roofs of several modern office buildings, also had guns. Most of the antiaircraft batteries have been sent to the southern and eastern suburbs to attack enemy planes before they reach the heart of the city. The barrage of sausage balloons which is expected to force invading planes high enough for the guns of British fighting planes to engage them effectively is in place. It rings the city and the suburbs.

Geneva, Sept. 28.—A League of Nations Assembly committee tonight prepared indorsement of President Roosevelt's peace message in a resolution asserting "recourse to war, whatever may be its outcome, is no guarantee of a just settlement."

A secret session of the Assembly's general committee drew up the resolution, which concludes: "It (the Assembly) welcomes and fully associates itself with the messages of the President of the United States . . ."

The resolution was drawn up amid almost universal applause for President Roosevelt's peace pleas to Hitler, Mussolini and others as timely and powerful. It will be presented to the Assembly tomorrow for final approval.

The Rumanian delegate objected to a passage in the resolution that would put the Assembly on record as hoping that "negotiations under the most appropriate form will be carried through until an accord is reached." Poland objected to a minor matter of phraseology, and slight changes may be made before the resolution is presented to the Assembly for a vote.

New 'Big Four' Remaking Borders Fixed by Clemenceau and Wilson

A new "big four" sits down in Munich today to remake some of the boundaries set by the original "big four" at the peace conference 20 years ago.

Over the deliberations of Chamberlain, Hitler, Daladier and Mussolini will hover the shades of Clemenceau and Wilson and the hopes of Lloyd George and Orlando.

In the "big four" of today Germany has taken the place of the United States in rearranging boundaries that would not stay fixed.

Sixty-nine-year-old Chamberlain, quiet, ministerial, sits in the chair of blustering, dynamic Lloyd George, even now only a little older than Chamberlain and then a victorious prime minister imposing peace, not pleading for it.

Daladier takes the seat of the Tiger, Clemenceau, but, unlike Clemenceau, does not preside over the meeting of the "big four."

Perhaps he has a picture of his predecessor of the "big four" before him, the doughty premier and "father of victory," as his countrymen called him . . . Seventy-eight, wrinkled, unperturbed under his black skull cap, his gray-gloved hands calmly folded, his fringe of white hair occasionally stirring as he talked, as he battled for a new France.

Hitler takes the place of the scholar, Wilson, whose professorial countenance glowed with success, radiating his crusading spirit for an organized world peace.

Powerful-faced Mussolini, his eyes glowing as he thinks, perhaps, that at last his idea of a four-power pact may come into being, takes the place of Premier Orlando, volatile and eloquent.

Two of the original "big four" are still alive—Lloyd George, who still keeps in the public eye with speeches and statements, Orlando, who lives in retirement in Rome, carrying on a quiet legal practice countenanced by his political enemy, Mussolini.

The first "big four" met in various rooms, in the Hotel Bischoffen in Paris, in Lloyd George's flat, in M. Clemenceau's office. The new "big four" will confine its sittings to one meeting room in Munich.

Czechs Need Time Limit, Says Dieckhoff

Reich Envoy Returns
Charges Oppression
Hopeful for Peace

German Ambassador Hans Dieckhoff, just returned from Europe, last night declared setting of a definite time limit for surrender of the Sudeten area by Czechoslovakia was necessary, despite assurances by France and Britain that the transfer of territory would be effected.

Holding that the new Czech government had withdrawn its consent to the cession, he declared:

"A government that is trying to escape must have a time limit set for its compliance."

The normally jovial and smiling diplomat grew severe at times as he defended Germany's stand in the present crisis before newspapermen invited to his official residence.

Charges Oppression

"Supporters and sponsors of the self-determination doctrine," he said, "shouldn't object to the Germans in Sudetenland deciding where they shall go."

Claiming the Germans were oppressed by the Prague government, he likened their plight to those of the American colonists, and asserted:

"You people began shooting in 1776."

The Germans voted four months ago to join Germany, he declared, and still are held subject by the Czechs.

"Why should the man in the street in London or in Paris fight and die to uphold this discrimination?" he asked.

He said Upper Silesia was given to Poland after a plebiscite. "No one asked us about it," he added.

He insisted that after the Sudeten Germans are removed from Prague control "we will have, for the first time, a real Czech-Slovak people who could live in harmony."

Removal of the industries in Sudeten areas, he declared, would leave a sound balance between industry and agriculture in the remaining state. The industries themselves, he added, had been built up by Germans under the old Austro-Hungarian Empire.

Reminded that some time ago he had echoed a demand for a canton form of government, like that in Switzerland, for Czechoslovakia, without any mention of annexation, the Ambassador replied that six months had since elapsed and nothing had been done by the Czechs to grant such a concession.

Hopeful for Parley

Questioned as to Berlin's attitude on possible transfer of populations he said it was one of many problems to be worked out but he was critical of the League of Nations' exchange of Greek and Turk nationals. When a questioner asserted Germany apparently was taking a different attitude toward transfer of Jewish populations he insisted that the Jews were not required to leave Germany, a reply that brought the observation that there was no compulsion about the League's transfer, only the fact that those who remained were made so uncomfortable they were eager to depart.

As to today's conference at Munich, the ambassador was hopeful of a solution. He conceded that President Roosevelt's appeals to Chancellor Hitler may have influenced calling of the conference but said he thought a decisive factor may have been the British prime minister's guarantee that the Czechs would abide by the original concessions agreed upon.

Asked whether a solution could be reached while President Benes continued as head of the Czech state, the ambassador shrugged and said, "I don't know."

He expressed doubt that Hitler's demands had been changed between the two conferences held by the chancellor and the British prime minister, holding that at the first talk details of the surrender of Sudetenland had not been gone into, while at the second, the details of Hitler's demands were considered and Prime Minister Chamberlain found they called for more than he had anticipated. The ambassador said it indicated a "misunderstanding" on Chamberlain's part.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Bishop Prays, Sheean Talks As McDonald, Fans Fidget

Baseball fans who sat glued to their chairs during Arch McDonald's broadcast of the Senator-Yankees game over WJSV yesterday were served a strange hash of sports, international affairs, solemnity and politics.

3 p. m.—McDonald started his broadcast. He swung along through the first inning, the second, and on down to the fourth. Lewis had just hit a home run into the rightfield stands. Wright struck out. What would Bonura do? Then . . . the opening bars of "The Old Pine Tree." Then——

3:45 p. m.—We take you now to the network of the Columbia Broadcasting System. Vincent Sheean, war correspondent and author, speaking from Prague, will give you his first-hand impression of the situation there."

Sheean came on the air and told of what he had found since reaching the very heart of the European trouble. Hitler, he said, has misrepresented to the world conditions in Czechoslovakia. There has been no retreat of Nazi forces before a Czech invasion. What forces were in the Sudeten merely retired when Czechs entered the arena.

He scouted Hitler's claim of Czech atrocities against Germans in the Sudetenland. Hitler is either misinformed of conditions here or he's lying about them. Then . . .

4 P. M.—"Thanks for listening. We now return you to our New York studios." Then Arch McDonald again.

Comes the fifth inning now and New York is at bat. Lewis has thrown out Andrews and Arch McDonald is having his lungs full describing the game and going back over the part blanked out by Sheean. Crossetti doubles to left. Rolfe pops. . . .

4:15 p. m.—"We take you now to the network . . . the Archbishop of Canterbury will speak to you in an international broadcast from London" . . .

Noise. More noise. No. That wasn't His Grace. That was static. We return you to Arch McDonald until we can get better reception. "Washington, 4; New York, 1."

A resonant voice springs over the whispering distance.

"Pray tonight and tomorrow and always that the shaft of light which has broken through the cloud may spread until the cloud itself has vanished.

"Before you go to rest pray for Neville Chamberlain with full hearts, pray that God may guide him and give him wisdom and strength and, if it be His will, success.

"Continue these prayers tomorrow when this conference, on which the whole civilized world will depend, will be meeting in Germany . . . For remember while the danger is for the moment averted, it is not over and we must go on with our prayers."

It was the Archbishop of Canterbury in a moving plea for peace that must have stirred the heart of the most anxious baseball fan. Then . . .

4:21 p. m.—"Now we will return you to the Belmont Race Track."

"Hold your horses, Bryan. I have the floor." That was Arch McDonald, pleading with a New York CBS announcer not to take the broadcast away from him and his game and his fans again. At least, that's what the fans thought, and it may have been what McDonald thought. Really it was just the network cue to the stations to take up their programs again.

Once more, though, it happened. Somewhere along in the eighth inning, the chain took the air to announce the Justice Department would present to a grand jury kidnaping charges brought against Mayor Frank Hague of New Jersey by Norman Thomas, Socialist leader.

Then . . . after outlasting a war expert, an archbishop, a chain announcer, Mayor Hague and "The Old Pine Tree," Arch McDonald finished his game.

"Washington, 4; New York, 1."

King Urges U. S. To Stop Buying Mexican Silver

A demand that the United States stop all purchases of Mexican silver in immediate retaliation against confiscation of American properties was made yesterday by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, a leader of the Senate silver bloc.

King said he has urged this course both at the State Department and Treasury, and is ready to follow it up with proposed legislation if necessary.

The chief Senate sponsor of the silver purchase act said his statement was prompted by Mexico's second rejection of two proposals by Secretary of State Hull to arbitrate $10,132,388 in American claims. The State Department is considering a third and firmer note to the Latin-American republic.

"We might just as well confess it," said King, "Mexico does not intend to pay. American claims from loss of property, life and confiscations have accumulated since 1910, and today in my judgment they are nearer $700,000,000 than $10,000,000. She never paid any of it and she never will."

Soviet Tells U. S. It's Ready For Peace Talk

American Gets Pledge
Want General Parley
Reply in Tradition

By Joseph Barnes.
Special Cable to The Post.

Moscow, Sept. 28.—President Roosevelt's proposal for an international conference on the German-Czechoslovakia problem was given strong Soviet support today when Alexander C. Kirk, American charge d'affaires, a Soviet pledge of active participation.

Kirk delivered to the Soviet foreign commissariat today the American request that the Soviet Union join the growing chorus of appeals to Reichsfuehrer Hitler and President Benes for a peaceful solution of their difficulties. In the absence of Foreign Commissar Litvinov at Geneva, he saw Potemkin, the Soviet diplomat who helped, while ambassador at Paris, to work out the terms of the Franco-Soviet pact of mutual assistance.

Want International Talk

Potemkin, after reviewing the Soviet Union's record for peace, told Kirk his government "accepts with sympathy the United States proposal to co-operate in avoiding war."

The Soviet official added, however, that the most effective measure to preserve peace now seemed to the Soviet Union to be an international conference. Such a conference, he said, "should work out practical ways of opposing aggression and of saving peace by collective measures." He also referred to a similar proposal advanced at Moscow last March.

The conference of the four powers at Munich tomorrow was arranged too late for mention in Kirk's conversation today. But the Soviet reply followed the traditional line of Moscow's foreign policy in supporting general international action against limited alliances—like the four-power pact which is likely to be under discussion at Munich tomorrow.

An Airport At Last

Washingtonians will be deeply gratified by the fact that President Roosevelt has found a way to cut through controversy and provide the Capital City with a first-class airport. While Gravelly Point has long been the favorite site of most local agencies, the final selection of that area for immediate development is completely overshadowed by the fact that the dispute has been ended and a suitable landing field is to be built.

The fact that the decision has been made within the relatively short time since the Civil Aeronautics Authority began to function does not mean that its survey was superficial. For at least ten years experts have been studying sites for a model Washington airport. At one time the existing airport seemed to be favored for expansion, in spite of its hazards. A Congressional commission temporarily swung considerable support to the Camp Springs site. And various other locations have been thoroughly considered.

The simple fact is that no site has been found to be perfect from all viewpoints. It is that fact which prolonged the controversy at the expense of safety for passengers and pilots flying in and out of Washington. Fortunately the CAA reviewed the voluminous findings from a fresh viewpoint and recommended the site to which the fewest objections can be raised. That sensible decision should have been made years ago.

To supplement Gravelly Point, which is sometimes enveloped in fog, the CAA recommends development of a second airport on higher ground necessarily some distance from the city. Only in this way, apparently, can Washington be certain of first-class air terminal facilities in all weather. The completion of Gravelly Point will be such a great improvement over the existing facilities, however, that construction of a second major airport does not seem to be pressing.

Since the Gravelly Point site is already owned by the Government, no outlay for land is essential. PWA and WPA funds will be used for development of the terminal as a Federal project. Few, if any, undertakings authorized through the public works program will satisfy a more urgent need than this airport.

At present the only unfortunate aspect of the project seems to be the fact that the Administration recently permitted the erection of a bureau of public roads laboratory adjacent to the Gravelly Point site in spite of vigorous protests. Already the Airline Pilots Association is asking for removal of this building. If it is decided that the structure must be relocated, the failure of officials to halt the work last winter will be a costly mistake.

With Germany In Mind

Under pressure from China, but with European rather than Far Eastern considerations primarily in mind, the League Council has unanimously agreed to invoke the sanctions clauses of the Covenant against Japan.

Overshadowed by more spectacular developmnets elsewhere, the action taken at Geneva is nonetheless of great potential significance. It is the first time that the door has definitely been opened to punitive action against a non-League nation found guilty of aggression. Today this shoe fits Japan. But tomorrow, should Hitler hurl his legions against Czechoslovakia, it will be found to fit Germany. The way is thus prepared for imposing sanctions against the Third Reich should that nation take to the warpath despite the tremendous efforts now being made to dissuade her from so calamitous a course.

It will be pointed out, of course, that the League is not the strong and powerful instrumentality it was designed to be by Woodrow Wilson and his collaborators; that since the Ethiopian fiasco it has definitely gone into a state of eclipse. It will also be pointed out that one nation after another has already released itself from the obligations of applying the sanctions clauses of the Covenant should they be invoked. All this is true. The fact remains, however, that under certain circumstances the League can again be made into an instrumentality capable of being employed with no small force against an aggressor.

Should war arise out of the Sudeten problem, with Great Britain, France and Russia, as League members aligned against a clearly-defined aggressor, this triple entente could effectively employ the League machinery as a means of mobilizing not merely moral but material aid. To be sure, by no means all League members would be prepared to follow the British-French-Russian lead in this particular. But some of them would, particularly if not called upon to employ military measures. At the same time the League could be useful as a means of co-ordinating the efforts of the anti-German bloc.

In thus preparing to take action to aid China and punish Japan, the League is clearing the tracks for an alignment, should that become necessary, against Germany.

Back From The Abyss

Yesterday the British prime minister gave his detailed report to Parliament, in special session assembled, on the difficult and delicate negotiations which for several weeks he has been conducting with the German Fuehrer. As a routine matter the British government issued, also yesterday, an official compilation of all the documents exchanged in these negotiations.

As a result the British people, and all that part of the world not governed by dictatorships, now know exactly how the present crisis has arisen and what is involved therein. If Neville Chamberlain needs a vote of confidence he will get it, there is no doubt, by an overwhelming majority of the democratically chosen House of Commons. And if that vote means war, forced by German aggression, Great Britain in fighting will have behind her the moral backing of all free peoples.

Yesterday, also, the German Fuehrer, conscious that he has overplayed his hand, began at the eleventh hour to seek a way of retreat. His subjects, unlike the citizens of Great Britain and France, are only just beginning to realize how close they are to actual hostilities. They are just beginning to realize that the world is again preparing to accept the challenge of Germany's legions and, this time, finish the job. Five years of whipped-up delirium have not obliterated the German memories of 1918. Hitler knows, and Goering knows, and Goebbels, Hess and Henlein know, that their imposing facade of tremendous military power conceals grave structural weaknesses in Nazi Germany. They know, and are afraid.

They are afraid, as every dictator since the dawn of history has been afraid, because they cannot wholly trust their downtrodden people. And they are afraid, further, because for all the scorn and contumely poured by the Nazis on the democratic system, they recognize its superior strength. In their very revilings of democracy they show their fear, just as Hitler plainly showed fear of the future in his hysterical rantings on Monday.

In the showdown democracy is strong and dictatorship is weak. Democracy conceals its strength because it is slow-moving, cumbersome, time-consuming, inefficient in small things. And dictatorship conceals its weakness because it can act quickly, disregard all the refinements of civilization, and compel efficiency in detail. There come times, however, when the grim mask is stripped from the face of the dictatorship, and when the entangling robes drop from the strong torso of democracy. Such a moment is at hand today.

So Hitler and Mussolini, neither of them cowards but both of them now thoroughly worried, will today meet Chamberlain and Daladier at Munich, in a conference called at Hitler's request. In the nerve-racking sequence of the past three weeks there has been no single development as dramatic. And while outwardly the tension remains as grim as ever there is reason to believe that the peak of the crisis has been passed.

Whether this proves true will depend in no small measure on the path of democratic statesmanship now. A way out of the impasse in which he finds himself must be found for Hitler. The solution must enable him, and also Mussolini, to save face before their own people. It is foreordained, therefore, that some sacrifice, as already agreed to by the Prague government, will have to be made by Czechoslovakia.

But that sacrifice, made necessary by the unquestionable desire of most of the Sudeten Germans to join the Reich, will seem a small price to pay for peace, particularly if the peace thereby obtained is stabilized.

There are many indications that a solution, if it can be reached now, may prove far-reaching. There is Hitler's assurance that the Sudeten area is his final territorial ambition in Europe. There is Chamberlain's oft-expressed desire to utilize the machinery of the League of Nations for revision of outworn treaties. There is President Roosevelt's magnificent message to Hitler on Tuesday night, urging a negotiated settlement which must, in the final analysis, involve much more than the question of sovereignty over the Sudeten area.

There is an immediate problem, which is the peaceful and equitable transfer to Germany of that fringe of Czechoslovak territory whose people unquestionably desire union with the Fatherland. And there is the underlying problem of putting an end to the anarchic procedure of forceful pressures which has created the present crisis.

The two issues are interwoven. Chamberlain and Daladier, at Munich, will be the first to realize that reliable assurances on the larger issue are a definite part of any settlement of the immediate problem. And they will be the more eager for a just solution of the latter because of the major responsibility of Great Britain and France for the Treaty of Versailles, which sowed so many of the dragon's teeth now sprouting.

New York Truck Strike

The strike of the New York City truck drivers emphasizes the necessity of orderly settlements of industrial disputes that bring economic paralysis to large communities.

In the case of the railways, a mediatory procedure has been developed that has prevented any important transportation tieups for a good many years. As a result, we have come to realize that a strike or lockout affecting railway transportation is an utterly indefensible method of settling labor disputes.

Today, with thousands of consumers separated from the markets upon which they depend for their very existence, maintenance of transportation facilities is imperative. The disruption created by the New England hurricane affords an impressive example of the dependence of our thickly populated States upon outside sources of supply. Mayor LaGuardia reports that frantic appeals have reached him from New England to expedite movement of essential supplies held up by the truck strike.

Under prevailing circumstances Mayor LaGuardia was undoubtedly justified in declaring that an emergency existed and in taking immediate action to relieve it. His method of dealing with the situation is, to be sure, open to criticism, yet it is not easy to find acceptable solutions of disputes after they have reached the stage of open hostilities. At least some much-needed supplies are now being moved as a result of the decision to use city trucks manned by strikers. By paying the drivers increased wages despite objections to this higher scale, the Mayor has unfortunately put the employers under great pressure to accept the terms of his compromise proposal.

The basic cause of the trouble lies in the rejection of peaceful methods of negotiation. Instead of waiting patiently to see whether an agreement could be reached and, if not, seeking the aid of mediators, and despite the objections of their own leaders, a group of impatient union members struck while the discussion of a new wage contract was going on. Consequently, Mayor LaGuardia was confronted by a situation calling for prompt and drastic action to see that New York was not paralyzed.

What is now needed is a fact-finding board which, like the excellent body selected to investigate the issues in the dispute over railway wages, will probe into the conditions existing in the New York trucking industry and undertake to outline terms of settlement fair both to the employers and to the employes. So long as methods of industrial warfare are utilized in preference to peaceful methods of settling wage disputes, employers' organizations and trade unions need not protest against official interference in their affairs, for the safety and the well-being of great communities are and must be the first considerations of governmental heads. It is their responsibility to protect the people from the kind of unregulated industrial warfare that cannot be confined within reasonably restricted limits.

A Deserved Tribute

The American Arbitration Association made a wise choice when it bestowed its first medal for distinguished service in industrial arbitration upon Edward F. McGrady, former Assistant Secretary of Labor, and now vice president of the Radio Corporation of America.

Mr. McGrady possesses that rare combination of a thorough and sympathetic knowledge of labor problems and an understanding of the economic limits to which industry can reasonably be asked to go in making concessions. And equally as important as his specialized knowledge is his evident ability to inspire confidence in both employers and employes.

One of the outstanding features of the dinner given in his honor was the varied character of the representation. Men and women who regard themselves as belonging to antagonistic economic and social groups were present. According to the American Arbitration Association, the dinner was attended by A. F. of L. and C. I. O. leaders, by bankers, prominent industrialists and representatives of many different industries. "Bankers and stonecutters rubbed elbows," it was stated, "garment workers and important industrialists supped together on the same food."

The contacts made through friendly intercourse on a purely social occasion such as this may be most useful in furthering co-operation between labor and capital for industrial peace. Preliminary friendly contacts are especially valuable in providing a basis for the voluntary settlement of differences which Mr. McGrady urges as a substitute for force and as the best possible method of promoting peace and goodwill in industry.

Letters to the Editor

The Brimhall Letter

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dean Brimhall, of the WPA, in his excoriation (political?) of The Post, in distorting facts about New Deal abuses, strikes rare heights of humor. The purity and piety that motivate every bureau, board and commission of the Deal is, of course, known to all, which makes The Post's ignorance harder to understand. Senator Minton should look into this and pass legislation restraining somebody or other, especially youths who dispense newspapers to the accompaniment of vigorous uncouth language.

That old standby about business overriding the spendthrifts, thus inducing Franklin Depression Roosevelt to cut down on the handouts in 1937, takes this year's prize. Some (minority) critics are even so nasty and caustic as to assert this economizing was done so that it might be broadcast in the shadow of the election. (An opinion which your depraved correspondent, a '32 Roosevelt voter, seconds.)

The court control attempt, the virtuous blasts by the vituperative section of the spellbinders' guild had nothing, of course, to do with our present mess—the Roosevelt depression. When no other legitimate excuse for railing against business could be found the demagogues rake up that convenient bugaboo, the Liberty League, the long past crimes of "malefactors" and horrors of full employment under Coolidge.

Dean Brimhall says only about a fourth of the unemployed are taken care of by the WPA (What Price Ambition?). Therein he offers the best argument we've heard that the squandering programs protested against really are futile, and should be curtailed. The resulting relief on the tax structure is the best guarantee the 12,000,000 will be the sooner taken care of.

The Post is to be further congratulated for insistence on spending curtailment the last several years, today and in the future.

"Spending Spree"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Conservative people, who are motivated more by reason than blind emotion and hero worship, continue to wonder how much longer the New Deal spending spree can last without bringing disaster to the Nation.

Taxes of every description, which constantly increase, as the national debt broadens, harass both rich and poor alike. The so-called "hidden tax" insidiously devours the purse of the poor and curtailed dividends, due to excessive taxation, have paralyzed the purchasing power of shareholders.

Corporations large and small, throughout the land, have been so crippled by taxation that they protested vigorously to the Administration, but their protests fall on deaf ears. The ballooning of the national debt continues and virtually no effort is made to check the waste. The Treasury is constantly raided to promote the New Deal schemes.

In 1932 at the Democratic convention large banners bearing the inscription "Out of the Red With Roosevelt" were joyfully unfolded. It is altogether impossible to reconcile this with what later transpired or with Harry Hopkins' notion, which was indorsed by the Administration, that "we must spend, in order to save." Hasn't Harry overlooked the ancient adage, "Willful waste brings woeful want?"

To End Discussion Of The Purge

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is the President possessed of the wisdom to perceive the true explanation for the failure of the purge, first brought up by Senator Guffey and carried to disastrous futility by history's most liberal—with other people's money—President?

Is the President able to realize that what he has received, indirectly, but clearly, is a mandate as emphatic as any he has ever received to return to American principles of government? G. A. FARSON.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Way up on the Hudson River, sitting on the bank, are two forlorn-looking men, and as we draw near we see F. D. R. and Two-Job J. F. They are looking longingly across the river to Father Divine's sign "Peace." Let us draw nearer and hear what they have to say:

Two-Job J. F. is talking. "Say, Chief, this purge of your's turned out badly. Chief, you told me that you thought it would be all right." F. D. R.: "J. F., yes, I did tell you after you got started that I thought it would be all right, but I did not tell you to promise any bridges."

J. F.: "Right now, Chief, I want to do a little thinking of my own. I have taken the rap for you too many times. Just before the election the boys would come to me and say 'How is election going, J. F.?' and I would say, 'Oh, I've got it in the bag,' and I'd have it, too, you'd know that, but this purge business turned out to be the darndest busiest moth you ever saw, and together with Cotton Ed Smith's boll weevils, they did not do a thing to my bag. Look at it! Holes everywhere."

Then the Chief says: "Well, couldn't you get a new bag?" J. F.: "Yes, I can get a new bag, but I am going to tell you right here that the next bag is going to be a whole lot smaller than this one, because there is not going to be nearly as much to put in it as before."

Then they both sighed and looked again over at the "Peace" sign.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Mark Sullivan discovers similarity between the defeat of Congressman John J. O'Connor for renomination on the Democratic ticket and the bullying of Hitler in dealing with Czechoslovakia. He condemns Hitler's procedure, as the overwhelming majority of right-thinking people everywhere do, and in the same breath he deprecates the attitude of President Roosevelt toward O'Connor. He thinks both are cases of dictatorship.

This is one of the most outlandish comparisons to be found in contemporary political writing. It is on a par with expressing in the same paragraph horror over the cold-blooded murder of a kindly, law-abiding citizen and regret because Al Capone is in jail, and citing the two facts as proof that right is forever on the scaffold and wrong forever on the throne.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It should not be forgotten that at Denton the speaker not only identified himself as The Great Liberal, but announced his purpose of reconstructing the Democratic Party into what he termed a "Liberal Party."

Under all the circumstances it will doubtless interest your readers to compare the reply of Queen Elizabeth to the request, addressed to her as the sovereign, by the House of Commons in 1593, for liberty of speech. Said the gracious Queen: "Privilege of speech is granted, but you must know what privilege you have; not to speak every one what he listeth, or what cometh in his brain to utter that; but your privilege is Aye or No."

Which of the twain then is the greater "Liberal"—the one who permitted the House a choice between "Aye or No," or the one who would limit legislators to "Yes" only on measures he sees fit to propose?

Short Sales in Wheat

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An Associated Press dispatch from Chicago, dated September 24, says "After soaring 4 cents a bushel here today as war tension heightened, wheat prices retreated and lost all but about a cent of the advance." The prices referred to were those of December wheat futures contracts; not exactly wheat prices.

The antics of the wheat futures market are a mystery to many people. Why was it that, at one short session of the Chicago Board of Trade last Saturday, in the presence of a continuing war scare, December wheat futures quotations advanced 4 cents and then declined 3 cents?

Short selling in the futures market has a more depressing effect on prices than has short selling in the stock market. The reason is the presence of hedgers in the futures market. Most hedgers play the short side of the market. A hedger is not alarmed when prices advance. He is willing to continue to sell short just the same. What he loses on his short sales he expects to make up, approximately, on his investment in the cash market.

Short sellers in the stock market, in the face of consistently rising quotations, "cover," that is, they become buyers instead of sellers, to the extent, at least, of their outstanding short commitments. That is not so in the grain or cotton futures market. A hedger never "covers" his short sales no matter how the market goes, until he gets good and ready, that is, when he sells his cash grain or its processed product. He continues to sell short even in the face of a rising market.

It should be remembered that "futures quotations set the pace for cash prices."

That Baltimore Clash

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "In April, 1861, not long after the Sixth Massachusetts Regiment had shot down citizens in the streets of Baltimore, James Ryder Randall, a native of that city . . . dashed off what was to become the most popular of all State songs, 'Maryland, My Maryland.'"

The above is the opening sentence of an article, entitled "Vote Tomorrow to Be Biggest New Deal Test," written by Edward T. Folliard and published in The Washington Post, September 11, 1938.

The facts, as history records, are that when the Sixth Massachusetts Regiment passed through Baltimore on its way to the South, there was an unprovoked attack by a mob in Baltimore. Stones and bricks were thrown at the regiment and they were fired upon with resulting bloodshed and death. This event is recorded in an engraving made by Mr. F. O. C. Darley.

In 1898 when the Massachusetts Sixth Regiment passed through Baltimore on its way to the Spanish-American War the citizenry of Baltimore remembered the perfidious attack of a former day. As a gesture of atonement and reparation for the previous mistreatment, they turned out and bombarded the regiment with roses instead of bullets. In the interest of harmony between the North and the South, is it not a grave mistake to so distort an occurrence that something contrary to fact will be believed by those readers of the present generation who are ignorant of the true fact and that will prolong the bitterness of the South toward the North?

Hurricane

SATURDAY, the sixteenth, it began to rain. We closed the windows and the doors, and lit a roaring fire in the living room, and the rain beating on the casements made us all the cozier. We were glad then for the little store of driftwood we had gathered bit by bit during the summer. We watched the eerie blue and green flames play in and out of the red core of the fire.

Sunday it rained all day, and again on Monday, too. Northeasters usually run a definite three-day course, so we were a little annoyed to find it raining as hard as ever on Tuesday. But when on Wednesday we opened our eyes to see water sluicing down the window panes we felt more than annoyed; we felt abused. It was not only raining, it was raining as it had never rained before, and the wind was rising.

We decided to get along with what food we had in the house and give up any idea of marketing. In that wind an umbrella would not have lasted five minutes, and rubbers and raincoats would have been equally futile against the wet. At 70, of course, you have to remember pneumonia. We finished our household tasks and with the living room tidied and polished we sat down before the fire to do a little knitting. The wind was screaming louder than ever and banging at the windows and doors. I listened for a time while a little tingle of excitement stirred within me. I could no longer sit there quietly. The storm had torn away my peace.

"Annie," I cried, "I'm going up to my room to see what the ocean is doing."

Our cottage is two blocks from the sea, but it stands on an almost imperceptible rise and from my lofty outlook I can see right across the intervening cottages to the ocean. It was all that I had hoped for, lashed by the storm into a spectacle of wild and savage beauty.

I stood pressed against the window, watching the splendor of that infinite tumult. The wind was howling louder and louder until it reached one piercing note as if some Titan twanged a taut steel string across the sky. I noticed a movement in the ocean. At first I could not make out what it was, and then, as my breath stopped, I saw a wall of green water, higher than the cottages, rolling landward. As it struck the beach it burst with tremendous force. The spray seemed to fly from some Niagara, the broken waves were like the Falls themselves. Again and yet again a great green wall rolled landward and burst like shell fire. I called Annie, and, speechless, we stood and watched.

Suddenly Annie said:

"I'm going out."

"Annie!" I cried. "It will mean your death."

"I don't care if it does," she retorted grimly. Annie is sometimes a little grim. "I'm going to see this storm if it's the last thing I do."

"Wait," I said. "Wait, I'll come, too."

We went through a formality of buridling ourselves up, though we both knew it would not be much use. We did not even glance at our umbrellas. We opened the back door and the wind almost slapped us in again. We pulled the door shut and struggled across the garden to East avenue, and so down the little path along the side of the Bluffs Hotel, our usual way to the beach.

We reached the sea wall just in time to see an enormous wave pick up a large section of the boardwalk and hurl it at the hotel. We stood terrified, yet fascinated. The wind beat upon our bodies and the spray was salt upon our lips. Then the whole ocean seemed to rise into one huge mass.

"Run!" screamed Annie.

We sped down the lane. Annie reached East avenue, but I, like Lot's wife, had to turn and look—to see the foaming madness of the sea pursuing us. I fled to the lawn back of the hotel as the water poured down the path.

"Come on!" Annie shouted. I hardly knew my own sister. Wisps of her white hair whipped her soft face and her blue eyes were blazing.

We went on down East avenue, sheltered by the cottages, and turned into the next street leading to the sea. We climbed the porch of a cottage and watched again the brutally magnificent sight. To our left the porch of a cottage broke away with a rending crash and was tossed out to sea. It seemed a good moment to leave.

We walked two blocks back to Main street and turned north to that part of the town where the beach narrows and the sea draws nearer. The waves were running down every cross street that led from the ocean. Benches and electric lights from the boardwalks had been swept along and dropped at random. Against a friend's cottage rested a block of the boardwalk with a bench and the bulletin board still attached.

On and on we struggled through the wind and the rain. The wildness of the storm had infected us two old women, and we were filled with a mad exhilaration. But as the gusts came further and further apart and the mountains of the sea flattened we grew conscious of our wet and weary state.

"We must go home at once," said Annie. "I think we're both crazy. We'll probably be dead of pneumonia in a week." It was the first time we had thought of it.

That night as I got ready for bed I took one last look from my window. The mountains had diminished to long rollers, and in the quiet sky stars were shining.

Fair Enough

Rolling Away the Clouds

NOT LONG AGO Mr. Bob Davis, who does a travel column for American newspapers, wrote one from Vienna explaining why in the midst of the turmoil and horror he has refrained from discussion or even mention of such things and of the rights and wrongs behind them.

I hope that what I am about to say on this subject will not be read as an attempt to take him to task for his marvelous detachment. He has his peanut stand and I run mine, and I will say that he sells a very good brand of peanuts, being a good writer and storyteller, with a great knack for getting about and picking up entertaining pieces, mainly small ones about small people, and packaging them in a wrapper of jovial contentment.

MR. DAVIS said that, of course, he could not help hearing the wind blow when it does blow, but there were experts to attend to that which might be called the sordid and painful side of life and politics, and that he had an agreement with himself to yield their special field to them. He would resolutely ignore all such and pursue his way calmly—a feat of self-discipline which must relieve a man of much worry and heartache.

His salute to the experts was a little too elaborate, because Mr. Davis also knows a thing or two and, if he were of a mind to dip his bill into the subjects which he has arbitrarily forbidden himself, would do as good a job as most of the specialists. So, with full respect for his honestly, I suspect that he is being more modest than he should and that his placid neutrality or aloofness is of itself a specialty. No human heart can remain unperturbed and impartial effortlessly. It takes work.

AT HOME we have a somewhat similar specialist in Mr. Ernie Pyle, who rattles about the country endlessly, writing in much the same vein, although at times with more feeling, a note of sorrow or pity for the human race—not one class as opposed or compared to another but the whole troubled, pathetic breed of men.

He is at Quoddy Village one day, in Akron another and writing about a strange restaurant in Toledo—not Spain but Ohio—the next, but never does he write in terms of the tory versus such knights in armor as Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, preferring, apparently, the belief that most people would like to get along without much hating and fighting but, unfortunately, don't know how. That is my general interpretation of his line but not an attempt to commit him to a formula. He rolls his own.

THERE ARE MEN I envy in my heart, and millions of others must, too, because they seem to be calm and optimistic, and Mr. Davis almost indifferent, in print, although in his soul he may be as badly troubled as the rest. He visits Vienna at a time of something very like a massacre and writes of restaurants and finds humanity in men who seem to have stifled compassion and every instinct that makes men feel superior to beasts.

There are few persons now who seem able, even at this great distance from Austria and Germany, to reawaken their knowledge from individual experience that the German nature is not entirely that of Hitler. Up to a year ago there were many here who paid scarcely any attention to rumors of war abroad, and if they gave any thought at all to atrocity, believed that the cruelty had been exaggerated in transmission. They would still like to be at peace in their hearts to relieve their souls of the terrible foreboding and turn back the clock to the days when Vienna was a city of music and politeness and human decency.

• • • •

EDITORS OF newspapers in this country often make a conscious effort to roll back the clouds from Page One and from the editorials and comment. The World's Series has been a reliable interlude many times, and you often will observe, if you will take the trouble to notice, little brighteners—or two-headed calves, as we call them—on Page One of the papers, intended as rays of nonsense in the gloom. But steadily the darkness has deepened, and people who tried so long, or didn't even have to try, to put dread out of their hearts now discuss war and its possible personal effect on them and their children.

I wish Mr. Davis and Mr. Pyle could be multiplied by many millions, for we then would have an effective nucleus of tolerance and understanding, but first of all, I selfishly wish they could infect me, because they both seem to find nothing but kindness in the hearts of men wherever they go. Maybe the reason is that they find in the hearts of others only that which is in their own. That could be the trouble with me, I suppose.

Democrats Name Maryland Slate Amid Rejoicing

Baltimore, Sept. 28.—A wildly cheering Democratic State convention late today nominated Herbert R. O'Conor, 42-year-old attorney general, for Governor of Maryland.

United States Senator Tydings, who came through the Roosevelt "purge" with a whopping victory in the September 12 primary, was nominated today on the first ballot, 111 to 38, over Representative Lewis.

Others who won places on the ticket were:

For attorney general—William C. Walsh, of Cumberland.

For comptroller—J. Millard Tawes, of Crisfield.

For clerk of the court of appeals—James A. Young of Cumberland and Annapolis.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Issue At Munich

BEFORE THEY leave Munich Mr. Chamberlain and M. Daladier will have to make as hard a decision as was ever forced upon responsible statesmen. They must decide how far it is safe to disarm their ally in the hope of placating a great military power which does not hide the fact that its ultimate purpose is the total destruction of their ally. It is as if the guardians of a fortress had to decide whether by opening a breach in the walls and allowing the hostile army to get inside the walls, they could then persuade him to settle down to live with them in peace.

For there can be no doubt whatever that the issue is not now the national rights of the Sudetens, but whether Czechoslovakia is to be disarmed and rendered defenseless. The Godesburg memorandum proves that beyond all possibility of dispute. What Mr. Chamberlain and M. Daladier have to decide is how far they dare to go in agreeing to a partial disarmament of Czechoslovakia in return for a promise by Hitler to abstain from an immediate invasion.

CLEARLY THEY can go no further than that point where in the judgment of their military advisers the defense of Czechoslovakia would still be possible. Where that point is, how much territory could be ceded without fatal consequences, it would be presumptuous for an outsider to say. For the problem is a military problem, and the basic question is whether Hitler is or is not to obtain by the threat of force now a military advantage which makes the subsequent total conquest of Czechoslovakia easy and inevitable.

BUT HITLER, too, has a very difficult decision to make. For he has to decide whether he can afford to pause with a concession which grants his nominal and ostensible demands, namely the absorption of the Sudetens, but does not give him the substance of his real purpose, namely, the disarming of the Czechs and the rupture of the French and Russian alliances. It is a hard decision, because if he accepts a pacific arrangement for the time being, he must realize that henceforth he will live with the outer world armed and alert and alienated. He has virtually killed pacifist sentiment in the democracies, and any peace from now on will be in effect no more than an armistice.

On the other hand, if he insists on more than Mr. Chamberlain and M. Daladier could dare to concede, he must fight, not a local war, but a general war, against a great coalition.

HE CAN hardly fail to realize the essential difference between a local war against a small nation and a general war against a great coalition which controls the seas.

A local war can be won on the battlefield. But a general war cannot be decided by victorious battles. A general war is decided by exhaustion, and the military victory is the consequence and not the cause of the enemies' defeat. Waterloo came after the armies of Napoleon had been depleted in the Russian campaign, and Foch's final offensive in August and September of 1918 succeeded after the central powers had begun to break up from within. Unless the airplane has a capacity for destruction beyond anything that even the most pessimistic believe, the same fundamental military principles will again be decisive.

THIS MEANS that a general war would be a long war, with many battles and many incidents, but with no end until one side or the other was too tired, too hungry and too demoralized to fight on. The allies, we may assume, regard this as the clear and unmistakable lesson of the last war, and that, whatever may be their strategic plans in detail, their higher strategy would be to compel Hitler to exhause the resources and the fighting spirit of the German people in an effort to break through a ring of armies and navies.

In a war of this character the deciding factor would almost certainly be the willingness of the troops and of the civilians behind them to hold on. It would be a mistake to suppose that Germany, for example, would soon be brought to sue for peace because of an actual shortage of military supplies. No doubt there are sufficient stocks to carry on for a long time, and exhaustion in that narrow sense of the word is not to be counted upon. Exhaustion would almost surely take the form eventually of sheer war-weariness growing acuter as the conviction arose that the cause was hopeless.

For in a general war the allies would surely use a defensive strategy. It is much less costly than the offensive, and it is much easier to remain brave in a long resistance than in continued attacking. It is generally estimated that the military offensive uses up about three times the men and the materials needed to resist an offensive. The surest way to lose a general war, as the allies found out in 1915 and 1916, is to attempt to win by a great offensive against the main forces of the enemy.

THEY ARE NOT likely to repeat that mistake. For their political and moral and strategic position would be such that they would have no compulsion to attack. They do not have to defeat the German army in pitched battles. What they have to do is to prevent the German army from breaking their resistance. Whereas the allies must win eventually if they are not overwhelmed on the battlefield, Hitler must lose eventually if he does not obtain a military decision.

The immeasurably greater power of the defensive was fully demonstrated on the western front in the World War. It has been demonstrated in Spain and in China, and it is being demonstrated now in Czechoslovakia. For what is it that gives 10,000,000 Czechs the courage to say they will resist 70,000,000 Germans? It is that in the last analysis men will face death more readily to defend themselves than they will when they have to go over the top and attack. The will to resist draws upon the final thing in men, the will to live. But the will to attack is something that has to be worked up in most men, and can be sustained only if the attack succeeds.

• • • •

IN A GENERAL WAR now, both the nature of the issue (that is to say, the clear definition of Hitler's aggression) and the strategic position of Germany inside an encircling coalition of powers, make an essentially defensive policy the inevitable one. It is the policy which takes the fullest advantage of the allied position, their resources and their state of mind. It is the policy of resisting aggression until the aggression is exhausted.

• • • •

IF WAR is averted now, it will be because Hitler is at last convinced that this is the kind of war he would have to fight.

In Three Tongues

Berlin, Sept. 28 (AP).—German, English and French will be the languages used across the conference table tomorrow when Adolf Hitler, Benito Mussolini, Edouard Daladier and Nevfile Chamberlain conduct their talks.

Since the Italian Premier has an excellent command of German, no Italian interpreter will be present. Hitler's trusted English linguist, Dr. Paul Schmidt, who translated during the Hitler-Chamberlain conferences at Berchtesgaden and Godesberg, again will interpret. Mussolini also may avail himself of Schmidt's services in conversing with Chamberlain.

The French Ambassador, Andre Francois Poncet, who has a perfect command of German, on the other hand, has been ordered to proceed to Munich by Premier Daladier.

He's 'No Coward'

AMERICA LISTENED to the two voices—to Hitler's loud, blustering, belligerent, threatening war, relying on force. Twenty-four hours later we listened to Chamberlain, restrained, reasonable, unimpassioned, pleading for peace, calling for negotiation. One hopes that America prefers the civilization reflected by Chamberlain to the civilization—if we can call it that—reflected by Hitler.

Perhaps the best contribution Americans can make is not to be moved to emotion, which it was Hitler's purpose to stir, but rather to stand calm for the spirit of reason, which it was Chamberlain's purpose to appeal to. Perhaps we would do best to decline to be moved to any kind of emotion whatever, either to the applauding belligerence which Hitler was trying to stir up in Germany, or to the emotion of angry resentment he was likely to stir up in America and elsewhere. Perhaps, in our dedication to reason, we ought to refrain from using emotional words about the voice we did not like.

• • • •

BUT WE NEED not refrain from humor. And one touch of humor there was in Hitler's speech, decidedly unintended. When Hitler said "I never was a coward, and to prove it I am ready to shed the last drop of German blood." If the war comes, about the least likely person among 75,000,000 Germans to fall in battle will be Herr Adolf Hitler.

For Americans, to refrain from emotion is the best way, both for individual guidance and for national policy.

In the European situation there are serious lessons for America. They are lessons of a sort which can best be taken in by minds that remain calm. One lesson is that such situations as this do arise and always will, until such time as nations can settle their differences by peaceful means. That condition does not exist now.

LIFE, both of nations and if individuals, is full of such situations—one man's drive encountering another's resistance, one group's momentum encountering another's inertia, one nation's will to use force encountering another's reluctance to use force. Such collisions do arise and do come to a conclusion. If one side is willing to use force the other side must either succumb or be willing to use as much force as is necessary to overcome the aggressor's force. That is the dilemma that now faces Chamberlain and the democracies he reflects.

This is an unwelcome lesson to take in. The persons to whom it is most unwelcome are precisely those whose minds are the finer and better. They include the persons who think earnestly in terms of peace and neutrality and seek formulas for guaranteeing it. But there is no way to be certain we can remain at peace or remain neutral. To think that peace can be kept by any nation through any degree of mere determination to keep it is a fallacy which the existing condition should dissipate. If in the present situation negotiation prevails it will be precisely because Chamberlain and the democracies showed themselves willing to use whatever force might be necessary to resist Hitler's force.

No persons can look upon the world clearly and fail to realize that it is a world in which nations have conflicting interests and in which some are willing to use force. In such a world, peace is for the other nations an ideal difficult to attain.

THE SAME fallacy exists about another ideal, currently much prized in America, the ideal of security, including economic security, the ideal of escaping the hazards both of untoward forces and of chance. Some of our current urgent insistence for personal security is associated with the equally urgent insistence upon national peace. It expresses itself in a demand that the burden of war, if it comes, must be distributed with absolute equality. Property must be conscripted as well as citizens. No person shall come out at the end of war in more fortunate condition than any other person. That idea, carried to its logical end, would lead a man faced with demand for army service to say "I will enlist, but only upon condition of a guarantee that the bullets of the enemy shall be sprayed with absolute evenness upon every soldier alike."

Much is said and written just now about the necessity of being "realistic." Much of what is said is false. But we may by a clear-sighted consideration of the world as it exists salvage something of value if we recognize that both individual security and national immunity from war are ideals always to be kept before us but not possible of certain achievement.

There is no magic formula for either. All this remains as true today as it was when various Old Testament prophets said it.

Hitler Holds Back

By Barnet Nover

Europe Wins Another Respite

THE DRUMS of doom were already beginning to sound when, on Wednesday, Adolf Hitler decided to stay his hand. But the tumult of rejoicing over the achievement of a new respite from war is premature to say the least. The fever may have subsided from 106 to 105. But the patient is still very sick, and the ministrations of Hitler, Chamberlain, Mussolini and Daladier at Munich may not help him for long.

The fact is nonetheless of vast significance that, despite categorical pronouncements by the Fuehrer that the German die was cast so far as Czechoslovakia is concerned, he has drawn back. His mood of caution may be temporary. Another Berchtesgaden may have another Godesberg as sequel. Nonetheless there is no mistaking the circumstance that face to face with an overwhelming aggregation of force mobilized against the Third Reich, Hitler decided to retreat if only, as the French saying has it, to be able to jump further the next time.

IT IS PERHAPS the first time that Hitler has given any serious consideration to the possibility that his threats, frightening as they are, can, under certain circumstances, prove insufficient to achieve a triumph.

For months he has been told by his immediate entourage that Czechoslovakia could be overwhelmed without a struggle or, at most, a brief and easy one. For months the idea has been presented to him that neither Great Britain nor France nor Russia would intervene on Czechoslovakia's behalf if that little republic were attacked.

Such men as Joachim von Ribbentrop, the foreign minister, and Heinrich Himmler, head of the Gestapo, and others, have sedulously played the role of Lady Macbeth to Hitler's Thane of Cawdor. But their promptings only emphasized what was probably already in his mind.

OVER A PERIOD of five years he has won a succession of striking and bloodless victories in the field of foreign affairs. He smashed the disarmament conference, re-established conscription, fortified the Rhineland, destroyed the League's supervision of Danzig, intervened in Spain, annexed Austria.

Not one of these moves had met with more than half-hearted and utterly ineffectual opposition from the European democracies. Many of them had been opposed by his own military advisers. He had ignored the democratic powers. He had flouted the timorous experts of the Reichswehr. He was right and they were wrong. How often, one wonders, did Ribbentrop and Himmler say that during the last few months in talking to the Fuehrer about Czechoslovakia? There are yes-men in democracies; dictatorships encourage the type.

SINCE MARCH, to be sure, he has had warnings from France, from Russia, from Great Britain of a coalition that might be created against the Reich in the event of an attack on Czechoslovakia. But, in view of the Anglo-French record with regard to the Rhineland, Austria and Spain, these warnings could be discounted.

Perhaps the clinching proof of this was the capitulation of Great Britain and France to Hitler's demand for the cession of Sudeten territory. The reasons why this demand was met and why Great Britain and France forced Czechoslovakia to give her consent were eloquently and convincingly given by Premier Chamberlain in his House of Commons speech. For as the British statesman saw it the alternative to some concessions was war and war on a scale too vast to be viewed with anything but horror. Yet what Czechoslovakia, under terrible duress, agreed to cede to Germany was nothing as compared with what Hitler later demanded. The Franco-British plan did, at least, permit Czechoslovakia to survive as a viable state if one that more than ever would be forced to live under Germany's guns. It did, at least, provide some measure of protection to the minorities in the Sudetenland. The Godesberg demands would mean the complete destruction of the republic with no guarantees to anyone.

IT IS POSSIBLE that at Munich Hitler will recede from his Godesberg demands; that he will be content with less of Czechoslovak territory than he insisted upon at that time, and will also be willing to abandon his plan of immediate military occupation.

Such signs of moderation would undoubtedly please Chamberlain, who has pledged Great Britain to the supervision of the Franco-British plan, if that is necessary. It would please Mussolini, who for days has been trying to crowd into the center of the European picture, but with indifferent success. The successful role of "honest broker" would give him a diplomatic success he badly needs. It may not please Daladier quite so much for insofar as Czechoslovakia is weakened by the transfer of territory to Germany, France is weakened, too. But there may be little Daladier can do about it.

Hitler, of course, should be satisfied with the cession of territory, although by his speeches and by the propaganda that Goebbels has unleashed he has created high hopes that may not entirely be fulfilled.

But if he can't have a war he can always have a purge. The German people have given every evidence of not wanting a war. And they would probably be not very displeased over the liquidation of those in Hitler's entourage who, it could be said, have been egging the Fuehrer on to war.

But in the rejoicing at what would seem to be a peaceful issue of a dangerous crisis, the fact may be overlooked that a retreat from the Godesberg plan to something resembling the Berchtesgaden arrangement is a retreat to something which, not without reason, offended the conscience of mankind.

But all this is still in the realm of conjecture. For the time being the central fact is that by virtue of a strong, determined stand by Great Britain and France plus the eloquent and well-timed plea of President Roosevelt a calamity has been averted. The world's relief is understandable. Let us hope it proves more than temporary.

The European Crisis

Viewpoints Of The Public

Let's Have Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is quite evident that Herr Hitler is bluffing, but let's not encourage him by giving him an extra army. If Herr Hitler reads The Post of September 27 he will be sure to march on the Czechs. Let's have peace. G. R. LARSON.

Arlington, Va., Sept. 27.

Commendation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With all my heart I thank you for your splendid editorials on the present European situation, in particular your editorial of September 24, "Speaking of Betrayals." It was one of the most timely and courageous statements I have ever read and an honor to American journalism.

It think it was Emerson who said, "My belief is that the honor of a nation is upheld by small groups of men and women who have the character to look back."

Thank you again, and every healthy-minded American must thank you. JOHN J. QUEALLY.

Washington, Sept. 26.

"Speaking of Betrayals"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From the bottom of my heart I feel like shouting "Long live the famous free press." Yes, the press that is free to gold. The press that is so much like the shyster lawyer that is paid dearly in gold to make a known criminal look as an innocent and abused lamb. You are very generous in putting, or placing, the blame for what is happening in Europe today on the shoulders of Uncle Sam by your editorial, "Speaking of Betrayals." The same blast was launched from London two days earlier, after your attack on England and France.

We have heard so much about gold coming here from those two countries, so now we know it has begun to work. We, the greatest country in sportsmanship, of fair trials and so on, laugh at the defense we accuse before the trial is begun. As a rule a jury that has formed an opinion is discharged as the American public will discharge, with a shrug of the shoulders, all the lies printed.

Speaking of betrayals is correct. The free press has destroyed the American people by inciting them to a war that is not of their concern. I wonder how many editorial writers would shoulder a gun and go to the front lines—I mean where people are killed—not the front lines of a newspaper. For whom is the American press working, for America or for foreign countries? I answer, for neither—merely for gold.

A. CARTA.

Washington, Sept. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I must not let another hour pass without writing you of my profound appreciation of the splendid editorial which appeared in the Saturday morning issue of The Washington Post under the title, "Speaking of Betrayals."

You put into beautiful and forceful words the very thoughts I had expressed a good many times during the past week.

I am mailing this editorial today to Tacoma, Wash., to an ardent friend and supporter of the League of Nations. When I tell you that a photograph of President Wilson in his college gown, presented to me when he was president of Princeton University, still hangs over my desk you will understand something of the depth of my interest in and appreciation of what you said.

CHARL ORMOND WILLIAMS.

Poetic Justice

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see the annual discussion of the starling problem has begun. A sure means of putting an end to the nuisance has just come to hand. Only as late as yesterday, in fact, by short wave, from Germany.

Nothing more is required than to surround our public buildings by phonographs, all playing the same record—a transcription of Adolf Hitler's "last-demand" speech. I acknowledge a starling may know little if any German, but he is an European and can't help but be familiar with the sound of Old World rabble-rousing.

After listening for a few hours to Hitler's boasting rant and bluster, interlarded with nauseating tirades on how President Benes has oppressed the Germanic race (omitting any mention of blood purges and concentration camps, however), the starlings will become desperately homesick and leave us forthwith on beating wing for a nonstop flight to Berlin.

What poetic justice!

ROGER GISH McDARE.

In Reply to a Nazi

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to the preposterous letter which you printed on September 27, from Carl A. Neibling, who presumes to head a league in America which can be nothing but anti-American, in which he castigates the "British-controlled" press of the United States, and eulogizes the German "patience" in the present Hitler-precipitated crisis in Europe, may I suggest that it is high time he and his ilk were given active impetus on their way back to the dictator-controlled press of Deutschland. Fat chance he'd have of getting such a letter published there under similar circumstances. I suppose he means stifle free speech here to make way for "kultur."

What this country needs is a purge with the Nazis on the receiving end. Neibling's gospel of hate is quite consistent with that of Der Fuehrer in this mess he has been the sole cause of in Europe. A true German leader to free the people from their present yoke would be a Godsend. From the pass to which things have come, it looks as though we didn't do a thorough enough job in 1918.

OVERSEAS WORLD WAR VETERAN.

Falls Church, Sept. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Neibling's letter calling Mr. Chamberlain a "buzzard" and his desire to have seen him killed shows clearly his Nazi training. Just the sort of man we would be pleased to see return to his own homeland and one wonders why he does not go. To slay his fellow man is his slogan just as Hitler slew Strasser, Roehm and countless others. Unlike Claudius, Hitler does not like to hear groans and see blood while dining, so he leaves it to his aide Goering to carry out this ghastly act.

He had better not allow his tongue to slip against his own terrorist. I. V.

Washington, Sept. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Freedom of expression through the public press has reached high tide when a man can speak of the British statesman who flew to Germany to endeavor by all possible means to avoid war as "that old buzzard." Just now, when the spirits and ideals of men are to be tried, probably, as they have never before been tried, our country should know who's who as to attitude. By this I do not mean that we should discount a man for his honest convictions, but where such prejudices exist as is shown by your correspondent, there is an attitude which connotes much more than it denotes. The ax is at the root of the tree. Much more definitely than in 1914, the lines of demarcation are clear.

Newspapermen and readers must expect just now to have thrust upon them every sort of panacea, abuse of national leaders, reasons why this or that has happened, "and it might have been" by the thousands, but name-callers who indulge in such terms as the man used who wrote in your issue of the 27th cannot be in accord with the spirit of our Nation. Differ we may as to attitude and methods, but decency makes its demands in every controversy. I do not expect everybody to have the same high opinion of the man who took the initiative in trying to stave off what seemed to be inevitable war; but the warning that "we judge not that we be not judged" still holds. If an inevitable war brings to the surface such violently differing opinions as The Post is now displaying in its "Letters From People," one good at least may come of a great evil—we shall know that in our own Nation we have elements that in an emergency would defeat any just attempt correctly to gauge international affairs. J. O. KNOTT.

Washington, Sept. 27.

Why Should We Care?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As the war fever of the Old World rises, the U. S. A. should keep cool and refuse to become involved in the troubles of Europe and Asia. What do we care about the Czechs, Spaniards and Chinese?

Let Germany take all of Europe and Japan all of Asia. Let Japan drive the American oil companies out of Asia, Germany and Italy take away our South American trade, Mexico seize our oil investments, Cuba our sugar plantations. Why should we pull other nations' chestnuts out of the fire? Did not the allies refuse to pay the loans we made them and besides we have no business protecting our capitalists in their exploitation.

All of this insidious propaganda suggesting that our ships have the right to sail the seas, our citizens to protection of their investments, our factories to sell their goods abroad, our missionaries to convert the heathen and our citizens to decide whether Dictator X represents a threat to our existence is the work of capitalists and communists who want to protect their respective interests. And the Jews, too, by their insistence on defiling the Nordic race are doing their part to foment trouble. If Hitler asks for the self-determination of the Germans in certain sections of the U. S. A., such as Michigan and Wisconsin, Mr. Roosevelt can fly to Gooseberg, Germany, to negotiate the matter and if he will not give us at least ten days to hand it over, then we can call on our local Nazi Fuehrer, who protests his love for America, to help us get at least eight days.

The main thing is to keep our great Nation out of war, our ships off the seas and our boys and merchants at home and above all keep ever before the minds of our people the fact that we never made a dollar out of the last war. So let's be true to the flag and before going to war be sure that we are going to make some money out of it. ADAM EARTHWORM.

Washington, Sept. 27.

Copying Hitler

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are hearing so much these days of saving democracies that one might question the sincerity of a government that condones within its own gates a replica of the oppression and persecution of citizens which it deplores so loudly when coming from abroad.

We observe the Bill of Rights trampled in the dust, the amendments and their guarantees scornfully walked over without the bother of trampling. We pursue the will and purpose of the decencies of the Constitution to find the principle flouted mid sardonic laughter, and come to wonder whether we are copying Mr. Hitler, or Hitler is copying us.

I sometimes wonder if the citizens discriminated against in Germany would care to exchange the despotism that I have known under the Government of my country. I believe not.

And ere we rush to the aid of the Czechs, our Government might give a thought to its citizens at home living under tyrannies of confiscation of rights and properties against which it utters no word of protest, and to their supplications for sanctuary no shadow of protection is forthcoming. Broken pledges and scraps of paper are fast training American citizens for their ultimate ruler.

FLORENCE EWING STEELE.

Washington, Sept. 27.

Predicts Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anybody whose judgment (provided he has any) is not completely dulled by prejudice can clearly discern that there will be no war in Europe at the present time. The reasons are obvious.

Germany, strong, united and fully prepared, shows firm determination in her policy, while—as Lowell Thomas, the brilliant commentator, correctly states—wild confusion reigns supreme in France and England. It is quite evident that neither of these two nations really want to go to war.

To be sure, England is sending "stern" warnings to Germany (she has done so for the last three months), and France indulged in a part-mobilization. But the English people—except the Communists in that country—are ardently for peace, and France knows that it would take her many months to break through the German "Siegfried" line and that she would be seriously threatened from the south by a strong Italy. Russia is an entirely uncertain quantity, practically negligible.

So Germany will take the Sudeten area, which has already been ceded to her, and that will end the matter.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Okay, Adolf!

March, Hitler!
March to your destruction!
March to the end of civilization and the death of the world!
March to the extermination of love and kindness!
March to the desolation of your country!
March to eternal darkness!

• • • •

You have made the threat!
You have boasted of your personal power and the invincibility of your land.
You have glorified the sword.
You have put your faith in the mailed fist.
You have aroused the hatreds of the World War.
You have brought back the madness of 1914.

• • • •

March, Hitler!
March at the head of your armies!
March as the first soldier, fulfilling your radio boast.
It would be quite a spectacle.
It would give us an unprecedented picture . . .
A war lord exposing himself to danger.
A radio wonder man living up to his words.

• • • •

March, Adolf!
March to the end of national morality.
March to the scrapping of treaties . . .
To the burning of pledges . . .
To the end of the plighted word!
March to the roar of the mob!
March to the hue and cry!
March to the howls of fanaticism!
March to the bottomless pit!

• • • •

Forward, Fuehrer!
To the glorification of epithets,
Of consuming wrath!
Forward with mercilessness!
Forward with the fanatics!
Forward with falsifications!

• • • •

March, Hitler!
March to the slaughter of innocents!
March to the cries of the tortured!
March to the screams of the helpless!
March to the eternal fires!
March to the end of the Brotherhood of Man!
March to the extermination of love!
March to the end of restraint!
March to the end of order!
March to universal chaos!

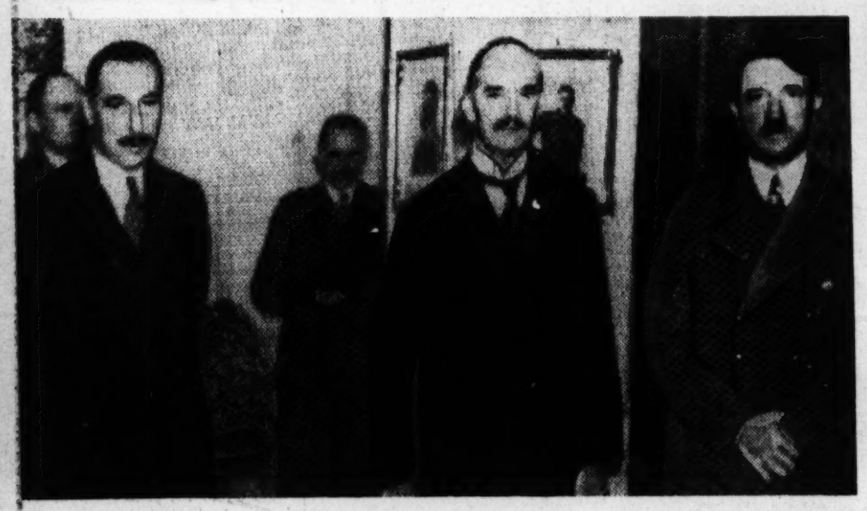
1 STRIVING FOR PEACE, Prime Minister Chamberlain flew to Germany September 15 for his first conference with Adolf Hitler, at which time he appeared quite hopeful. He is shown acknowledging cheers of a crowd upon his arrival at Berchtesgaden.



2 CHAMBERLAIN appeared dejected following his second meeting with the Fuehrer, held at Godesberg, when Hitler gave his "final terms." From left, Sir Nevile Henderson, British Ambassador to Berlin, Chamberlain and Hitler.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl of 13 Asks How to Reclaim Divorced Mother From Dissipated Association With Naval Officer

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am only beginning my fourteenth year. Two years ago my father and mother were divorced, having been separated for some time before. Circumstances are such that they have to live in the same house with my grandparents. I share a room with my mother. We have had a great deal of debt in recent years, resulting from mother spending her little bit of money foolishly. But she has always provided for me, going without things herself to do so. Believe me, when I can earn my own money I will repay her every cent. I love her dearly and want her to have everything she has been denied.

Last year mother met a high-ranking naval officer, several years her senior. He seemed extremely interested and took her many nice places where she had never been before. Before meeting him, she was very considerate and spent nearly every evening with me, but now everything is so different. For the last six or eight months she has been drinking, not moderately but heavily. She has stayed out night after night without a word until several times I was nearly frantic. Sometimes she would telephone in the early morning in an intoxicated condition and ask to speak to me, and when my grandparents refused to call me, she would curse something terrible.

It may be that she stays out because of my father's being here, but he is a good soul. He is unemployed and helps around the house every minute. He is very brilliant and a big help to me. This evening my mother called and spoke to me terribly. She has never been cruel to me, but now she shows signs of almost hating me at times. I don't understand it.

This naval officer has bought her clothes and given her money to come to see him when he is away (which she has done, several times). I do not believe this is right, and it is interfering with my health, schoolwork and disposition. What can I do to help my mother? How can I bring her closer to God? I am faithful to my church, even sing in the choir, and it hurts me never to see my mother attend. Please tell me what to do.

ANXIOUS DAUGHTER.

Source of Help

DEAR A. D.: Everyone of decent sensibility who reads your appeal is going to offer a prayer for the happy solution of your problem, and that in itself will help much—and it may even be that your mother and the "high ranking naval officer" will read it and realize the enormity of the crime they are committing against a defenseless innocent and do what they can to repair the damage they have done.

What you, personally, can do to help your mother is this: Keep to your present path of rectitude, becoming a progressively stronger, finer and gentler personality—the sort of person who is the shelter in storm for all weaker natures; maintain your attitude of steadfast loving-kindness toward her; and develop, with psychiatric assistance, a clear understanding of the reason for her behavior. Knowledge is power, you know, and the greater your grasp of the underlying causes of her conduct, the greater will be your power to deal with her in a truly helpful way.

I want you to take your problem to the Child Guidance Clinic of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, 1464 Columbia road northwest, where you will be given a most sympathetic and understanding hearing. (Make an appointment by telephoning ADams 1033.) All young persons up to the age of 16 years are eligible to bring their perplexities of an emotional or social relationship sort to this clinic.

The instruction you will receive there will help you not only to understand your mother's side of the problem, but to bear your own part of it with a happier heart and a less burdened spirit, as well. I think your mind will be set at rest concerning the question of whether or not she loves you as much as she once did. I am sure she does; and that her seeming hatred of recent date is an inverted expression of self-contempt; a defiant projection of her own feeling of guilt and remorse at having let you down. All of us hate ourselves when we have done a hateful thing, but most of us find it unbearably hard to face our own scorn and we are apt to look about for a plausible and convenient whipping boy.

I think that is what your mother is doing in this case. And I think she fixes on you for two reasons. One, because you are the person whose image is uppermost in her mind when she does wrong; the person she loves most deeply and inescapable. And, two, because while she anticipates and dreads society's and the family's wrath and scorn, she fears yours most of all, and hence seizes on you as the symbol of every outraged pointing finger. I think her attacks upon you are her hysterical retorts to the accusations of her own conscience.

Of all the unhappy participants in this wretched situation, I daresay your mother is, at present, unhappiest of all. We might find it easier to forgive her, to bear with her, to help her, if we knew what emotional frustration, what painful, fateful distortion of her life plans, drove her to this unfortunate alliance with a man who is leading her so far astray. And because I am sure the Child Guidance Clinic will prove to be your wise and constant friend in leading you through the mazes of such considerations, I am urging you, again, to take your problem there.

Guard's Red Gay Complement To Black

Paris (U.P.)—As always, black predominates for daytime wear in Molyneux's new all clothes collections; but sports clothes lean noticeably toward brilliant materials and tweeds. Such colors as "Guard's red" make a gay complement for black, and there are many spring-suggesting tones of violet, "Hereptine" pink and "Picasso" blue—a new vivid blue-green shade.

Black morning dresses have embroidered necklines taken from Javanese necklines; and typical slim straight Molyneux dresses combine two shades of the same color or two contrasting shades in diagonal effects. A large series of "don't-dress-for-dinner" dresses in new crepe materials are slimly cut with the elaborate Javanese necklines in brilliant embroidery of metal threads, mirrors and jewels. Short-skirted suits are made of beautiful lames and brocades.

The Fall Suit in Two Moods—Soft and Smart

THE MUCH TALKED OF "soft" influence in fall suits is exemplified in the three-piece ensemble worn by Anita Louise, movie actress, above, left. The costume, especially suitable for a college or business girl's wardrobe, is of beige wool, though it would be equally effective in a darker shade. The jacket has a high collarless neckline. The three-quarter length coat is of the same fabric. The smart tailored suit, at left, is a Paris creation of shepherd's plaid in beige and brown with a light red silk scarf adding color. The hat is beige felt tri

U. S. Women Less 'Hippy' Than Others

French Like Embonpoint Reich Taboos Slimming Even Garbo Was Plump

By Ida Jean Kain.

SO "AMERICAN women are notoriously hippy and are expected to pounce upon the bell-shaped silhouette." You may have noticed that little indictment of our figures in a recent issue of a nationally circulated weekly. We don't know how you feel, but we resent it!

If the hipline were to be made an international issue, the American woman would not—as this fashion forecaster seems to imply—have any reason to feel that she is in the same class as a piece of Grand Rapids overstuffed. By the side of some of the voluptuous beauties of other countries she would look pretty slim. Pretty slim!

French Like Embonpoint

For all her chic, the French belle is not particularly streamlined. In fact, the French incline to the gallant view that a little embonpoint is more flattering to the feminine figure. And the French women themselves admit they are nothing like as athletic as the Americans, and when the hip measurement is under consideration that's a significant point.

While the German women are athletic, there is a national taboo on any fashions which might influence these lassies to adopt streamlining, and they are definitely on the buxom order. Certainly no one could call the Italian beauties svelte. Or, for that matter, the Hollanders, or the Swedes. So how can anyone come out and say that we are "notoriously hippy?"

Fall Suits Are Ladylike, Show Dressmaker Touch

SUITS have gone feminine this fall. Even the manish tailored versions have been softened by the new bloused line in either front or back, and the dressy type suit has a distinctly feminine cut or fluffy fur trimming on sleeves, pockets or collar. Fur pockets and high collarless necklines are the newst innovations in suits.

White lynx adorns the front stole or revers of many English tweed suits. Persian lamb fur fabric is used for a top coat over a black tweed three-piece suit in one of the newest dressy developments. The soft wool dress with short fur jacket is another version of the feminized suits. A sheer wool coat with skunk or Persian trimmed tuxedo, satin top long sleeves dress made along slimming lines, give elegance to the costume suit. Brief, bulky fur jackets heighten the feminine line of both the new two and three piece suits.

Great diversity of styles and fabrics is found in suits. Bold plaids, gay checks, are used for top jackets, matched up to one color of fancy tweed or the lumber jacket worn with a contrasting colored skirt are colorful notes of the new suits. Peg-top skirts, made with stitched tucks like the pleats in men's custom-made trousers are smart in the two-piece models for the college age group.

The latest three-piece suit comes in three different styles. It may be an all matching tweed or fabric. That is, the skirt, jacket and top coat may be of the same color and material. Wooden buttons, a high neck and funnel shaped pockets are interesting details of a fancy herringbone tweed suit consisting of jacket, topcoat and skirt. Wide shoulders, tapering sleeves of topcoat, fitted high neck, collarless jacket and narrow skirt are smart details of a plain type suit. The matched suits are practical, for the jacket and skirt may be worn as a separate suit without the top coat, or co-ordinated with a plaid or checked cape.

Another arrangement consists of a brilliant plaid topcoat or cape, worn over a matched jacket and skirt. This is the high style development of fall.

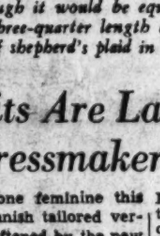
A third style is the hip length, three-quarter length or full length fur coats or capes worn with a matching or contrasting jacket and skirt of cloth fabric.

A Woman's New York

by Alice Hughes

New York, Sept. 28.

ONE BY one the new shows come in—"Missouri Legend," which is about Jesse James, and in which our old chum, Dorothy Gish, gives an excellent show, and "Sing Out the News," an irreverent revue which leans to the Left, as the political cant has it. Yet the new show season has not threatened the hangovers from the last, and the greatest of these is "I Married an Angel," the Rodgers-Hart musical comedy which introduced that gorgeous ballerina, Vera Zorina, to our little city.



ALICE HUGHES.

Maybe I have mentioned this phenomenon here before. If so, it is chiefly because my susceptible spouse visits the Shubert Theater regularly each month to feast his rheumy old eyes on that lovely girl—and I suppose to enjoy the tunes, too. His August report carried the unhappy tidings that Zorina was putting on poundage, but now, in September, he brings word that she is again streamlined and is as slender and ethereal as she was on opening night, when she bowled over all gentlemen present as the seraph who comes to earth and marries Dennis King. He also reminds me what a tremendous influence a hit show like "Angel," which still has standees at nearly all performances, brings to bear on the whole surrounding territory.

Every good restaurant near a success has a big season—the famous Sardi's, which is just across the street from Zorina & Co., has had the biggest summer of its existence, and the good Vincent Sardi's smile is wide and permanent. Nearby bars thrive handsomely on the customers who dash out at intermission for a quick one, or two. Every business in the area booms while a big hit is packing us in. The show is the pebble in the pond, and the waves touch all the nearby businessmen. Even the beggars and gum sellers do a thriving business!

When some girls walk down the New York streets these days, they tinkle, thus frightening horses and alarming old ladies. Charlotte of Paris has just launched bracelets and necklaces of miniature cowbells made of gold, silver or copper. Very cute, but a bit startling to the quiet type.

The Gentler Sex

The Old Friends

"Oh, it's so GRAND to see you!"

"It's so grand to see you, too. I've got a million things to talk to you about."

"I'm just fine. How are you?"

"I've got oceans of things to tell you. Well, how are you, anyway?"

"Just fine. Oh, I'm so thrilled to see you. I know I'll never get done talking. How's Joe?"

"He's just fine. How's Ed?"

He's fine too. Well, honestly, I just can't begin to tell you how glad I am to see you."

"I'm certainly thrilled to see you. You know it's a funny thing—as you get older, you just don't make friends the way you used to."

"I know—friends you can really talk to. Really I've got so many things to talk to you about, I just don't know where to begin."

"That's the way with me. How are all the family?"

"They're just fine. How's your family?"

"Just fine. Really it seems so long since I've seen you. Why don't you ever write?"

"Well, I've just been so busy—you know how it is. Anyway I just had so much to say I knew it was no use to try to put in letter. I just thought I'd wait till we could talk it all out."

"That's the way with me. I've thought of writing so many times and then I'd say to myself, 'Well, I'll just wait till I see her and then we can catch up on everything.'"

"Honestly it's so grand to see you. How's your mother?"

"She's just fine. How's your mother?"

"Just fine. You know there are many things I want to ask you—do you ever see any of the old gang?"

"No, I haven't seen any of them in years. Do you ever see any of them?"

"No, I'm just so busy—you know how it is. Really it seems so good to talk to you. Isn't it terrible about the war?"

"Perfectly awful. How do you like New York?"

"Just fine. How do you like Washington?"

"Just fine."

"Well, it's certainly grand to see you. I've got so much to talk to you about I'm so afraid I'll forget something——"

"That's the way with me. You know what I wish I'd done? I wish I'd put everything down in a notebook——"

"That's what I ought to have done, too. I know I'll never get around to everything."

"Well, it certainly is wonderful to see you. How's Joe?"

"He's just fine. How's Ed?"

"Just fine. Really it's so grand to be able to talk to you."

"It's grand to talk to you too. Say, did you ever see such perfectly marvelous weather?"

Margaret Lewis Byrd Will Be Widely Feted

Mrs. Alexander Gordon to Entertain
Robert Bartons Also to Be Hosts
Girl's Ancestry Long and Distinguished

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

WITH DEBUTS in three cities and a number of other events already on her calendar for the winter, Miss Margaret Lewis Byrd, of Winchester, Va., probably will be the most widely feted bud in the 1938-39 crop. Certainly no other on the Capital list thus far is planning to blossom three times before the year ends: and no other has yet been launched into such a continual round of parties as Miss Byrd has been enjoying in the past few weeks.

HOPE R. MILLER.

From the time she makes her first bow in Richmond on Friday, November 25, until her Washington debut during the Christmas holidays, her schedule will be crowded. One of its high lights, of course, will be that ancient and honored institution, the Bachelors' Cotillion in Baltimore on the first Monday in December. But as if that thrilling event weren't enough for one evening, a second also is being planned for Miss Byrd. Before the dance she will be guest of honor at a dinner for a hundred guests given by Mrs. Alexander Gordon, of Baltimore.

On the second Monday in December, Miss Byrd will attend the Richmond german, and again she will be doubly feted. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Barton will entertain at a dinner in her honor that evening, their guests including the cream of Richmond's debutante set.

The exact date of Miss Byrd's Capital bow has not yet been decided, but since her aunt, Mrs. Henry De La Warr Flood, plans to present her here some time during the Christmas holidays, chances are she will be included in many of the deb parties around that time.

MRS. RICHARD E BYRD, grandmother of the debutante, is having a busy time of it this season, and has all summer. Ever since her pretty granddaughter was graduated from Gunston Hall here last June, the Byrd home in Winchester has been the scene of one party after another. Long considered one of the leading ladies of Virginia society, Mrs. Byrd also has a host of friends in Washington and Baltimore and many have driven to Winchester in the past few weeks to enjoy her hospitality. Her most recent party, a dinner a few nights ago, drew among the guests Mrs. Charles Consolvo, of Baltimore, the former Miss Mary Byrd, of Millwood, Va., who is spending several weeks at Eventide, her estate in Clarke County; Mrs. Mackenzie Tabb, Judge Grey Williams, William H. Lipscomb, Walter Pinkard, of Baltimore, and Thomas Bolling Byrd, father of the debutante.

Another recent fete for Miss Byrd was a dance given by Miss Ann Kerr Russell, of Winchester, on Saturday evening. The following night the debutante was in Baltimore to attend the buffet supper given by Mrs. Thomas Willing Balch and Miss Agnes Whiting Wise in compliment to two Baltimore buds, Miss Mary Havens Roberts and Miss Rosette Arklay King.

Yes, she's on her way to a brilliant season, is Miss Byrd. You'll be hearing more and more about her—this slim brunette whose family tree stems from such famous roots as Elizabeth Washington Lewis, sister of George Washington; Charles James Faulkner, United States Minister to the court of Louis Napoleon, and Pocahontas. A complete list of her noted ancestors would fill a book, but even the briefest account of her famous family are incomplete without mention of three of the most important Byrds—William Byrd, of Westover, founder of Virginia's capital city; and her two uncles, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, and Senator Harry Flood Byrd.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Mr. and Mrs. John M. Gross have arrived in Washington to spend some time. The former Laura Curtis, whose 1925 F Street Club is a social center, and her husband will be on hand for the buffet luncheon on Saturday that will re-open the club for the season . . . Also on Saturday, the club will be the setting for another important event—Mrs. Chip Robert has issued invitations for a cocktail party from 5 to 8 o'clock. The function is one of the many on the social calendar in connection with the Inter-American Horse Show. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard are back in Washington after a summer on Cape Cod and have re-opened their home in Georgetown. Their cottage at the resort withstood ravages of the recent hurricane while those of many residents nearby were swept away . . . Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, who was at Watch Hill, R. I., during the disaster, returned to Washington yesterday.

George Boncescos Are to Return To Washington

Friends who said good-by to M. and Mme. George Boncesco last spring will be pleased and surprised to hear that M. Boncesco has been ordered back to Washington by the Rumanian government.

Formerly financial counselor of the Rumanian legation here, M. Boncesco was transferred to the home office in Bucharest last April, and was later ordered to London. He had served in Washington 11 years and both he and his wife, who sports a monocle, were very popular here.

M. and Mme. Boncesco are expected to arrive in Washington early next month.

Mrs. Edge Will Visit Her Home in Jersey

Mrs. Walter Evans Edge, who with Mr. Edge returned earlier in the week from Europe, will visit her home in Ventnor, N. J., before coming to Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Edge are now at the Ambassador Hotel in New York, where they will be joined by their children, Walter Edge, jr., and Miss Camilla Edge, who have been at Mrs. Edge's home in Bath, Me. Mr. Edge will return to the Capital shortly.

Fenton Fadely Puts Horses in Piping Rock

Fenton Fadeley, who has walked off with many a blue ribbon at Capital meets, has entered several entries in the thirty-sixth annual Piping Rock Horse Show which opened yesterday at Locust Valley, Long Island, and will continue until Saturday.

Capt. Kenneth G. Hoge, of the War Department, is also an exhibitor in the show, which attracts the cream of New York society.

Guest of Countess Roberti; To Leave Soon

Hessler Studio.

MISS MARGARET MINNIGERODE, of New York, who is visiting Countess Roberti, wife of the Secretary of the Italian Embassy. Miss Minnigerode will leave the end of this week for her home in New York. Later she plans to go to Tucson, Ariz., for an extended stay.

Raushenbushes Hortons' Guests

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Raushenbush, who recently returned from an exciting three months in Czechoslovakia, Italy and Germany, are staying with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Horton, of Georgetown, while looking about for a house. Both are well known here. Mr. Raushenbush served as secretary of the munitions investigation. During their travels last summer they gathered material for a book on the fate of the middle classes under fascism, which will be published by the Yale University Press.

Tomorrow Mr. and Mrs. Raushenbush will be honored at a cocktail party which Thomas Tarleau will give in the main lobby of the Westchester.

Among those expected to attend are Representative and Mrs. Louis Ludlow, Miss Dorothy Detzer, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Libby, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Green, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Duggan, Gerard Reilly, Miss Eleanor Fahey, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Vermilyea, Miss Mary Anderson, Isadore Lubin, Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Jackson, Hubert Herring and Robert Wohlfort.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Richard Boeckel, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Yost, W. W. Woelke, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Mullen, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Tolles, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Smith, Mr. and Mrs. William Stone and Mr. and Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel.

Secretary Ickes And Wife Plan Trip to Coast

The Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold L. Ickes will leave early next month for the West Coast. They will visit Chicago, St. Louis and Reno en route, and in the latter city the Secretary will address the National Reclamation Association at its meeting there.

After a stay in San Francisco, the Secretary and Mrs. Ickes will return to Washington, arriving here late in October or early in November.

Luncheon Honors Sra. de los Rios

Senora de los Rios, wife of the Spanish Ambassador, Dr. Fernando de los Rios, was the guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday at the Fairfax Hotel. Her hostess was Mrs. Leo A. Diamond, and the assistant hostess was Mrs. Theresa Liss, executive secretary of the American Relief Ship for Spain Committee.

Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel gave a brief talk on the things being accomplished by the Washington friends of Spanish democracy, especially stressing the relief ship.

Miss Hoover Bound for D. C.

Miss Lora-Marie Hoover, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Edward Hoover, of Washington, will arrive in New York, October 7, from Europe. She will come directly here, where her parents live on California street.

Since her departure from the Philippines, August 3, Miss Hoover has sailed through waters near southern Asia and Egypt and on to Italy, where she visited in Florence. Later, she went on to Paris.

In Manilla, Miss Hoover was the guest of her sister-in-law and brother, Lieut. and Mrs. Warren R. Hoover. She stayed there for almost a year. She is returning home to resume her college studies.

Gustins to Live In Oklahoma After Honeymoon

Now on a trip to Monterey, Mexico, Dr. and Mrs. James William Gustin, jr., whose wedding took place Saturday, September 24 in Oklahoma City, Okla., will make their home there on their return. They are both formerly of Washington.

The bride, who before her marriage, was Miss Betty Huntington Wilson, is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William H. Wilson, of Charles Town, W. Va. Dr. Gustin is a son of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Gustin, of Bay City, Mich., and was chief resident in surgery for two years at Garfield Memorial Hospital in the Capital. A graduate of Alma College of George Washington University Medical School, he is now chief resident in surgery and pathology at the University State Hospital in Oklahoma City.

Gerard Hartzogs Will Reside Here

At the conclusion of an extended honeymoon through the mountains of Virginia and North Carolina, Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Hartzog will live at 2807 North Gleve road, Arlington.

The bride, the former Miss Laura Elizabeth Calms, is the daughter of William Pratt Calmes, of Stillwater, Okla. Mr. Hartzog, is the son of Mrs. Elizabeth Lancaster-Hartzog, of Charleston. Their wedding took place recently at the Warrenton Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Julian Lake officiated at the ceremony, which was attended only by members of the families and a few close friends.

Mrs. Hartzog attended college both in Washington and Oklahoma, and has traveled abroad extensively. She is a member of Eta Upsilon Gamma sorority and the President Monroe Chapter of the D. A. R. in Washington.

Mr. Hartzog was graduated from Bailey Military Institute, Wolford College and the University of South Carolina. He formerly practiced at the South Carolina bar and is now attorney in the chief counsel's office, Treasury Department. He is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

Gordons Have Son

Mr. and Mrs. Basil Gordon, of Baltimore, announce the birth of a son on Sunday evening at the Hospital for Women of Maryland, in Baltimore. Mrs. Gordon is the former Miss Helen F. Williams. Mr. Gordon is the son of Mrs. George Barnett, widow of the wartime commandant of the Marine Corps.

The bride is the former Miss Ann Elizabeth Hannan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hannan, of Washington, and Mr. McCausland is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. McCausland, of Arlington.

The Rev. Dennis Keenan officiated at their wedding. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white taffeta gown and a tulle veil attached to a headdress of orange blossoms. She carried gardenias, orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Geraldine Hoffman was maid of honor, and the Misses Dorothy Hargett, Betty Peake and Olga Rinker were bridesmaids. Robert McCausland was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Ernest MacInnes, Charles Rinker, jr., Alexander Long and Pierce Bragg.

A reception at the bride's home followed the ceremony.

Announce Birth

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. FitzGerald, jr., are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son September 18, at Georgetown Hospital. Mrs. FitzGerald is the former Miss Reginia Dorsch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Michael Dorsch.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

JULIA DELL ZIMMERMAN'S wedding on Saturday to Frank Roberts Mead, jr., of Hartford, Conn., will have a Washington touch, even if it is taking place in St. Matthews, S. C. Mrs. S. Kent Legare, sister of the future bride, recently ordered a large batch of Mrs. Mark Bristol's famous hams sent down for the party to be given for the couple tomorrow evening.

DUDLEY HARMON.

The utmost simplicity will mark Saturday's ceremony. Miss Zimmerman will have as her only attendants her two little nieces, Anne and Alberta Legare, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Legare, with whom the future bride made her home here for several years. She was presented to society in the Capital, but Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Zimmerman, her parents, live in St. Matthews.

MR. AND MRS. MEADE and daughter, Miss Barbara Meade, arrived last week from their home in London, and were met in New York by Mrs. Legare and her sister. The Legares will return to Washington immediately after the wedding and will bring the Meades with them for a visit.

Miss Zimmerman met her future husband in Connecticut, where the Legares have a summer home near Simsbury. He came from England to work in an aircraft company in Hartford.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Bristol, incidentally, will return tomorrow to their home on Massachusetts avenue after a series of visits in New England and Canada.

EVIDENTLY a lot of other people are still away. The dining room of a smart Capital hotel rather resembled a desert yesterday at lunch time, though it is usually crowded with chattering members of society. Yesterday the men were in the majority. We saw Thurman Arnold, with his inevitable cigar; Joseph Tumulty, Stewart McDonald with several cronies, and William McAvoy.

Among the very few women present were Mrs. Louis Caldwell, Mrs. Lawrence Turnure, who is visiting her mother, Mrs. William C. Gwynn and Mrs. Helen Allen. The latter, a niece of Mrs. Sidney Cloman, well known to society here, has frequently visited in the Capital in years past. A tall, stunning brunette, Mrs. Allen was wearing an ensemble of gray wool with revers of black and a black hat with brim that swooped away into space. She came here early in the summer and hopes to spend the winter in Washington, serving as secretary to Admiral Bristol. Her aunt, Mrs. Cloman, has been in Paris through all these nerve-wracking days, but was expected to sail yesterday on the Queen Mary for this country. Mrs. Cloman has given up her apartment at the Cordova and will probably spend the winter in California, as she did last year.

FLORENCE HARRIS has returned to Washington after visits in New England. She spent the early part of the summer with Mrs. Henry Rowland at her place on Witch Island in Maine, stayed with friends in Connecticut, and later was the house guest of Caroline Cecil at Falmouth, on Cape Cod . . . Nathan Bartlett is in town just for a day or two en route to California for a month. He landed in New York earlier in the week on the Normandie after a summer with the American Committee of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. In this capacity he conducted seminars for students from many countries and Geneva, and also visited London, Paris and Rome. In the British capital he stayed with Lieut. Robert Campbell, who left Washigton a year ago to be Assistant Naval Attache at our embassy there. He was formerly commander of the Sequoia, the yacht of Secretary of the Navy Swanson.

THE WPA is helping swanky Newport get back on its feet after the hurricane. Already rehabilitation work has started, and at a special meeting of the governors of Baileys Beach, it was decided to rebuild the beach, which is now a total loss. At least $150,000 is expected to be spent, and it is reported that the new Baileys Beach will differ considerably from the old. The ironic note is that the beach applied for hurricane insurance several years ago, but was unable to get it.

Dr. Manson-Bahr, of London, Entertained at Luncheon

Event Is Held at Army and Navy Club
Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn Is the Host
Briton Is Lecturing at G. W. School of Medicine

Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, acting dean of the George Washington University School of Medicine, entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Army and Navy Club in honor of Dr. Philip Manson-Bahr, of London.

Earlier the honor guest, who is director of the clinical division of the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, delivered his first lecture in the series sponsored by the Smith-Reed-Russell Medical Society at the opening exercises of the School of Medicine. His subject was "Tropical Medicine and Colonial Development."

Among those present at the luncheon were Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of the university; Dr. Charles R. Mann and Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, of the board of trustees; Admiral Perceval S. Rossiter, surgeon general of the Navy; Gen. Charles R. Reynolds, surgeon general of the ramy; Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service; Admiral Charles S. Dr. Mary E. Woolley Will Speak for Czechs

To Address Mass Meeting Tonight
Remaining for University Women's Parley
Committees to Convene Tomorrow

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Dr. Mary E. Woolley, who will speak tonight at the mass meeting in the Rialto Theater in behalf of Czechoslovakia, will remain in Washington tomorrow for the first of a series of meetings to be held by the national committees of the American Association of University Women. Dr. Woolley, who is chairman of international relations for the American Association, is one of a large group of women leaders who will gather here this week-end for the meetings.

Tomorrow both the committee of which she is chairman and the convention program committee, headed by Dean Margaret Morriss, of Pembroke College, national president of the A. A. U. W., will meet at the clubhouse 1634 I street.

Wednesday of next week, the social studies committee, of which Dr. Faith Williams is chairman, will have its session, and on Saturday the committee on legislative program will convene under the chairmanship of Miss Harriet Elliott, professor of economics at North Carolina College for Women. Late this month and in November and January, others will meet.

Among the items on the legislative program of the association is one calling for support of measures defining a new policy to govern the neutrality of the United States during periods of international armed conflict, the primary purpose of which should be "to diminish danger of our being involved in war, but which would leave open the possibility of cooperation in international efforts to suppress war by pacific means."

Isolationist Stand Definitely Rejected

The A. A. U. W. last spring withdrew from the National Council for the Prevention of War, as the general sentiment of the association over a period of years has favored international co-operation toward peace rather than the isolationist policy to which the council is committed.

Other items on international relations call for membership of the United States in the League of Nations on terms consistent with our commitments under the Pact of Paris, membership in the World Court, treaties for international reduction of armaments and Federal control of manufacture of and traffic in arms and munitions.

These will be discussed by Dr. Woolley and the members of her committee in their conference tomorrow. Dr. Woolley, who for 37 years was president of Mount Holyoke College, is a past president of the A. A. U. W. and was a delegate to the meeting of the International Federation of University Women in Paris last summer. In 1932 she was the only woman delegate to the disarmament conference.

On her committee were Dr. Sophie Hart, retired professor of English at Wellesley College; Miss Charlotte Tyler, of the Institute of Pacific Relations; Dr. Edith Ware, editor for the Committee on Intellectual Co-operation; Miss Elizabeth Fackt, assistant to the director of the Foundation for the Advancement of Social Sciences, University of Denver; Dr. Bessie Randolph, president of Hollins College, Virginia; Dr. Meta Glass, president of Sweet Briar College, and Dean Margaret Corwin of the New Jersey College for Women.

The legislative program, by no means confined to international relations, was adopted at the Savannah convention in 1937. It also favors, among other items removal of discriminations in Government employment on the basis of sex or marital status.

The A. A. U. W., however, took a stand last winter in "opposition to the proposed equal rights amendment to the Constitution as a means of securing equality for women in this country."

This position was taken through the emergency machinery of the association for indorsing legislation, when the equal rights amendment last March was unexpectedly reported out of committee by the Senate Judiciary Committee without recommendation. The association's action in opposition to the amendment was proposed by the committee on the economic and legal status of women and approved by the committee on legislative program and the board of directors, making it effective until the next biennial convention to be held in Denver in June.

More Noted Educators Serve on Committee

Dr. Williams, who is chief of the Cost of Living Division of the Department of Labor, has serving with her on the social studies committee Dr. Caroline Ware, lecturer in the Graduate School of American University; Dr. Mildred Fairchild, director of the graduate department of social economy, Bryn Mawr; Dr. Eleanor Dulles, senior economic analyst of the Social Security Board; Dr. Jean Flexner, industrial economist of the Department of Labor; Miss Ruth O'Brien, chief Dean Morriss has on her committee Clothing, Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture; Dr. Isabel Gordon Carter, assistant professor of social research, University of Pennsylvania; Dr. Helen Fisher Hohman, research worker in problems of poverty, Chicago; Alice Edwards, former executive secretary of the American Home Economics Association; Mrs. Jerry Voorhis, chairman of the California State committee on social studies for the A. A. U. W., and Dr. Elizabeth May, associate professor of economics in Goucher College.

Dean Morris has on her committee, Dr. Fackt, Dr. Laura Zirbes, professor of education in Ohio State University; Dr. Fairchild and Miss Lura Beam, chairman of the A. A. U. W. national committee on the arts.

Fund Is Voted In Montgomery

A scholarship loan fund for boys was voted yesterday by the executive board of the Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs at its meeting held in the Bethesda Methodist Church. Mrs. B. Peyton Whelan, the president and long a supporter of the scholarship loan fund work, presided at the meeting.

Mrs. A. B. Foster, loan scholarship chairman for the federation, is arranging a benefit card party set for October 26, proceeds of which will be used for the work.

Mrs. Joseph Travers Maguire, president of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, was announced by Mrs. Whelan as chairman of the newly formed "Know Your Government" department of the federation. The clubs will study the Montgomery government in preparation for urging a county managership. The education, legislation, welfare and American departments will co-ordinate their work under this head.

The rules were revised yesterday, limiting the total amount lent any student to $500. Only $250 may be lent in a single year.

The new fund, from which boys will receive assistance, has been named the Dawson Alnutt Scholarship Fund in memory of the late son of Mrs. Robert Alnutt, president of the Woman's Club of Dawsonville and life chairman of records for the county federation.

Girl Reserves Start Program

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

THE ARMY-NAVY CHAPTER of the Daughters of the American Revolution is planning a card party the afternoon of October 18 at the Shoreham Hotel. Proceeds will be for the benefit of its fund in support of the D. A. R. approved schools.

Mrs. George Harrison, widow of the late Col. Harrison, is regent of the chapter which, with more than 500 members, is the third largest in the country. Other officers are Mrs. John Homer, vice regent; Mrs. Frank Clark, treasurer; Mrs. Hubert Paddock, corresponding secretary; Mrs. John E. Hunt, recording secretary; Mrs. George J. Newgarden, historian; Mrs. John Walker Holcombe, chaplain, and Mrs. George McIver, registrar.

Miss Frances M. Webster is chairman of the card party, with Mrs. Frank R. Keefer and Mrs. John Homer on her committee. There will also be a cake and candy table in charge of Mrs. William Wrightson, assisted by Mrs. Ralph Griswold, Mrs. Godwin Ordway, Mrs. Oscar Leidel, Mrs. Lynn Edwards, Mrs. Ralph Wortley and Miss Aileen Wrightson, and a fancy work and white elephant table in charge of Mrs. H. E. Paddock, with Mrs. William H. Carter, Mrs. Roy Morris and Miss Mildred Paddock assisting her.

MRS. JOHN W. EDWARDS, regent of Livingston Manor Chapter and president of the State Regents Club of the D. A. R., met with members of her executive board last night to discuss the winter program. The first club meeting will be October 7 at the Willard Hotel at 7:30. On the board are Mrs. F. Hunter Creech, of Potomac Chapter, vice president; Mrs. Russell H. Stine, Independence Bell, treasurer, and Mrs. Robert Can Denbergh, of Eleanor Wilson Chapter, recording secretary.

THE ALTRUSA CLUB, headed by Mrs. Lucille McMurry, began its fall program with a supper meeting last night at the home of Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, 4939 Thirtieth place.

There was discussion of plans for expanding the membership of the club which now has only 15 in the Washington branch. Mrs. McMurry announced the Second District convention which is to be held in Huntington, W. Va., October 21 and 22. Miss Alice Keith, of the local club, who is national chairman of radio for Altrusa, also outlined her schedule of programs.

Others present included Miss Harriett Chase, Miss Edith Macauley, Miss Libbie Myers, Miss Bertha Nienburg, Miss Olga Steig and Miss Sabra Vought.

JUNE SOUTHWORTH, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Southworth, of Edgewater, Md., has returned to Duke University, where she is a senior.

JUNE SOUTHWORTH

She is president of Phi Chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha national woman's fraternity, and secretary of Chi Delta Phi, national honorary literary sorority.

BOTH the Zonta and the Soroptimist clubs had their Wednesday luncheons yesterday—the Zonitians meeting at the Y. W. C. A., and the Soroptimists at the Willard Hotel. Mrs. Zada Daniels, who was in charge of the program for the Soroptimists, presented Dr. Leverett S. Lyon, executive vice president of Brookings Institution, as guest speaker.

The Zonta Club is making plans for the Zonta Day celebration November 10, when a program in line with the Amelia Earhart Memorial of Zonta International will be arranged. Elizabeth Haney, new executive secretary of the Y. W. C. A., is program chairman, and the publicity chairman, Kathryn Fox, is in charge of plans for Zonta Day.

PETER HAMILTON, scientist, writer, lecturer, and astro-analyst, will be guest of honor at a dinner to be given tonight by members of the Quota Club at the Women's City Club. His subject will be "It Can Happen Here."

Community Chest Chairmen Will Meet Tomorrow

Mrs. James Clement Dunn, vice chairman of the Community Chest League, has called a meeting of the various committee chairmen at her home, 27 Observatory Circle, tomorrow at 11 a. m.

Among those who will attend tomorrow's meeting are Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., chairman of the motor corps committee, and Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., vice chairman; Mrs. William W. Mackall, jr., chairman of the social welfare exhibition; Mrs. G. Howland Chase, chairman of the "open house" tours committee; Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, chairman of the educational meetings, and Mrs. Gertrude Schloss, secretary; Miss Elizabeth Houghton, chairman of the photographic corps; Mrs. Walter B. Frye, chairman of the metropolitan area organization, and Mrs. William A. Moyer, vice chairman; Mrs. Wilson Lee, chairman of the league luncheon to be held at the Mayflower Hotel on Monday, October 17; Mrs. William J. Flather, jr., vice chairman of this committee, and Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, chairman of the committee on educational institutions.

Y. W. C. A. Has Foreign Guests And Plans 2 Conferences

Ann Davis Heads Girl Reserve Council
Officers to Meet in Cherrydale October 7-9
Setting-up Conclave to Open Saturday

The Y. W. C. A. is alive with activity as the program for the fall season progresses. Yesterday the Girl Reserve Council met to plan a week-end conference for officers at Vacation Lodge, Cherrydale, Va., October 7-9; a group of foreign delegates from the world's council recently held in Canada arrived for a stay at Strong Residence, and plans were being completed for the annual fall setting-up conference of the "Y. W." staff at Vacation Lodge this week-end.

Ann Davis, of Woodrow Wilson, has been elected president of the Girls Reserve Senior High School Council, composed of presidents of 11 senior high school G. R. clubs, seven in the city and four in the suburbs. This makes her girl executive heading 4,000 members in the Capital. She is also president of the club at Wilson.

Katherine Hanley, president of the McKinley Girl Reserve Club, is secretary of the council.

The officers' conference will be a week-end house party for the girls at Vacation Lodge. They will be given special training in program planning and demonstrations of Girl Reserve work. There will be speakers on traffic safety; social service, national and international affairs. In addition, an evening of square dancing is planned, with appropriate costumes and music. There will be a breakfast hike, tennis, and other sports.

This conference will precede a week of opening parties to be given in each of the 11 senior high schools by the Girl Reserve clubs, honoring new students. Miss Mabel R. Cook is Girl Reserve executive at the "Y. W." with Miss Margaret Graves, Miss Mildred Chapin and Mrs. Van T. Smith as her assistants.

Staff to Confer On Year's Work

The staff of the Y. W. C. A., at its setting-up conference opening Saturday afternoon at Vacation Lodge, will discuss means of reaching new residents in Washington with the educational and recreational facilities of the organization. Miss Irene Richards, health director, and Miss Mary Burnett, music secretary, are in charge of arrangements for the Saturday program.

Sunday, following devotions led by Miss Mabel Charest, assistant general secretary, there will be a discussion of "The Religious Emphasis of the Y." The conference will close Sunday afternoon, but will be followed Monday by a reception for Miss Anna V. Rice, formerly chief executive of the national board; Mrs. William Lee Corbin, president of the local association, and Miss Elizabeth Haney, newly appointed general secretary. Miss Rice was the first woman to receive the degree of doctor of sacred theology from Syracuse University. She has also studied at Hartford Theological Seminary in Cambridge and the University of Edinburgh. She will address the membership of the Y. W. C. A. at a dinner following the reception.

Women From Many Distant Places Here

The delegates to the World's Council, who are now visitors at Strong Residence, include: Miss Helene Tamverk, of Tallinn, Estonia, who has brought with her the Order of the Red Cross to be bestowed on Mrs. John H. Finley, chairman of the foreign division of the Y. W. C. A., and on Miss Lois Diehl, who was sent a few years ago to help Estonian women start their Y. W. C. A.; Miss Emerentze Bille, from Copenhagen, Denmark, who represents her country on the World's Council in Geneva; Miss Amo Bennett, of New Zealand, a member of the Maori race, who is the first Polynesian representative to be sent to the World's Council; Miss Sophie del Campo, secretary of the Amsterdam Association, and of the "Blue Triangle Girls," the largest associate organization there, and Miss Jacqueline van Stoetwegen, of Utrecht, Holland, assistant general secretary of the Y. W. C. A. in her country.

Rescue League Hears Reports

More than 2,000 animals a month were received by the Animal Rescue League during the summer, it was reported at the league's first fall meeting, held yesterday morning at the headquarters, 71 O street.

Mrs. Charles Augustus Simpson, the president, announced plans for the coming Community Chest campaign which will include a tea at the headquarters Friday afternoon, October 21. This will be one of the series of "open houses" sponsored by the Community Chest.

The Animal Rescue League's horse committee, of which Mrs. Charles Watson is chairman, has been particularly active in recent months buying old horses no longer fit for work. Hundreds of lost animals have been returned to their owners and many homes found for "orphan" dogs and cats by the league.

Other pets including goats, squirrels, rabbits, birds and even mice and rats are brought or sent to the league to be cared for or disposed of.

Officers in addition to Mrs. Simpson, are Mrs. Thomas Geoghegan, first vice president; Mrs. Merton E. Twogood, second vice president; Mrs. J. C. Brubaker, secretary; Mr. Geoghegan, financial secretary; Mrs. J. Dann Faber, treasurer; Mrs. Charles Anderson, chairman of the house committee.

History Club Meets at Home Of Mrs. Root

The Capitol Hill History Club yesterday afternoon met for the first time this season. Mrs. Raymond V. Root and Mrs. Arthur W. Lovern were hostesses at the former's home, and Mrs. Percy Taylor presented the paper of the afternoon on "The Constitution's Background."

The club, which has a limited membership of 30, meets fortnightly at the homes of members, with a program following luncheon. It celebrated its fortieth anniversary in June.

Mrs. Jason Waterman will be hostess at the next meeting on October 12.

The members present yesterday included Mrs. Robert Adams, Mrs. Stanley Beasley, Mrs. J. Ward Eicher, Mrs. Charles Ferguson, Mrs. El Bie Foltz, Mrs. J. Clyde Hemphill, Mrs. Earl Hummer, Mrs. Homer Link, Mrs. Philip Martin, Mrs. John Mee, Mrs. Charles Miller, Mrs. Harry Patterson, Mrs. Clara Stine, Miss Phebe Stine, Mrs. Wilmer Souder, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Edward Wallace and Mrs. Waterman.

Welfare Work Clubs' Aim in Prince Georges

Mrs. Naylor President
Mrs. Mayberry Is Head
Meeting Is Oct. 20

Public welfare will be the chief interest of the federated clubs of Prince Georges County this season, according to Mrs. Henry Naylor, 1212 Kenilworth avenue, who heads the Prince Georges County Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Elmer C. Mayberry, of Upper Marlboro, immediate past president of the county federation, heads the welfare committee. Under her chairmanship, the clubs will work for an extension of public health facilities in the county. Mrs. Mayberry, Mrs. E. N. Cory and Mrs. Ralph Sheffer, all members, were instrumental in starting the movement for the survey of the county's health needs.

The semiannual meeting of the federation will be held October 20 at the Berwyn Presbyterian Church, with the Community Club of Berwyn as host. The board meetings are held at the firehouse in Bladensburg.

The committee chairmen include: Welfare, Mrs. Mayberry; education, Mrs. Robert Cook, of Lanham; American citizenship, Mrs. Frank Herndon, of Landover; American home, Mrs. J. Earl Keesauver, of Berwyn; legislation, Mrs. Carroll Wildman, of Decatur Heights; press, Mrs. Harry Nalley, of Mount Rainier, and international relations, Mrs. William G. Breen, of Oxon Hill.

The presidents of the Prince Georges federated clubs are: Mrs. M. B. Morehouse, Cheverly Woman's Club; Miss Bernadine Huntt, Chillum District Study Club; Mrs. William E. Bennett, Current Topics Club, of Riverdale; Mrs. Henry O'Neill, Decatur Heights Community Club; Mrs. Harry Hayes, Home and School Club, of Ardmore; Mrs. Arthur E. Robinson, Housekeepers' Club, of Decatur Heights; Mrs. Richard Bassett, Landover Community Club; Mrs. Henry Montee, Lanham Study Club; Mrs. Breen, Oxon Hill Woman's Community Club; Mrs. Joseph M. Vial, Progress Club, of College Park; Mrs. W. G. Copley, Suitland Homemakers Club; Mrs. C. J. Outten, Woman's Club, of Brandywine; Mrs. W. A. Bobb, Woman's Club, of Cottage City; Mrs. Jerome Cowden, Woman's Club, of Laurel; Mrs. Francis J. Wilson, Marlborough Club; Mrs. J. MacDonald, Woman's Community Club, of Berwyn; Mrs. Ralph Sheffer, Woman's Community Club of Hyattsville, and Mrs. Marie Salter, Colmar Manor Mothers' Club, which was admitted at the last board meeting.

There are also two junior clubs, the Junior Woman's Club, of Riverdale, of which Mrs. Waverly Webb is president, and that of Mount Rainier, of which Miss Bernice Speckmann is president.

Mary Ruddell, Army Junior, Enrolls at G. W.

Miss Mary Elvia Ruddell, daughter of Col. and Mrs. J. C. Ruddell, has added her name to the long list of Army daughters enrolling at George Washington University.

After graduating from Holton Arms School here, Miss Ruddell attended William and Mary College last year.

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The One Who Forgot

For errors that you make say not
As an excuse that you forgot.
—Old Mother Nature.

Old Mother Nature accepts no excuses for forgetfulness. Her children in the Green Forest and on the Green Meadows usually have to pay for forgetfulness even as do we human folk, but the price they pay is all too often a far heavier one. They cannot afford to forget. They will not live long if they do.

Mr. and Mrs. Black Duck and their six grown children were out near the middle of the Big River. They were not out there by choice. They would much rather have been hidden in the wild rice along the shore or over in the big slough among the rushes and cattails. But this was the hunting season and only out there during the day were they safe from the hunter with a terrible gun to creep up on them.

But there was one other hunter from whom they were not safe even out here. From him they would have been safer in the rice or among the rushes. It was Fearless the Duck Hawk. Mr. and Mrs. Duck were fully aware of the danger should Fearless appear but the young Ducks never had seen this bold, winged hunter, and they couldn't quite believe that he could possibly be as much to be dreaded as their parents said he was. They were familiar with Plunger the Osprey and knew him to be harmless. Often they had watched him fishing, but with other members of the Hawk family they had had no experience.

"If you see a speck in the sky watch it," their mother told them. "Keep your eyes on it. It may be Fearless the Duck Hawk, and if it is, you may be sure that he is watching you. You must be prepared and know just what to do. If he is hunting us, he will approach at great speed. If you see him coming, remember not to take to your wings. You are strong, fast flyers, but the fastest flyer in all the great Duck family is not fast enough to outfly that fellow, and the thing he will want and try to do is to get one of you into the air. If he can't he may strike you on the water if you allow him, but he would rather have you in the air. So watch him, and if he aproaches dive. Don't wait too long before diving, for his approach will be swift. Dive and swim under water as far as you can, and when you have to come up be ready to dive again as soon as you have a breath of fresh air. It will be best for us to scatter in several directions. Don't fly, but dive; remember that. We are not as good divers as some of our cousins, but are good enough to escape this fellow."

"How do you know?" one young Duck asked curiously.

"By experience," replied his mother promptly.

"Of course," spoke up Mr. Duck, "no Ducks can live to the age of your mother and myself without having many such experiences. That is the way we learn, and, unless I am greatly mistaken, there comes the very one we have been talking about."

Mr. Duck was looking intently up the river. The others did the same. High above the water a speck in the sky rapidly grew larger. It was amazing how fast it grew. Then there was the sound of a gun twice far up the river. That speck shot down toward the water and a moment after was disappearing. Fearless the Duck Hawk had caught a wounded Duck.

It was a few days after this that he appeared again. Mrs. Duck saw him and gave warning. This time there was no doubt that he meant to have one of the flock. Terror took possession of the six young Ducks, but they remembered to dive in different directions. The feathered hunter checked his headlong flight and shot up where from a height he could look down into the water. He saw one of the young Ducks at almost the instant that the latter came up for air. Fearless stopped, as they say. It means that he shot down with half-closed wings. Frantically the young Duck dived again. When he cam up there was the Hawk waiting, high above him. In his fright the young Duck forgot. He wanted to get away from there and the fastest way was by flight. He sprank into the air. Hardly had he attained full speed when he was overtaken. The Fearless one dined on his favorite meal and the flock of Mr. and Mrs. Black Duck never again saw the forgetful one.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

JOSEPH D. COOPER, editor, the Agriculture Exchange, explains in the editorial column a droll occurrence in the paper's life last week: "For the first time in the history of the Exchange something went askew, and the Exchange which was prepared last week never saw the light of day. Unfortunately, through error, the prepared issue was never sent to press."

The Labor Department stands firm on its bedrock resolution that somebody will have to move, and the moving day comes soon for the 72 employes of the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization, who (unless the crisis ends soon) will trek to the building at Fourteenth and Church streets northwest. We say "soon," because yesterday the movement of files began, and the movement of people is expected as soon as the department complies with certain requirements called for at the Fourteenth street building by the Public Health Service. The 72 employes are sore.

THEY WENT, as alternative, to take the windowless sixth floor of the building, but this is over-ridden. Yesterday we seized upon the report made by the Division of Labor Standards and found this notation, concerning one of the sixth floor rooms: "Odors are very pronounced in this room and are distinctly noticeable in the hall adjacent."

At first blush you will wonder why they would pick the sixth floor as a more desirable place than the Fourteenth street building. They explain that to go to the Fourteenth street place would separate them from important adjuncts of their work, which will remain in the Labor Building on Constitution avenue. They tell us that that "it doesn't seem like good business," and wonder if the Department will provide them with motor bikes to ride back and forth from Fourteenth and Church to Constitution avenue.

IMPROVEMENT, it should be borne in mind, would be made if the department assigned employes to the sixth floor. According to the survey report, it must at the moment afford a dreary prospect.

"For human occupancy, there is no doubt that the psychological factor plays an important part. Working in a building with no outside windows, bare walls (and) artificial illumination unquestionably has a decidedly depressing effect. In the winter time the occupants of these spaces would enjoy only about two hours of daylight per day . . . beyond the psychological effect, there is no doubt that it is hygienic to allow the eyes to gaze into distance at intervals to relieve continual eye strain," the report stated.

Concerning the contention, the Department has only affirmed that the new Wage-Hour Division is coming into the building and somebody will have to move, the movers being the Immigration people. There has been no other official explanation.

BIOLOGICAL SURVEY people, generally, and this column in particular, is sorry to hear of the leavetaking of Arthur W. Susott, who, since June, 1935, has been a good worker and a corking digger-up of human interest news stuff hereabouts. Sussot goes to Spartanburg, S. C., October 1, to become an assistant in information to Dr. T. S. Buie, regional conservator of the Soil Conservation Service.

He was appointed here in 1935 as an agricultural writer in the Agricultural Press Service. A year later he was transferred to the Public Relations Division of the Biological Survey, and happily, "because my interest in wildlife dates back to my boyhood days on a farm in southern Indiana," he told us yesterday.

It's funny how the delights of a vacation or a man's notion that he's having too good a time to talk business, can sometimes near be his undoing. So in this case, a perfectly swell newspaper man was on vacation when the long-distance telephone call came. A very big chief in the Government service told him to return here; that he had a matter to talk over. The newspaper man wanted to hear none of it; and said, irritably, that he was on vacation and didn't care for business talk. "There's a $5,000 job here in press relations for you," the big chief, exasperated, almost exploded. And the newspaper man almost jumped through the telephone grabbing at it.

PEACE: President Roosevelt's plea for peace surprised the newsreel men stationed in Washington . . . But as is customary in these cases, the newsreelers asked the President—who never denies such requests—to repeat his message in front of a newsreel camera . . . The request was refused. "What would be the use?" they were told. "By the time the reel is ready for distribution—it already might be obsolete."

Rites Today For J. E. Toone, Union Official

Was Md., D.C. Treasurer

Also Central Unit Aide

Associate of Gompers

Funeral services for Joseph Edward Toone, 70, treasurer of both the Maryland State and District of Columbia Federations of Labor and of the Washington Central Labor Union, who died Tuesday at Garfield Hospital, will be held today at 2 p. m. in the Dumbarton avenue M. E. Church. The Rev. Dr. E. C. Makosky, pastor of the Cherrydale M. E. Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

In bad health for several years, Mr. Toone had been in the hospital five weeks. His home was at Glen Echo Heights, Md. A native of Washington, Mr. Toone was educated in the public schools here.

A close associate of the late Samuel Gompers, Mr. Toone gave many years of service to the American Federation of Labor. In recent years Mr. Toone aided William Green, federation president, in organizing work.

For the past 20 years Mr. Toone served as treasurer of the Maryland State and District of Columbia Federations, and treasurer of the Central Labor Union for the last eight years. He had been inactive in recent years, however, due to ill health.

A charter member of the Bakery Salesmen's Union, Mr. Toone helped organize the Milk Drivers' Union and the Beer and Soda Drivers' Union. He was also a member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

Mr. Toone was a former president of the Cherrydale Cement Block Co., of Cherrydale, Va. He is survived by six sons: J. E., jr., and Charles A. Toone, Cherrydale; Thomas F. Toone, Philadelphia; John J., Earl C., and Raymond Toone, Glen Echo Heights, Md.; a daughter, Mrs. Catherine L. Davis, this city, and a sister, Mrs. Louisa Brosnahan. He also leaves 13 grandchildren.

DIPLOMATIC DIDOES: Amid this crisis, with Ambassadors Kennedy and Bullitt phoning our State Department here from London and Paris several times a day, Count de Saint-Quentin, the French Ambassador, has not talked to his foreign office for several months. That's quite . . . seize wages? a lapel chain on which the President sometimes wears his watch . . . It has a hefty gold bar outside the buttonhole, and from the substantial chain hang a Phi Beta Kappa key (for scholarship), a seal and a club emblem. It all adds up to quite a cluster, and has the makings of an heirloom. F. D. R. is just a sentimentalist at heart, though he often manages to conceal it.

No one ever got a gentler let-down than "Jefty" O'Connor, when the White House announced that he did not want to be Comptroller of Currency again.

"Was he offered the job?" bawled a rear-row voice.

"Are there any other jobs Jefty doesn't want?" quizzed another.

So Washington loses a brooding, romantic figure as Mr. O'Connor, who resigned to run fifth in the golden gimme gubernatorial primary, goes west to practice law. It was a bad week for the O'Connors, though an O'Conor won in Maryland.

". . . the heroes of yesteryear"

Fortyish war vets are drifting into Army offices, the scent of powder in their nostrils, sucking a gut, chests momentarily inflated, to offer themselves to their country if and when . . .

But their wives needn't worry. As gently as possible Army officers tell em they aren't as young as they were.

The average World War vet is past 45 now; and in the last World War the average age of a colonel was only 42. You can't turn the clock back.

There are plenty of debs in Washington who would do well in Hollywood, but the first one who'll have a whack at it this year seems likely to be the radiant Lutecia Quintanilla, sister of the Counselor of the Mexican Legation.

She caught Paul Muni's eye in Mexico City, and now he wants her to play the young Empress in his movie about Emperor Maximillian, whom the Mexicans shot in 1866.

It would be a pity if her movie salary were confiscated to help pay for some of the land the Mexicans have seized from Americans below the Rio Grande.

". . . an hour away by horse"

Over at the Archives vaults they're ironing out and de-bugging thousands of ships' manifests dating back to George Washington's day, when Alexandria was a great seaport, and the Potomac was athrob with sloops, brigs and schooners.

There was always a ship coming in from the Indies or leaving for England or the Mediterranean, with some pretty fancy goods, too. Velvets, damasks and sherry coming in, rum, tobacco and barrel staves going out.

• • • •

Nowadays Alexandria is a suburb populated with Government workers, and Mount Vernon is way out in the country; but in those days G. W. lived on a suburban estate near the seaport, less than an hour away on a fast horse. A study of the ships' papers reveals that the imports consisted largely of alcoholic beverages; G. W.'s pals could drink a quart a day and remain genteel.

Quite properly, the American radio chains have been giving Germany her innings on the air, with Berlin answering the democratic broadcasts from Prague and London. But the German broadcasters have seemed devoid of subtlety or finesse, and didn't gain Hitler much vindication. Jan Masaryk's broadcast for the Czechs was temperate and decent, but the German spokesman called the Czechs "bolsheviks" and "mass murderers," and even referred to Gen. Syrovy, who once spent a year fighting the bolsheviks, as a "Communist general." A little sniffy. Maybe the networks would do better to let their Berlin broadcasting be done by an American journalist or by an unmistakably Nazi spokesman, rather than by a Nazi propagandist masquerading as a journalist.

Citizens Try Today to Calm Relief Row

Street Denies Charges Lewis Speaks Again Hart Calls Meeting To 'Let Chips Fall'

By James D. Secrest.

The citizens advisory committee on the District relief inquiry will meet today to try and conciliate Burdette G. Lewis, the investigator, and public welfare officials, quarreling over whether or not the public assistance division pads its reports on local relief.

Ringgold Hart, chairman, called the meeting following a second statement by Lewis in reply to a denial of the first from Public Welfare Director Elwood Street.

Meanwhile, indications were that the first bombshell was but a hint of the dynamite that may be stored in the investigator's formal report, due December 1.

Explaining that he believed no good could come of a fight between the investigator and the persons being investigated prior to the release of the report, Hart said:

"All we want to do is to develop the facts impartially and fairly to all concerned, let the chips fall where they may."

Public Reports Asked

Earlier Lewis had issued an appeal "to the people of Washington" to write in any facts they might have "concerning flagrant cases of relief denied or of relief abused."

Following this he said:

"I do not intend to get into any public debate with my good friend Elwood Street. He is the ablest public information man in the public welfare field. If he is to begin now going into affairs in the Public Assistance Division he will have to get used to such words as 'unjust denials,' 'fraud,' 'phoney,' 'chiseler,' 'wasted substance,' and the like.

"He will find they have been so afraid of the word 'fraud' that they haven't signed certain information so that the United States prosecutor could proceed with suits to recover moneys allegedly improperly secured and unwisely paid."

PAD Statistics Scored

Lewis said he thought the word "phoney," used to describe PAD statistics, was "a compromise between 'habitually exaggerated' and 'intellectually dishonest.'

"It is by the latter term that the PAD statistics are described by some in informed circles," he continued. "I didn't like to use the latter term because it had moral connotations which I do not think apply to this situation, where poor administration, or the lack of any, perhaps is responsible for the constant exaggeration.

"I do want to make it clear that I have insisted not to pay any attention to the P. A. D. statistics. We are, however, attempting to find accurately what the relief needs are, as well as what the improper grants are like. We will report in due season the facts on all that and everything else covered by the investigation."

Suppression Is Asked

The Lewis-Street outburst has aroused members of the Board of Public Welfare to such an extent, it is understood, that efforts are being made to suppress the Lewis report until Congress convenes, although it will be completed on or before December 1.

A preliminary report, however, will be made to the chairmen of the Senate and House sub-committees on District appropriations relative to the question of whether or not a deficiency appropriation is needed to supplement what remains of the $900,000 carried for relief in the current District supply act.

As the number of rejections will form the basis for this report, it now appears likely that Lewis will recommend a very small additional appropriation, if any, for the remainder of the fiscal year.

Red Cross Asks $500,000 to Aid Storm-Stricken

Norman H. Davis, Red Cross chairman, yesterday called for an emergency fund of $500,000 to push relief and rehabilitation measures in storm-torn New England. Contributions yesterday totaled $167,113.

Davis said 15,000 families in stricken areas had received emergency assistance, and would continue to need food, and financial assistance for repair of homes.

Meanwhile, Gov. Robert E. Quinn planned to seek a conference in Washington today with Chairman Jesse Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Gov. Quinn will ask for a loan of at least $10,000,000 to help Rhode Island business men who face ruin as the result of hurricane and flood. He urged business men to delay drastic decisions until after his conference.

All available newsreels of the New England storm will be shown to the public tonight at 8:15 o'clock in the Department of Commerce auditorium. The showing will be sponsored by a group of New Englanders in Washington who are seeking to aid the Red Cross in relieving sufferers in the stricken area.

Union Vote Today At Press Club

Employes of the National Press Club will vote today in the club lounge on the question whether the United Cafeteria Employes Local Industrial Union shall be their bargaining agent with the club management. The election is being held by secret ballot under an order of the National Labor Relations Board and by agreement between the club and its 66 employes.

The board of governors o the club said they had done nothing, one way or another, in the organization of its employes, but individual members would not be quoted, since the NLRB regards statements by the management as overt acts of intimidation.

Justice Laws Will Retire As Bar Association Chief

Godfrey L. Munter to Succeed Him Hogan Speaks at Officers' Dinner Meeting More Administrative Law Training Urged

Justice Bolitha J. Laws announced last night he would retire next Tuesday as president of the District Bar Association.

Justice Laws presided over a dinner meeting of bar association officers and committee chairmen at the Columbia Country Club at which other speakers were Frank J. Hogan, president of the American Bar Association and Godfrey L. Munter, first vice president of the District association, who will succeed Justice Laws as president.

Justice Laws said he would resign formally after presenting his report to the fall dinner of the association.

"I have been feeling quite a little regret that I have to give up the presidency of the bar association," Justice Laws said, "and that I must lose this intimate contact with you. But I do not expect to be removed from you in point of your coming to me and giving me advice."

He reminded the 50 lawyers who attended the dinner that he had broadcast a request for suggestions when he became head of the bar, and added, "as justice of the District court I want your advice. If I am high-hat, if I am silly, if I am making an ass of myself, then I want you to come to me and tell me so. In court it is 'your honor' and 'judge,' but off the bench I want to remain just 'Bo Laws' to all of you.

"Specifically, I want to urge you, and I plan to make a general appeal to the District bar at the meeting next week, to co-operate with the courts in bringing about a solution of this congested docket."

Hogan chided Justice Laws for limiting the invitation to call on him to the occasions he mentioned, saying: "If we are to be welcome only when he is making an ass of himself, then we shall see no more of Bo Laws."

Hogan then urged the bar officers to join in studying a problem which he said was at present foremost in his mind as president of the national group.

"Little by little I have seen this thing we call administrative law advance into all fields of business and into almost every act of living," he said, and suggested provision be made for educating lawyers in the new field of practice. Not only, he added, were the services needed as representatives of the citizens, but administrative practice offers "fields for lucrative practice greener and more abundant" than any that might have been lost due to invasion of legal fields by so-called unauthorized practitioners.

"The District bar," he concluded, "is in a position to lead efforts to obtain adoption by Congress of this vitally needed legislation."

Munter described himself as "being catapaulted to prominence" and promised to do everything he could to see that the policies of Justice Laws were continued by the association, so that the term he will complete "long will be remembered as the brilliant administration of Mr. Justice Laws."

Meriam Holds Civil Service Orders Fair

Sees No Party Bias Adherents of Each Hit Ordway Boosts Budget

Calling the June 24th Executive Orders, which will extend the merit system in Federal Government, "not revolutionary but evolutionary," Dr. Lewis Meriam last night warned that "ten years are required to effect any major reform" and conseled a slow rather than hurried movement toward desired personnel goals.

The Brookings Institution authority on Government spoke with Civil Service Commissioner Samuel H. Ordway, jr., at a meeting of the Society for Personnel Administration, where Ordway, speaking specifically on the Executive Orders, said the Commission will need and has requested "a very considerable increase in its budget for the coming fiscal year and expects that its needs will be adequately met."

The increase of funds is needed, it was pointed out, to make possible the larger scope of Commission activity under the orders.

"We shall need . . . ample resources for recruiting, liaison with educational institutions, employment offices and the departments themselves, for extended technical examining, for a largely increased staff of investigators, additional experts to facilitate proper and prompt certification, classification investigators, field contact agents and examiners, for the establishment of positions of co-ordinator of training and for training research, for the commission's own personnel division and for an adequate service of public information," he asserted.

"We will need deficiency funds this year, of course; I believe we shall get them," he said. There has been "surprisingly little opposition to the President's desire to extend the classified service," he said, adding:

"There have been some uninformed allegations that such action (the awaiting on future legislation for inclusion to status of certain groups) will result in covering into the service a preponderance of appointees of the party in power," he said.

A study of the positions affected and the length of tenure of many of the incumbents who will be affected "discloses that many Republicans as well as Democrats are affected by the orders," he said.

Dr. W. W. Stockberger, of the Agriculture Department, presided.

Firemen Free Child Locked In Bathroom

"What's the big idea" was the greeting 3-year-old Edward Magee gave to firemen last night when they climbed to release him from a locked second-floor bathroom.

The boy locked himself in while playing hide and seek with his sister, Lenora, 5, at their home, 4905 First street northwest.

When he was unable to turn the key back, the boy's father Edward Magee, called Fire Rescue Squad No. 2, and then told his son stories through the door until Sergt. G. J. Kite climbed up the ladder and unlocked the door.

Beauty Parlors Get Around New Wage-Hour Law

Minimum wage officials here prepared yesterday to investigate several hundred beauty parlor owners who rent booths in their establishments by prearrangement to individual operators and hence escape compliance with the legal wage of that industry.

An $18-a-week basic wage became effective for more than 4,500 women in the beauty parlors here last Monday. However, a group of owners set up operators as "proprietors," and as such, do not have to guarantee a wage.

The wage order included a clause requiring the owners, who employ this arrangement, to supply the wage board with full and complete information concerning their set-up.

Should the practice become widespread in Washington, the entire purpose of the minimum wage law would undoubtedly be defeated.

Miss Gwen Geach, secretary of the board, said the wage board would determine whether the practice is being used in some establishments to evade the law.

King Scores Airport at Gravelly Pt.

Seen Unsatisfactory Project Held 'Mistake' Bad Weather Cited Plans Prepared

Selection of Gravelly Point as a site for development of a national airport was denounced as "a mistake" yesterday by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the District Airport Commission, which first recommended development of Camp Springs.

Declaring he "washed my hands" of the Camp Springs bill, which died with the last Congress, Senator King said he still adhered to the findings of the airport commission, which held that Gravelly Point would be unsatisfactory.

Senator King also pointed out the commission's decision had been based largely on the technical findings of the late Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Air Corps, a member of the body.

The commission, King recalled, found that the cost of developing Gravelly Point "would be extremely high per acre," that it would be beset by fogs in bad weather, and that it was incapable of expansion.

Detailed Plans Prepared

"It is the opinion of the commission that all these considerations," the report stated, "and the further danger inherent in heavy operating schedules at both the Naval Air Station and Bolling Field warrant the elimination from favorable consideration for use at all times, or under all conditions, of both Washington-Hoover and Gravelly Point."

At the same time, it was learned that detailed plans for construction of the new airport have been prepared and that actual construction may start within 30 days.

Conferences are being held regularly by officials of the Civil Aeronautics Authority with the Army engineers and representatives of the Public Works Administration in an effort to get operations under way at the earliest possible moment. While funds have not yet been allocated for the new terminal, it is believed that plans for an airport to cost about $4,600,000 are being drawn.

Tests Must Be Made

A proposal to provide a headquarters building for the Civil Aeronautics Authority at the landing field also was understood to be receiving consideration.

Before any work can begin, however, tests of the mud, sand and gravel to be dredged from the river and used as fill, will have to be made, Col. Robert S. Thomas, Army district engineer, declared yesterday.

If the field is to be used for flying operations within a year after construction starts, he said, the work of filling the site will have to be done carefully and at a controlled rate of speed to permit settling.

Meanwhile, officials of the Bureau of Public Roads declared they would co-operate in any way with the National Park and Planning Commission in development of the area near their road laboratory which adjoins the site for the proposed airport.

Expressing gratification that the Civil Aeronautics Authority did not think the recently completed laboratory would be a hazard, they said they are ready to aid in moving the Memorial boulevard which runs through the site of the proposed terminal or in the construction of a tunnel under a part of the field, whichever project should be deemed best.

War in China Cruelest, Says Missionary

"No war in recent times has been so ruthlessly cruel in its effects upon non-combatants as the Sino-Japanese conflict," asserted Dr. Edgar Woods, of China, speaking last evening at Central Presbyterian Church, where the annual Virginia Synodical Auxiliary Southern Presbyterian conference is in session.

"However," said Dr. Woods, just returned from his Southern Presbyterian Mission post at Shuting, 250 miles from Shanghai, "the Chinese people are not vindictive toward the Japanese civilians, but against the military leaders of that nation."

"Beneath the thunder and uproar of this material warfare is the undertone of a spiritual warfare that is being waged in many a heart," he stated. "In a natural and intense interest in the progress of the war, it is possible to miss that more important warfare that was being waged long before this started and which will be waged long after this is over."

At the elections held in the afternoon, Mrs. R. F. Crawford was named president of the Synodical Auxiliary. Others picked were Mrs. J. Kemper Butler, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Hugh Day, secretary of spiritual life; Mrs. Henry Mack, secretary of foreign missions; Mrs. R. L. Kinnaird, secretary of the Synod and Presbytery Home Missions; Mrs. B. H. Engle, secretary of church education and ministerial relief, and Mrs. W. H. Chappell, literature secretary.

Gordon Calvert Is Appointed Cadet Colonel of D. C. Brigade

He'll Command Senior High School Corps John Lyon, C. F. Hochgesang Named Too Dr. Gosling Announces Honors

Washington's senior high school cadet corps will be under command this year of Gordon L. Calvert, 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Calvert, of 737 Butternut street northwest, whose appointment as cadet colonel of the Washington brigade was announced yesterday.

Calvert's appointment was announced by Dr. Thomas Gosling, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of senior high schools. The new cadet colonel was a first sergeant in Company G, at Roosevelt High School and is the first cadet from his school to be placed in command of the entire cadet corps, enosisting of about 1,200 boys.

At the same time Dr. Gosling announced appointment of John N. Lyon, 17, of 1221 Hamilton street northwest, as brigade adjutant with the rank of major, and Charles F. Hochgesang, 16, of 536 Madison street northwest, as brigade quartermaster with the rank of major, as brigade staff officers.

Calvert plans to become a lawyer, but adds that he is ready to take up arms in defense of the United States "if need arises."

A senior at Roosevelt High School, Calvert has been on the honor roll every semester. He is president of the school bank, member of the debating club for two years and was given the Harvard Book Award last year as the outstanding junior. He also was vice president of the student council and captained the Roosevelt High School war games team last year.

Methodist Unity Due to Youth, Pastor Asserts

Dr. White Cites Gains Sees Prejudices Broken Addresses Conference

The spirit of the youth of the church has been largely responsible for bringing about Methodist unity, said Dr. Raymond W. White last night at Lewis Memorial M. P. Church, Fourth and Hamilton streets northwest, addressing the annual District conference dinner of Methodist Protestants.

"In their Christian Endeavor movements, Sunday school work and similar activities, these young people—breaking down denominational barriers and not catching the prejudices of adults—have helped make union a possibility," declared the speaker, pastor of the Rhode Island M. P. Church.

"This spirit of youth also will be called upon to bear its share of the burden of sacrifice that unity will entail," he said. "They must be willing to sacrifice of their time, substance and services to help build the new Methodist Church."

Also speaking on the program, in which "appreciation year" was emphasized, were Mrs. O. G. Brewer, president of the District Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestants; Dr. J. Leas Green, of Salisbury, Md., and Dr. John A. Trader, of Lewis Memorial Church. Dr. E. A. Sexsmith, conference president, presided. Women of the Lewis Memorial Church served the dinner.

Cabin John Line Street Car Kills Retired U.S. Worker

Frank T. Harrington, 55, a retired War Department employe, was killed last night by a Cabin John street car near Stop 8, about two blocks east of Reservoir road northwest. He lived at 4434 Conduit road, not far from where he was killed.

Dewitt C. Brown, of 223 Eighth street northeast, motorman, said he saw Harrington lying between the tracks but was unable to stop. Harrington lost an arm and a leg and was pronounced dead at Emergency Hospital. Private H. A. Wheeler, of Seventh Precinct, who investigated, said he apparently had left a preceding car at Stop 11 and was walking home when for some reason he fell.

Harrington was identified by a brother, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald investigated.

His death was the sixty-sixth in District traffic this year. Last year's toll at this time was 72.

Detective Murray Made Sergeant; Shipman Elevated

Promotion of Precinct Detective Robert V. Murray, No. 10, to detective sergeant, and Private William Shipman, No. 1, to precinct detective, was announced last night by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

Murray fills the vacancy left by the demotion to foot private of Lieut. James Kelly, director of WPDW, police radio station, who was on the police rolls as detective sergeant with the rank of acting lieutenant.

Shipman will be assigned to Murray's post at the Tenth Precinct.

Murray was commended recently for the capture of Douglas Robinson, colored bandit, when the latter attempted to rob a liquor store.

Within the past week Murray captured John S. Lomax, colored, sought by police for two years in connection with about 30 housebreakings.

Shipman joined the force in 1932. He was assigned to the hack inspector's office two years ago as plain-clothes officer, and last year transferred to the First Precinct.

Tribute Paid Dr. McKinley, G. W. Dean

Lost in Pacific Career Is Lauded Dr. Donnally Talks Letter Sent Wife

The Academy of Medicine of Washington paid tribute to the memory of Earl Baldwin McKinley, dean of the George Washington University Medical School and founder of the academy, at a meeting at the Cosmos Club last night on the forty-fourth anniversary of his birth.

Following an eulogy by Dr. Harry H. Donnally, professor of pediatrics at George Washington, members of the academy stood silent for a full minute in honor of McKinley, who was lost exactly two months ago when the Pan-American airship Hawaiian Clipper disappeared on a Pacific flight.

The academy authorized a letter to Mrs. McKinley and her two children, expressing "very genuine sympathy in the passing of Dr. McKinley." The letter continued: "We feel deeply the loss of his gifted, loyal, socially minded and dynamic personality. May his spirit and enthusiasm for the highest things in life continue to comfort his family and to inspire our organization."

Traces Career

Dr. Donnally traced McKinley's rise from student days at the University of Michigan to his appointment as dean at George Washington in 1931.

Lauding "his fearlessness in standing by his convictions," Dr. Donnally said that McKinley "was criticized somewhat when it was published in the newspapers that he was one of four physicians in Washington among the 430 physicians in the United States who openly indorsed Federal aid to the indigent sick and Federal grants for medical research.

"Time quickly vindicated the wisdom of his judgment in these matters," added Dr. Donnally, "because Congress made large appropriations for the eradication of syphilis, for maternal care and child welfare, for cancer research, and numerous other Federal aids, and only within this week comes the announcement that the house of delegates of the American Medical Association in special session has adopted modified proposals of the international committee for bringing at the taxpayers' expense the benefits of improved and modern medical care to the indigent and less favored classes."

Dr. Manson-Bahr Talks

Dr. Philip Manson-Bahr, director of the clinical division of the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine delivered an illustrated address on the life of his father-in-law, Sir Patrick Manson, "father of tropical medicine."

Manson, who was one of the pioneers in the study of the transmission of malaria, "made the tropics habitable to the white man," said Dr. Manson-Bahr. The speaker was elected to honorary membership in the academy and was presented with a parchment diploma by Dr. Sterling Ruffin, acting president.

Brief tributes to Sir Patrick Manson were paid by Rear Admiral Edward R. Stitt, retired, former Surgeon-General of the Navy and one time student of Sir Patrick; by Col. Edward B. Vedder, and by Dr. William Thornwall Davis.

'Much Disturbed,' Silver Spring May Ban Walkathons

Complaining that their slumbers were "very much disturbed" by the music emanating from loud-speakers in front of the recent walkathon, members of the Silver Spring Citizens Association last night decided to investigate possibilities of barring such events. Byron G. Sedgwick, president, was instructed to appoint a committee to report at a later meeting.

Possibility of creating a new election district to be known as Silver Spring wa sdiscussed. The community is now in the Wheaton district.

Howard P. Bailey spoke on the Czechoslovakia situation. Miss Maxwell Galloway sang, accompanied on the piano by Miss Dorothy Fay Loftis. The meeting was held at Jesup Blair Community House.

Lincoln Play To Open Here Next Week

By Robert Sherwood
Massey Is Starred
Other Programs

"Abe Lincoln in Illinois," Robert E. Sherwood's new play of the earlier years of Abraham Lincoln's life, will be presented for the first time on any stage by the Playwrights' Producing Company in the National Theater next Monday night. The title role will be played by Raymond Massey, with Muriel Kirkland and Adele Longmire, a newcomer to the theater, leading the support in the respective roles of Mary Todd and Anne Rutledge. Other historical figures will be portrayed by Albert Phillips, as Stephen A. Douglas; Arthur Griffin, as Bowling Green; Lewis Martin, as Ninian Edwards; Howard de Silva, as Jack Armstrong, and Wendell K. Phillips, as Billy Herndon, Lincoln's law partner. The play is being directed by Elmer Rice, himself a famous playwright. There will be the usual matinee performances on Wednesday and Saturday.

"You Can't Take it With You," Columbia Pictures' filmization of the Moss Hart-George S. Kaufman Pulitzer Prize comedy, now playing the National Theater, will be the major screen attraction at the Warner Brothers' Earl Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The principal roles in this superlatively amusing screen play, adapted from the original by Robert Riskin, are played by Lionel Barrymore, as Grandpa Vanderhof; Spring Byington, as "Penny;" Samuel S. Hinds, as Paul Sycamore; Halliwell Hobbes, as Mr. De Pinna; Mischa Auer, as Kolenkhov; Jean Arthur, as Alice Sycamore; James Stewart as the younger Kirby; Edward Arnold, as the elder; Mary Forbes, as Mrs. Kirby, Harry Davenport, H. B. Warner, Christian Rub, Bodil Rosing, Charles Lane, Josef Swickard and many more. The picture was directed by Frank Capra. The stage bill will be featured by Lucy Monroe, Gaston Palmer, the 16 Dancing Roxyettes and others.

Walter Wagner's production of "Algiers" will be the major screen attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The stellar role in this exotic subject is played by Charles Boyer, supported by Hedy Lamarr—the former Hedy Kreisler, of "Ecstacy"—and Sigrid Gurie. Others in the cast include Joan Woodbury, Bert Roach, Robert Creig, Gene Lockhart, Alan Hale, Claudia Dell and Joseph Calleia. The story is an adventurous and vivid one of crime in the Orient. The new stage bill at the Capitol will be headlined by Sybil Bowan, noted character impressionist, and Cass Owen and Topsy. Others offering diversified acts are Louis Da Pron, "a concert in taps" and the Commodores, singing ensemble, and the Chester Hale Capitol Dancers, both held over for a second week.

The Metropolitan Theater announces as its foremost screen offering for the week beginning tomorrow, First National's production of "Girls on Probation," in which the outstanding roles are played by Jane Bryan, Ronald Reagan, Anthony Averill, Sheila Bromley, Henry O'Neill and Elizabeth Risdon. Crane Wilbur wrote the original story of innocent girls, crime and the law. The usual supplementary features will augment the bill.

"Boys Town," one of the most successful productions of the present motion-picture season, will be brought back to F street at the Palace Theater tomorrow, with Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney in the costellar roles. This deeply moving film play comes to the Palace close on the heels of its record-breaking engagement at Loew's Capitol and will be augmented by short subjects and a new issue of the "News of the Day."

The Marx Brothers—Groucho, Harpo and Chico—will continue for a second week on the screen at the RKO-Keith's film version of the successful stage comedy, "Room Service," one of the funniest farces of recent vintage. They are supported by a small, but capable, cast. The auxiliary features of the bill also will be retained.

"Three Loves Has Nancy," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's highly amusing comedy of a small-town girl in a big city, with Robert Montgomery, Janet Gaynor and Franchot Tone in the leading roles, will play a repeat downtown engagement at Loew's Columbia Theater, beginning tomorrow. Already having scored at the Capitol, this laughable romance provides an hour or two of exhilarating diversion.

The latest release of the "March of Time," a Paramount Pictorial and "Hollywood Graduation" will comprise the featured short subjects on the new bill, opening tomorrow, at the Trans-Lux Theater. The program, as usual, will be based on newsreel coverage of the world, which at the present time, is especially interesting and vital.

"The Awful Truth," the hilarious film farce adapted to the screen from the stage play of the same name, will be revived as chief feature of next week's bill at the Little Theater, beginning Sunday. The stellar roles are played by Irene Dunne and Cary Grant, supported by Ralph Bellamy and "Mr. Smith," the wire-haired terrier.

Ginger Rogers and James Stewart, supported by Charles Coburn, Beulah Bondi and Frances Mercer, will be seen on the screen at the Mount Vernon Open-air Theater in "Vivacious Lady," beginning next Sunday and continuing through Wednesday. The bill for the last half of next week, Thursday through Saturday, will be a revival of "100 Men and a Girl," costarring Deanna Durbin and Leopold Stokowski, celebrated orchestra conductor. Today through this Saturday, Irene Dunne and Cary Grant will be seen in "The Awful Truth."

An all-new burlesque offering, "Bingo Girls," will be the attraction at the Gayety Theater next week, beginning with the customary Sunday matinee. Amy Fong, Oriental display artiste, will be the guest star of the bill. Others in the cast will include Vic Plant, Clyde Bates, Jack Hunt, Edna Dee, Tom Bundy, Crystal Cook, Franklyn Hopkins, Bunny Mitchell and a shapely chorus.

'Stablemates' a Winner On Any Man's Track!

Sam Wood Production Is Previewed
Beery and Mickey Rooney Costarred
Notes and Gossip of Theater

It was a shrewd move on the part of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to team Wallace Beery and Mickey Rooney in "Stablemates." Probably they had in the posterior recesses of their minds not too dim recollection of the successes by Beery and Jackie Cooper, back, say, in the days of "The Champ." It is barely possible, too, that close beside those memories cuddled others of the box-office prosperity of "Broadway Bill," "Saratoga" and other screen plays having race-track backgrounds. What ever it was that prompted them, it was a very elegant hunch.

BELL.

"Stablemates" will demonstrate itself to future audiences to be one of the most effective combinations of comedy, excitement and emotional tug that have found their way to the screens of the country in recent months. This was borne in upon the drama desks, the Loew executives and even upon Sam Wood, director of the picture—who had never before seen it in its present finally edited form—and Mrs. Wood, who had never before viewed it in any form, at yesterday afternoon's preview screening in the Twentieth Century-Fox bandbox theater. It seems safe to predict that "Stablemates" will prove the sort of picture that will cause an audience to burst into applause at the final fadeout, which, incidentally, is signaized by a ne plus utra "tag line."

This most recent of the Sam Wood productions, which will not be seen on a Washington screen until a little later on in the season, is strictly a racetrack story. But it is a story of the grandstands, the paddocks, the horse barns and the betting rings that embodies unflagging "human interest" and packs a "heart" wallop that is apt to occasion a choke in a few throats and moisten many susceptible eyes. To be sure, it also embraces a mild dash of "hokum" now and then—but, as has been said here so many times before, "hokum" is merely the nickname of those qualities of obviously universal appeal that theatergoers have proved to be sure-fire.

But apart from all this, the important thing is that "Stablemates" places Wallace Beery back at the peak of his form and erases all memory of such inept recent vehicles for his distinctive talents as, for example, "Port of Seven Seas," and puts Master Mickey Rooney on an absolute parity with him in the matter of sustained and compelling character portrayal. Beery is cast as a discredited wizard of veterinary surgery, who still is a drunken and penniless hanger-on around the major tracks; Mickey, as a young apprentice boy who comes into ownership of a horse that is known as a "quitter," which he adores with all the pent-up fervor of an orphaned kid who has nothing else to love. How they come to moral and financial triumph constitutes the gist of the fable.

Sam Wood has done an amirable job of directing in fashioning this engrossing yarn into thrilling entertainment—so good, in fact, that tears were streaming down his own cheeks when the lights came up yesterday afternoon. And he didn't have any glycerine with him, either.

But that's the kind of picture "Stablemates" is. I advise you to keep your eye out for it.

Since Sam Wood has been making pictures since the old days of the one-reelers, one suspects that it was for old times' sake that Flora Finch is to be seen as a bit of "atmosphere" in one fleeting scene toward the end of the Beery-Rooney field day. It must have been that the rotund wraith of John Bunny was hovering somewhere in the background.

It was stated here a few days ago that something more in all likelihood would be said concerning the Variety Club's fifth annual banquet and ball, scheduled for the Willard Hotel on the night of Saturday, November 19. Preliminary plans for the most notable social event of the theatrical year have been completed, so, in the lyrical words of Irving Berlin, "now it can be told."

Chief Barker A. Julian Brylawski, of Washington's Tent, No. 11, of Variety, makes known that Rudolph Berger, local manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will be general chairman of this year's event, with Harry E. Lohmeyer, of the Warner organization, and Sam Galanty, Eastern Division manager for Columbia Pictures, as his chief assistants.

The following committees were named at a recent meeting of the board of governors of the club to serve under the general chairman:

Entertainment—Hardie Meakin, chairman; Clarke Davis, Guy Wonders, Gene Ford, Harry Anger and Phil Hayden.

Dinner—Carter Barron, chairman; Tom O'Donnell and Harry P. Somerville.

Printing—Sam Wheeler, chairman; Nate Sauber, Sam Flax and C. MacGowan.

Program—Sidney B. Lust, chairman; Floyd Akers, George Crouch, Eddie Melniker and Fred Kogod.

Decorations—Charles Schulman, chairman; Herbert Sauber, Jules James, Nat Glasser and Allan Bachrach.

Talent hosts—Edmund Plohn, chairman; Dr. Frank T. Shyne and Adlai Mann.

Joseph Makover will be in charge of reservations and Eddie Fontaine will be Variety's contact man with out-of-town guests.

This personnel represents an unusually complete coverage of Washington's theatrical interests and allied pursuits.

It will be futile to peruse this column in the hope of discovering something concerning yesterday's preview of "The Birth of a Baby," referred to in this space yesterday morning. There was no preview of this much-discussed film. To save wear and tear on the guys and gals of the press, the screening preliminary to the opening of the picture at the Rialto Theater on Wednesday, October 5, was graciously postponed by its sponsors until Saturday. The threat of "more of this later," therefore still hangs over your head.

Philadelphia theatergoers are judicious ticket buyers. For the inauguration of George M. Cohan's road tour in Sam H. Harris' production of "I'd Rather Be Right," the gentle political satire that opened in Baltimore last season, more than $15,000 in mail orders was received before the box-office sale began. According to the statisticians, this forecasts an advance sale of something like $35,000 before the curtain rises on the two-week engagement at the Forrest Theater.

Following its fortnight's run in Philadelphia, "I'd Rather Be Right" will play the National Theater in this city—the house in which it should have had its premiere while Congress was in session. It is scheduled for the National the week of Monday, October 17.

• • • •

Speaking of the National, a bulletin comes to hand that hereafter—the rule went into effect yesterday—the office of the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society of Washington will be closed each Wednesday and Saturday afternoon from 1 to 5 p. m., during the progress of matinee ticket sales and performances. For the ensuing subscription season, opening November 7 with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in "The Sea Gull," desirable first balcony and orchestra seat locations still are available.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 28.—Frances Marion, after flirting with the fjords of Norway and showing her sons the land of the midnight sun, came back in time to give a farewell party for Tia and Harry Lachman, who are off to France. Harry will direct pictures there, and if I know Tia, she'll have a whirl. They arrived here six years ago and made a real place for themselves, not because they gave some of the best parties ever staged, but she's intelligent, charming and a friend. You don't say that about many here.

HEDDA HOPPER

Harry's career got side-tracked. He is a fine painter. His canvasses hang in the Luxemburg. You've got to be good to hang there. Their going leaves a real gap. The Ira Gershwins have taken their house for two years, but it won't be the same.

If you don't think Miss Marion's party was an interesting one read on. Here's what happened and the folks I met there.

We welcomed back the Mario Mariñotis, who have vacationed abroad for a year. He's the voice doctor who helped Grace Moore and others for a long time. They tell me Italy is ga-ga over Garbo. And the romantic seduction in the Italian voice used for Robert Taylor gave him an entirely new personality. The super Italian picture, starring Francesco Broggiotti—Mrs. John Lodge to us—had another voice dubbed in, even though she speaks Italian beautifully.

Gladys Swarthout, just back from Europe, breezed in with husband Frank Chapman. Gladys looked like Cigarette in "Under Two Flags," in the brightest red and gray striped dress, red saucer hat to match, white wool pea jacket. Gladys made her London debut at Lady Ludlow's famous Bath House, with Fritz Kreisler assisting. Imagine anybody being that lucky! That was her first visit there. Lady Irene Ravensdale, who used to visit here with Marie Dressler, took her in tow, and did they go a-towing!

In describing Lady Elsie Mendl's party at Versaille—Gee whiz, am I up to my knees in ladies this morning!—Gladys said there was an orchestra behind every bush, a circus ring—real performers, with Elsie cracking the whip. What a gal! Only 75 or better. Knew I shouldn't have stayed home this summer—might have crawled in as an acrobat or something.

Met Doris Kenyon, looking as she did when I met her 15 years ago, accompanied by Albert Lasker. Happy to see him again. Flattered that he reads my column. The years have touched him with a magic wand.

Charlie Chaplin and Paulette. Charlie, after his year's sojourn at Del Monte, so full of vim it's frightening. He's running over with ideas. Hope he runs them onto the screen before they begin to bore him. And for those who tried to separate them, they're sure a happy looking pair.

Janet Gaynor is showing off her new Adrian haircut. It makes her sophisticated and gives an uplook. It is cut very short in back, then brushed straight up, quite full in front. Having it cut was a major operation.

"I'd as soon show my bare feet as my ears," said Janet—but there they are naked to the breeze.

Film Work for Nags Waiting Barrier

Most of the race horses which will take part in the next Santa Anita meet wil lbe in the money even before the racing season open.

Director David Butler has been making the rounds of the stables where they are quartered looking for good horse talent for the Technicolor production of "Kentucky," which he is now filming with Loretta Young, Richard Greene and Walter Brennan in the leading roles.

The hay burners will get a good workout in the racing sequences for the picture and will help their owners pay for their oats while waiting to go to the barrier.

*X WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1938 21

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. Or perhaps you read last night's dispatch from New York and I am late with the news. Anyway, Virginia, you need no longer be in doubt. You need but ask Wesley Cheek Ferrell. He'll tell you that there is, indeed, a Santa Claus.

POVICH.

Let's reconstruct the Ferrell case, briefly. He was a flop as a pitcher for the Nats this season, despite the 14 victories his record showed. Too many of those victories wouldn't stand investigation. For the most part they were high scoring affairs in which the Nats happened to drive in a few more runs than Ferrell let in. His pitching didn't justify his high salary, so the Nats fired him.

It looked like the end of the big league trail for Ferrell. No club in either league had enough respect for his slow ball to pay the $7,500 claiming price for him. But three days later the Yankees signed him. He had caught on with the league leaders, the team that virtually had the pennant won. He would continue to draw a big league salary.

It would be nice to be able to say that Ferrell showed his appreciation of the Yankees' faith in him by pitching sensational ball for McCarthy's team. But that isn't true. The only aspect of Ferrell's pitching for the Yankees during the past seven weeks which has been sensational is that it has been even worse than the pitching he served up for the Nats.

Half-Share May Be $3,000

Yet, yesterday, when the Yankees were engaged in the division of their World Series spoils in the customary preseries swag-splitting, what did they do but vote Mr. Ferrell a half share. Wes Ferrell's private Santa Claus was giving a return performance out of season.

Ferrell's half share of the World Series is no inconsiderable sum, either. At worst it will approximate $2,000, the loser's share. But the Yankees are not in the habit of accepting the loser's share of the World Series. Since 1921 they have been in ten World Series and they have dragged down the winner's share in eight. Half of a winner's share of the 1938 series will approximate $3,000.

When the Yankees split up their World Series money into 28 shares yesterday they gave another characteristic performance. The Yanks have always been known as the most generous of all clubs when it comes to dividing the World Series spoils. Yesterday, for example, they cut the batting practice pitcher in for a full share. And they gave the road secretary a three-fourths share and his assistant a half share. The clubhouse boy, too, was given a half share.

Club officials, including the manager, have no voice in these World Series splits, you know. The shares are voted by the players, and according to the word heard by this department it was Babe Ruth who set the style for Yankee generosity years ago. Perhaps it was the realization that his salary was so much greater than the others that prompted Ruth to be so generous with the series splits. Anyway, he always demanded that everybody be cut in and Ruth was Der Fuehrer in those Yankee clubhouse meetings.

Harking Back to 1925

Ruth always had deep contempt for the chiselers when it came to splitting the World Series shares. At Chicago, in 1932 he openly accused the Cubs of giving Mark Koenig, the former Yankee, the run-around in their World Series split. The Cubs that year cut Koenig in for only a half share despite the fact that he was a potent factor in their pennant drive in the last half of the season. It was in that 1932 series that Ruth, angered by the Cubs' treatment of Koenig, called his famous homerun shot.

There's no harm in telling now the story of the Washington Club's split of the 1925 World Series spoils. That was the year the Nats met Pittsburgh for the championship and the players had voted on the shares. A member of the Nats' organization at that time was Joe Engel, the club's scout. Engel was closer to the team than is the ordinary scout, because Engel was Washington's only scout.

A good half of that Washington team had been discovered by Engel. He had personally sent Bucky Harris, Ossie Bluege, Fred Marberry, Buddy Myer and Earl McNeely up to the big leagues and given them their chance. He felt that he would be treated well in the series split. And what did they vote Engel? A gold watch. He refused to accept it and Clark Griffith must have thought his athletes treated Engle badly because the Nats' owner personally gave Engel a sum of money equal to a half share.

The Cubs' 1939 Manager

If there were any doubt as to the identity of the Cubs' manager for 1939, it was dissipated yesterday with the echo of one hit that bounced from the bat of Charles Leo Hartnett. That blow, a home run with two out in the ninth, which beat the Pirates, certainly clinched Hartnett's berth for next season.

That homer wiped out the last vestige of the Pirates' league lead and lifted the Cubs to the top of the frenzied National League race. It was a heroic swat by the man charged with the success of the Cubs. Certainly it was the most dramatic swat of the season, no matter what the Cubs' ultimate fate may be.

The Cubs, it seems, have won 19 of their last 22 games under Hartnett to surge to the front from a point 8½ games behind the lead. But yesterday's victory was their most important for it climaxed a come-from-behind act.

In July when Hartnett was given Charley Grimm's managerial job to satisfy the demands of Cub fans who would not have tolerated any other choice, Owner Phil Wrigley was not entirely sure of Hartnett's managerial ability. In fact, the story is that Tony Lazzeri was Wrigley's No. 1 choice for the job, but he dared not risk public opinion. The Cubs were apparently out of the race and, according to the story, Wrigley could dispose of the Hartnett problem by permitting his bulky catcher to finish out the season as manager and then appoint Lazzeri.

It would be Hartnett's fling and, as Wrigley saw it, the Cubs would continue to flounder. In the winter the opposition to Lazzeri would have melted, and the new appointment could be made. But under Hartnett the Cubs did not flounder. What they did do was make one of the most stirring come-backs in all major league history. Hartnett's Cubs during the last two days have packed 77,000 fans into Wrigley Field and taken the league lead. That kind of management doesn't call for a new deal.

Krakauskas Holds Yanks As Nats Win

Gives Champs 5 Hits Lewis Gets Homer Score Is 4 to 1 Griffs Have Splurge

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Yankee Stadium, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Red-faced Joe Krakauskas, the Yankee killer, again demonstrated his mastery of the world champions today by allowing only five hits as the Nats took the season's finale between the clubs, 4-1.

LEWIS

In snapping the pennant-clinching Yank's two-game winning streak, Krakauskas fanned six and never was in serious trouble after the third when the McCarthymen took a momentary 1-0 lead.

Before the game the Yanks divided their prospective World Series pot between 37 persons, 28 receiving a full share. As proof of their generosity, the players voted Paul Schreiber, batting practice pitcher, a full share and Wes Ferrell a half share.

Only 1,500 fans were in the stands to see Krakauskas hook up in a great pitching duel with Paul (Icy) Andrews, who went the route and gave up seven hits.

The Yanks broke the ice in the third inning when Red Rolfe tripled after one was out and crossed the plate on a triple by Joe DiMaggio.

This advantage was short lived, however, for the Nats rushed back in the fourth to tie the score on Buddy Lewis' twelfth home run of the season, a towering smack into the rightfield stands. Then they put over the clincher in the fifth, bunching three hits, aided by a Yank error, for three runs.

Krakky Singles

The big frame started with one out, when Cece Travis lined a single to center and continued on to third as Andrews' throw to Gehrig, trying to pick Travis off first, bounded by the Iron Man into rightfield. Rick Ferrell singled to left, tallying Travis with the second Nat run.

Krakauskas then struck a blow in his own behalf, a one-base bingle to leftfield which Jake Powell allowed to roll through his legs, Ferrell scoring and Krakky taking third. George Case flied to Powell and Krakauskas, puffing like a locomotive, managed to beat the throw to the plate. That ended the scoring for the day, although the Yanks were dangerous to the end.

In the fifth inning Crosetti doubled to left center with one out and in the seventh the Yanks loaded the bags on a single by Rolfe and walks to Andrews and Hoag. But on each occasion Krakauskas rose to his task and turned back the Ruppert Rifles with nary a run.

Bears Win Title

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 28 (AP).—The Newark Bears won the International League's Championship Governors' Cup and qualified to meet the American Association winner in the Little World Series by trampling the Buffalo Bisons, 14 to 5, today in the deciding game of their final playoffs.

Bill Jurges, Cub shortstop, was slightly injured when he tried to score on Billy Herman's single to deep short in the sixth inning of the Chicago-Pittsburgh game yesterday at Chicago. Te was thrown out by Arky Vaughan, who made a neat throw to Catcher Todd. Jurges collided with the Bruin catcher and came out second best. Umpire Barr gave him the thumb.

Cub Shortstop Injured Trying to Score in Sixth

Circuit Slap In 9th Ends 5-to-5 Tie

He Hits Third Strike Chicago Takes Lead By Half-a-Game Use Six Pitchers

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—In the thickening gloom, with the score tied and two out in the ninth inning today, red-faced Gabby Hartnett blasted out a home run to give his Chicago Cubs a dramatic 6-to-5 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates and a half game leadership in the furious National League pennant battle.

HARTNETT

That is the story of one of the most sensational games ever played at Wrigley Field—a game which saw the fighting Cubs charge from behind to knot the score and then win out on a slashing drive to the leftfield bleachers to oust the Pirates from the No. 1 position they had held since July 12.

Hartnett's circuit smash, coming off Mace Brown with the count two strikes and no balls, probably saved the Cub pennant chances. Had he failed, the game would have been called because of darkness, necessitating a double bill tomorrow, which would have almost insurmountably handicapped the overtaxed Cub pitching staff.

The Cub manager, whose team was nine games out of first place a little more than a month ago, had to fight his way through a swirling, hysterical mob to touch all the bases and had trouble reaching the dugout. He called the victory and his hit "the two greatest things that ever happened to me in my life."

Hit, 2 Errors Help

A hit and two errors helped the Cubs to a run in the second, and with Clay Bryant pitching masterfully, stayed in front until the sixth. Then the Pirates, combining Johnny Rizzo's 21st homer of the season, with two other hits and a pair of walks, chased Bryant with a three-run blast. Jack Russell replaced Bryant.

The Bruins came roaring right back to tie the score in their half of the inning on doubles by Hartnett and Rip Collins, and a bunt which Billy Jurges beat out for a hit.

In the seventh, a furiously disputed double play pulled the Cubs out of another hole. The Pirates charged Vance Page who had replaced Russell, had committed a balk on the pitch Rizzo hit into the double killing, but succeeded only in using up time as darkness gathered.

The Pirates, battling desperately, went back to work in the eighth. Arky Vaughan walked and Gus Suhr singled. Larry French replaced Page. Heinie Manush batted for Pep Young and singled, scoring Vaughan. Big Bill Lee who finished yesterday's game, went in for French and was greeted by Lee Handley's single which scored Suhr. Manush was nailed at the plate when Al Todd grounded to Jurges, but after Lee wild-pitched Handley to third, Lee restored order by forcing Bob Klinger to hit into a double play.

Klinger Is Chased

Collins opened the Cub eighth with a single which sent Klinger to the showers, Bill Swift taking his place; Jurges walked and Tony Lazzeri, former Yankee star, slashed a pinch double to right, scoring Collins and putting Jurges on third. Hack was passed and Herman singled, scoring Jurges with the tying run. However, on the play Joe Marty, running for Lazzeri, was out at the plate, Paul Waner to Todd. Mace Brown replaced Swift and forced Demaree to hit into a double play.

Charley Root pitched for the Cubs in the ninth and held the Pirate to one hit, a single by Paul Waner. Cavarretta and Reynolds were easy outs before Hartnett won the battle and put his team on top for the first time since June 8. It was the Cubs' ninth straight victory and their nineteenth in their last 22 games.

Packers Beat Cards, 24-22

Field Goal Wins Game Tiny Engebretsen Star Fumble Aids Winner

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 28 (AP).—The Green Bay Packers, playing inspired football in the closing minutes of a thrill-packed National League professional game, defeated their traditional rivals, the Chicago Cardinals, 24-22, in Civic Stadium tonight.

With only a minute to play, and trailing 22-21, Tiny Engebretsen, veteran of seven years in the big time, kicked a placement from the Cardinals' 12-yard line to send the Packers into a lead which they protected until the final whistle.

The break for the Packers came when Hal Pangle, former Oregon State star playing quarterback for the Cards, fumbled on his own 37-yard line. Baby Ray recovered for the Packers and his mates, on two drives through the line, hung up two first downs. That put the ball in position for Engebretsen's "Stover at Yale" finale.

On the first play of the fourth period, Bill Smith placed-kicked from the 32-yard line, to make the score, Packers 21, Cards 16. A few plays later, Ray Paker intercepted Monnett's short pass across the line of scrimmage and raced to the Packers' 35-yard maker. Jack Robbins threw one 19 yars to Pete Tyler, quarterback, who nabbed it on the 1-yard line and stumbled across to put the Cards in the lead, 22 to 21.

Seabiscuit Captures $10,000 Handicap

Misses Record by Fifth of Second Brings Backers a $3.10 Ticket Savage Beauty Runs Second

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 28.—Almost knocked down, Seabiscuit proved his mettle today by recovering and driving to a 2½-length victory in the twenty-eighth renewal of the $10,000 added Havre de Grace Handicap. "The Biscuit wobbled under me and I thought sure we were going down," said Jockey Georgie Woolf after the race, "but believe me, he's some horse."

On the outside and swinging around the field at the clubhouse turn to improve his position, Seabiscuit was struck by Marcia who had been crowded by Masked General. Seabiscuit staggered under the impact and lost many lengths in recovering, but he was soon on his way again—on his way to victory in a race won by Equipoise, Sun Beau, Chance Play, Crusader and other former turf stars.

Despite his rough trip, Seabiscuit was able to turn in time of 1:50 for the mile and an eighth, only a fifth of a second over the record for the track which Osculator set in 1933 with Jockey Don Meade in the saddle.

W. L. Brann's Savage Beauty proved the surprise of the race, finishing second to the great Seabiscuit. She would have paid $234.40 had she won. She had a margin of a length and a half over Hal Price Headley's Menow at the end.

Menow had a splendid excuse, however. The gallant son of Pharamond II virtually ran his legs off in an effort to stave off Seabiscuit's bid. He pulled up limping on his front legs, and Jockey L. Hass dismounted on the far side of the track and the colt was led away.

Regains His Footing

As an investment Seabiscuit paid $3.10 in the mutuels. The crowd of 12,000 whittled his odds down steadily from 8 to 5. Owner Charles S. Howard, who claimed Seabiscuit as a castoff, received $8,175 today, bringing Seabiscuit's earnings for 1938 to $113,895. The son of Hard Tack's lifetime winnings now total $323,980, against the record of $376,744 held by Sun Beau.

Seabiscuit was out of the gate fastest, but dropped back slightly in the first few jumps. Menow had a slight lead over Savage Beauty approaching the clubhouse turn. At this point, Seabiscuit was in full stride and Woolf took him to the outside for racing room. Marica, T. A. Taggart's speedy mare, had gotten off poorly, but had speed and rushed up on the inside of Seabiscuit. The two came together and Seabiscuit stumbled. Woolf caught him up sharply and the horse regained his footing.

Menow and Savage Beauty continued their pacemaking battle entering the backstretch, but Seabiscuit was close up at this time. Woolf was content to hold his position going to half pole. Swinging for the stretch he put Seabiscuit to the whip and he responded by going around Menow to get to the front. Woolf then put his whip away and handrode the great horse to the wire. Savage Beauty had

Jim Adamick Hurt in Kayo

Is Floored by Toles Rushed to Hospital May Be Badly Hurt

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 28.—Roscoe Toles, Detroit Negro heavyweight, scored a technical knockout victory over Jimmy Adamick, young Midland (Mich.) battler, in the second round of their scheduled 10-round engagement at Olympia Stadium tonight.

Down four times and hopelessly outclassed in the first round, Adamick was knocked cold by a terrific right-hand punch delivered 40 seconds after the second got under way. Referee Clarence Rosen did not even start a count, summoning Adamick's handlers to come to his rescue.

Toles launched a blazing two-fisted attack from the opening gong that appeared to have Adamick bewildered. The Negro landed almost at will and before a minute had elapsed Adamick was on the deck. He was down three times more, being saved by the bell at the count of eight.

Adamick weighed 186 and his opponent 10 pounds more.

When Adamick failed to revive after five minutes of work by his handlers he was carried from the ring to the dressing room and physicians were summoned. Referee Rosen said that in his opinion Adamick was in a critical condition.

Adamick, knocked out for the first time in his 56 professional fights, failed to recover consciousness in the dressing room and a police ambulance rushed him to a hospital.

After the fighter had undergone an examination Dr. S. L. Drekin, physician for the Michigan Boxing Commission, said Adamick had a cerebral concussion and that his condition was "temporarily serious." He added that he expected Adamick to recover.

Two hours after the fight's abrupt end he still was unconscious.

Coach Bezdek Is Discharged By Cleveland

Cleveland, Sept. 28 (AP).—The Cleveland Rams today discharged Hugo L. Bezdek as head football coach and announced that Assistant Mentor Art Lewis, former Ohio U. tackle, would take over temporarily. Under Bezdek, former grid mentor at Penn State, and other colleges and from 1917 through 1919 manager of the Pittsburgh Baseball Pirates, the Rams won only one National Professional Football League game last year and none of their three loop starts this season.

Betty Jameson Wins First Round Match

Philadelphia, Sept. 28 (AP).—Betty Jameson, San Antonio, Tex., golfer, won her first round match today in the Berthellyn Cup Invitation tournament at the Huntingdon Valley Counrty Club, 7 and 6, from Mrs. Max Berg, of Philadelphia.

Other winners today included Betty Abernethy, Pittsburgh; Mary Kuhn, Pittsburgh; Mrs. Norman Lack, Wilmington, Del., who defeated Mrs. Boyd Morrow, Baltimore, 6 and 4, and Jean Kyer, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Wes Ferrell Voted Half-Slice Of Series Melon

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 28.—The New York Yankees, American League pennant winners, voted today to split their part of the World Series players' share 36 ways.

Manager Joe McCarthy, 22 players, Coaches Art Fletcher, Earl Combs and Johnny Schulte, Batting Practice Pitcher Paul Schrieber and Trainer Earl (Doc) Painter were voted full shares.

Half shares will go to Pitchers Wes Ferrell, who recently came to the club from the Senators; Joe Beggs, who was returned to Newark in midseason, and Joe Vance, brought up from Kansas City. Rex Weyant, assistant road secretary, gets half a share, and Mark Roth, road secretary, three-quarters of a share.

Marathon Golfer Finishes Exhausted

Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 28 (AP).—Utterly exhausted as he sank the final putt, J. Smith Ferebee, Chicago's golfing broker, finished his transcontinental golf tour of 600 holes at the Salisbury Country Club at 10:30 tonight, an hour and a half before the four days' time limit of his bet expired.

Ferebee played two rounds of 86 and 92 this afternoon. Then, accompanied by a fire truck laden with searchlights and $100 worth of flares, went on to shoot the last two 18-hole rounds in 94 and 96 tonight to finish well within the maximum of 100 strokes per 18-hole round.

Urick Makes Bid for Place In G. W. Team's Backfield

Sophomore Fullback Shows Promise Hoyas Point for Hampden-Sydney Catholic U., Maryland in Drills

By Jack Munhall.

The Geore Washington backfield situation, already more scrambled than your morning eggs, was further complicated yesterday as Lud Urick, a sophomore fullback, definitely entered the race for a starting position as the Colonials concentrated on pass defense and play formations in a drill at the Polo Field.

Urick, 5-foot-10, 175 pounds of elusiveness and power, continued to show vast improvement over his dismal spring performance and his late bid is commanding so much attention that Coach Bill Reinhart doesn't yet know who will start against Furman tomorrow night.

Until Urick began to shine as Reinhart stressed blocking and pass defense several days ago it was expected that Tonkavitch would get the nod for the fullback or blocking, plunging position. Now it's a toss-up. Add to that Reinhart's dilemma as he tries to choose between Vic Sampson, Billy Richardson, Biff Borden and Frank Merka, veterans, and Sophomores Fred Sartore, Tom Grady and Ken Batson to fill the other jobs and you have the situation.

Sampson, a slender, little fellow with a world of speed and shiftiness, is almost a certain starter at left halfback, the running back. But Richardson, a stocky, hard-hitting line plunger and an excellent passer, is best in the same role. To solve that problem, Reinhart may shift one to right halfback and thus have both in the line-up.

But there's still another catch. Tonakvitch, Sampson and Richardson are all small, and not the kind of backs to stop a good passing attack, so Reinhart has been working with Grady, one of th etaller boys, in his efforts to bolster the aerial defense. Time will tell, but right now Reinhart's genial face looks like a road map as he furrows his brow in contemplation of his young football men.

Georgetown, pointing for its opener against Hampden-Sydney Saturday, spent the greater part of yesterday's drill polishing up plays and testing the varsity's plays against the frosh, equipped with Tiger formations.

The Tigers, incidentally, loom as a real game for the Hilltoppers who will place at least six sophomores in the starting lineup. George Murtagh, line coach with a reputation for sincerity, scouted Hampden-Sydney last Saturday when it lost a 7-6 contest to W. and L. and reports the visitors no set-up.

The Tigers are said to have a rugged eleven—nothing fancy—but a group of hard-working, spirited players who fight for every inch of ground. Their star is Capt. Al Buchinsky, a great defensive end.

Other powerful units in the team coached by Charley Bernier, a vet-

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald

Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month."

The outstanding performer in the Nats' victory at Yankee Stadium yesterday was blond Joe Krakauskas and to him goes the chief share of points in the latest award in the Man of the Month contest. The points were distributed as follows:

To Krakauskas, five points, because he pitched a clever game in holding the Yankees to five hits and one run and because he contributed a single to the Nats' attack.

To Buddy Lewis, two points, because his home run tied the score for the Nats in the fourth inning.

To Al Simmons, two points, because he pounded out a pair of doubles.

To Rick Ferrell, one point, because he contributed a single that drove in a run for the Nats.

THE SCORE.

Billy Direct Sets Mile Pace Record

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 28 (AP).—Billy Direct, four-year-old pacer owned by McConville and Downey, of Ogdensburg, N. J., lowered the world's mile record for harness racers to 1:55 today. The official time was announced by Jesse Shuff, racing secretary of the Lexington trots.

Shuff said the time was the fastest ever recorded by harness racers of either gait. It displaced the record set by Dan Patch in a race here in 1905.

been jammed in along the rail at the turn. However, she refused to give up and "came again" in the closing strides to be second. Menow held on courageously despite his ailing legs.

Apprentice Jockey George Witmer, whose stock has risen many points since he came over from the half-milers, added another winner to his string in the first race, when Nancy Reed, a daughter of Ladkin, took the first race at a $23.50 mutuel. Chatabit, a field representative, was second, beaten a half-length, with Fair Rock, an odds-on favorite handled by Jockey Johnny Gilbert, third. Fair Rock set most of the pace, but folded badly in the late stretch.

Golden Vein Wins

Golden Vein scored another of his occasional victories in the second race. The 7-year-old, owned by Mrs. P. D. Watts, came from far back to win going away from Idle Elf. Tutticurio was third in the group of 12. Bread King set the pace and stopped, allowing Idle Elf to get to the front, but Golden Vein had too much punch for his rival. The veteran paid $6.30. Nancy Reed and Golden Vein brought double players $67.40.

Scarlet O, the favorite, won the third race as Rocky Road, a hot paddock tip, finished third in a field of a dozen distance horses. Patient Saint took second money from Rocky Road via the camera. The latter appeared to be best in the race, but Jockey F. Schieh tried to go to the inside of the track, where Scarlet O was running, and was blocked several times. The winner paid $6.10.

White Sand, at $11.50, finished two lengths in advance of Knight Warrior in the fourth race, a test of a mile and a sixteenth, which drew seven starters. Toni was third. Jockey Ralph Eccard gave the winner an excellent ride. Chimney Top and Knight Warrior set the pace most of the trip, but the St. Germans filly held her opposition safe in the closing eighth.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NANCY REED, $23.50, $9.00, $4.00; CHATABIT (field), $20.50, $5.10; FAIR ROCK, $2.60.

NANCY REED, forwardly placed from start, was sent to outside for racing room, rallied to drive to wear down FAIR ROCK and was going gamely at end. CHATABIT, always close up, came with good courage in closing stages, but could not resist winner. FAIR ROCK, first away, opened a good lead, but weakened through stretch. PART ONE, improved position sharply on inside approaching stretch, but hung. SHALL WE DANCE went evenly. WILD IRISH had early speed and weakened. The others were not prominent.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:56½. Off 3:00. Winner, Mrs. P. D. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN VEIN, $6.30, $4.30, $2.90; IDLE ELF, $10.40, $6.40; TUTTICURIO, $4.70.

GOLDEN VEIN, off sluggishly, improved position gradually and closed with rush to be up in concluding strides. IDLE ELF, in thick of contention from start, took brief lead between calls in stretch, but was no match for winner. TUTTICURIO pressed pace of BREAD KING and weakened in final stages. FRENCH TRAP was far out of it to stretch and came between horses with terrific rush. COMPANY HALT had speed in spots after breaking in tangle. TULEYRIES LIN showed good effort. BREAD KING stopped badly after setting pace under hustling tactics. POLLY JO had speed for a quarter.

Daily Double, Nancy Reed and Golden Vein, Paid $67.40.

THIRD RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:32. Off 3:36. Winner, H. M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCARLET O, $6.10, $4.40, $2.90; PATIENT SAINT, $13.60, $7.10; ROCKY ROAD, $3.00.

SCARLET O took command approaching far turn, drew clear and was kept to drive to end. PATIENT SAINT, allowed to settle into best stride, came with rush on outside to be going fastest of all. ROCKY ROAD was poorly handled, held forward position throughout, but was blocked repeatedly in stretch when Schieh insisted on going to inside of SCARLET O and tired. SCHLEY NURSE showed a good effort. WESTBROOKE was held safe throughout. DIONITARY was through early after being started outside gates. FRANK BROOKE set early pace and stopped.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:11. Off 4:13½. Winner, W. E. Johnson's b. f. (4), by St. Germans—Zelide. Trained by C. P. Miles, jr. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:47.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHITE SAND, $11.50, $5.30, $3.50; KNIGHT WARRIOR, $3.40, $2.40; TONI, $3.50.

WHITE SAND, steadied along, began improving position leaving backstretch, disposed of KNIGHT WARRIOR to take command and drew out under drive. KNIGHT WARRIOR forged to front after a quarter, but was unable to stave off winner's challenge. TONI weakened after reaching contention after a half. CHIMNEY TOP was taken up after losing lead entering stretch and ran scrub at end. ABBATORO closed with good energy. ASKARIS tired. KINROSS had early speed and stopped badly.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $10,000 added. The Havre de Grace Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:45½. Off 4:48½. Winner, C. S. Howard's b. h. (5), by Hard Tack—Swing On. Trained by T. Smith. Net value to winner, $8,175; second, $2,000; third, $1,000; fourth, $500. Time, 1:50.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEABISCUIT, $3.10, $3.00, $2.60; SAVAGE BEAUTY, $33.00, $12.30; MENOW, $3.80.

SEABISCUIT, bumped by MARICA at first turn while moving around horses, improved position steadily to take command over MENOW approaching stretch and was kept to strong hand ride to end. SAVAGE BEAUTY, steadied along closest to pace of MENOW, dropped back turning for home and came again in closing eighth. MENOW was rushed to front, was rated while setting good pace, but weakened when caught and pulled up lame. REX FLAG raced wide throughout and closed with good energy. ESPOSA, lacking early speed, was not a factor. TWO BOB was outclassed. MARICA was sent up between horses at first turn, bothered SEABISCUIT and weakened after reaching contention. MASKED GENERAL was in tight quarters along rail and weakened badly.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,500. The Homeland. Grade C. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:23. Off 5:24½. Winner, R. Parr's br. c. (3), by Wrack—Preteuse. Trained by J. P. Jones. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $280; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:46 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HYPOCRITE, $4.50, $3.50, $2.60; GREY JACK (entry), $4.40, $2.80; MR. CANRON, $2.80.

HYPOCRITE, rated while setting pace with GENIE PALATINE for half, drew out when asked and had to be put to strong drive in closing stages to stave off GREY JACK. The latter, allowed to settle into best stride, came gamely in closing quarter. MR. CANRON, trailer for half, improved position on outside and closed boldly. BEWITCHED, taken up when in close quarters going to first turn, closed some ground. GENIE PALATINE stopped after pressing pace for half. PATTY CAKE had early foot. GREY COUNT was through early.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:34½. Off 5:37. Winner, J. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHOT UP, $8.60, $4.00, $3.10; WOULD DARE, $3.30, $2.80; SCIVA, $7.50.

SHOT UP, under restraint while close up, rallied when placed to drive approaching stretch, opened a long lead and was being taken up at end. WOULD DARE, slow to begin, went wide for racing room to improve position along backstretch and closed with terrific rush. SCIVA pressed early pace of JUSTA GAL and weakened in closing test. JUSTA GAL tired from hard usage while setting pace. COUNTER PASS moved up menacingly after a mile, but weakened. RESURRECTION broke down in running.

Jacola Is Beaten By Idle Miss At Belmont Park

Belmont Park, N. Y., Sept. 28 (AP). B. F. Christmas' Idle Miss, which was beaten off in Esposa's Hawthorne Gold Cup over a heavy track, today returned to top form and defeated nine others of her sex in the sixty-eighth ladies' handicap of one mile. Paying 5 to 1, the four-year-old daughter of Distriction—Misleading earned a purse of $5,400 and ran the eight furlongs in 1:37 3-5 over a fast strip.

Edward Friendly's Jacola, champion two-year-old filly of 1937, which recently made her three-year-old bow here with an impressive victory, finished second in the role of an 8-to-5 choice. Picking up six pounds over her last start, when she ran a mile in 1:36 4-5 under 111, the favorite held a length advantage over Louie Strube's Elderly Rust. Roguish Girl and Fair Stein finished in a dead heat for fourth, according to the camera.

Jacola was topweight by the scale, giving the winner one pound. Idle Miss carried the most actual weight in the field, under 123 pounds.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

Roll Call

New York, Sept. 28.—Two years ago the sphere of sports never had heard his name. Two years ago he was just a young fellow working around the Greenbrier in White Sulphur Springs, uncertain about his future and taking the praise that was pounded in his ears by those who watched him play golf with a smile of disbelief.

VIDMER.

Two years ago he started on a tour that would test his ability to play with the best, the winter circuit that winds through California, Texas, Florida, Georgia and the Carolinas. And the tour wasn't more than half over before his name started hitting the headlines regularly.

I happened to run into the caravan in Florida that year and all the veteran campaigners were eager to sing the praises of Sam Snead. They said he would be the greatest golfer who ever lived. They said he had every shot in the bag. They said that he would put the game on a new basis.

Two years, or almost two years have sped by since then and Sam Snead hasn't won the National Open Championship, the P. G. A. title or the Masters Crown. The highest honors have escaped him, some by a mere stroke or two Yet those veterans who predicted his rapid rise to the heights were not wrong, for he must stand today as the uncrowned champion of them all.

The longest test to which the field ever has been subjected was completed over the Fenway Course at Westchester this week, and Sam Snead's name was leading the list at the finish. But that isn't the basis for calling him the uncrowned champion. It is only a contributing factor. He has gained the heights not through a single triumph in the open or the P. G. A., but through his performance across the year, starting on the winter circuit, including the championships through the summer season and winding up with the six-round marathon in Westchester.

During that time he hasn't captured any of the major crowns, but his competitive scoring record leads all the rest, and he has accumulated $17,572 in prize money alone. This figure sets a new record for golf winnings. The best money maker generally takes in around $8,000. But Snead has spread-eagled the field and left the veteran campaigners with little except the satisfaction of knowing that they were right when they predicted a great future for him two years ago.

The Lost Battalion

Sore arms seemed to end the acreers of several pitching favorites earlier in the year and the game sighed a silent farewell to such stars of another day as Dizzy Dean, his brother, Paul, and Lefty Grove. They collapsed under the years of toil and were accounted lost.

Paul Dean was sent back to the minors without much hope that he could deliver satisfactorily even there. But he won one game and then another in the Texas League, his arm grew stronger and steadier, and finally, with reservations, the Cardinals brought him back again. It was a frail hope that he could win in the majors, but it was worth trying, and Paul came through with two victories before he was defeated on Tuesday.

Dizzy Dean was carried as excess baggage by the Cubs throughout the campaign. Once or twice he stepped onto the mound and threw with indifferent success, but all the while he was suffering a sore arm and even the Chicago fans had given up on him.

Then the Cubs started their drive for the pennant. They cut down the lead of the pace-setting Pirates until they were within striking distance. And finally the Pirates came to Chicago for the crucial series now in progress. The pennant hung in the balance, and it was Dizzy Dean on whom Manager Hartnett called in the crisis.

It was a great gamble when Dean was selected to open the series, and Gabby Hartnett probably had more faith in Dizzy's competitive spirit and unflagging courage than he did in his speed or curves. But it turned out that spirit and courage were enough, if that's all Dean had, for he shut out the Pirates for eight innings and left the box only when his arm was hanging limp at his side.

Philadelphia, Sept. 28.—The Boston Red Sox defeated the Athletics, 2 to 1, today to sweep the two-game series. Joe Heving held the athletics to six hits and won over Lynn Nelson in a pitching duel.

Frank Hayes' home run in the seventh was the athletics only score.

A pass to Jimmy Foxx and Joe Cronin's double scored the Red Sox's first run in the opening inning and Cronin's walk, a stolen base and two infield outs counted for the winning run in the seventh.

Dettweilers, Mrs. Bishop Hill, John Brawner Tie With 74s

D. C. Mixed Event Ends In Deadlock

Net to Rixey-Burnett Dettweilers Have 35 Lowest Nine of Day Play at Washington

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Congressional's golfing champions, Helen and Billy Dettweiler, and Mrs. Bishop Hill and John Brawner, of Chevy Chase, scored 4 over par 74s to tie for low gross in the District Golf Association's annual mixed Scotch foursome tournament yesterday at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

The brother-sister duo recorded the lowest nine of the day on the outgoing trip with a regulation 35, only to hit two bad holes coming back for a 39 and the 74. Mrs. Hill, Chevy Chase Club champion, and Brawner, semifinalist in his club's invitation event, paired duplicate nines of 37.

Lillian Rixey and Volney Burnett held a 5-stroke margin over the low net prize winners with a 42, 39—81, minus a 13 handicap for a 68. Miss Rixey and Burnett, who paired with Mrs. Meckley to win low gross in this tourney last year, were out in 42 and back in 39.

Due to the low gross tie and the fact that there was only one prize, Mrs. Hill and Brawner accepted second low net, with their 74-4, 70. An Indian Spring team of Mrs. H. W. Sharpe and Dick Melvin won third low net with 40-44, 84-11, 73, a 6-6 finish costing them a possible tie.

Three teams tied for fourth low net, with Mrs. H. I. Simcoe and P. W. Calfee, of Manor, winning in the draw. They had 87-13, 74. Others in the 74 bracket included Mrs. Charlotte Stern and Roger Peacock, Indian Spring, with 78-4, 74, and Mrs. R. E. Hotze and Walter McCallum, of the host club, 85-11, 74.

Hitting selective drives and alternate shots, the Dettweilers had four birdies in their round, starting with a three and finishing the first nine, 3—2, against par of 4—3. Three over par holes, the birdies and three pars, left them with a par round of 35. A 6 on 10 and 7 on 15, where they mixed with a tree and a ditch, cost 4 strokes to par on the back nine, while Billy's 55-foot putt for a birdie 2 accounted for a birdie on 14.

The Hill-Brawner due mixed a dozen pars, a birdie deuce on the second and five one-over-par holes for the 74. Both Brawner and Billy Dettweiler made 4-foot putts on the final hole for the tie.

Mize Leads Attack Takes Batting Lead Displaces Lombardi

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Sept. 28.—Johnny Mize, St. Louis Cardinal first baseman, belted out three hits today to move into first position in National League batting and help the Cards beat Cincinnati, 8 to 7.

Ernie Lombardi, Reds' catcher, who was displaced from the league leadership, collected a double and single in five times at bat to stay on Mize's heels with .3368 to .3392.

The two will be on the same diamond again tomorrow. Mize has only four more games to play, so Lombardi with five to play still has an opportunity to shove the Cardinal back into runner-up position.

Both Baugh, Farkas Will Battle Giants

Star Passer Ready New Attack Planned

A backfield containing both Sammy Baugh and Andy Farkas will be sent against the New York Giants at Griffith Stadium on October 9, it was made plain yesterday by Head Coach Ray Flaherty, of the Redskins.

Declaring that the injured Baugh would be physically fit for action against the Giants, Flaherty yesterday set about devising new plays for his team in which Baugh's passing and Farkas' running will be featured.

The battle with the Giants, whom the Redskins view as their most serious rival for Eastern division honors, will present Baugh and Farkas in a Redskin backfield together for the first time.

Farkas, an unknown quantity, did not figure in the Redskins' opening game of the season, Baugh, injured in that game, has not played since. Meanwhile Farkas has demonstrated that he is the Redskins' most potent running back and Flaherty is eager to pattern a new attack for the Redskins.

The Redskin coach is seeking to design an offensive game modeled after his famous Baugh-Battles attack of last season. Confident that Farkas can carry on in Battles' place, Flaherty is re-equipping the team with plays that feature a mixed running and passing game.

Baugh is still wearing a brace about his injured left shoulder and is likely to carry the fixture into the game with the Giants. The Redskins will play an exhibition game at Louisville on Sunday—an open date in the league schedule—and Baugh will make an appearance to fulfill the club's contract with Louisville. But Slingin' Sammy is not slated to see much action in the exhibition.

Official league statistics, released yesterday, reveal that the Redskins are leading the league in points scored (79), in yards gained by rushing (495), and yards gained by passing (458.)

In other departments of play, the Redskins' honors are dubious. They have the lowest yardage in punting average (37) and have recovered only one of the opposition's fumbles.

The most alert team in the league in point of recovering fumbles is the Philadelphia Eagles who have pounced on seven opposition fumbles, five for touchdowns and one leading to a field goal.

Passes Produce Scores Wicklein Throws Click Boothe, Laddbush Star

Roosevelt High School's eleven opened its season yesterday with a 1-to-0 victory over an alumni team in a rough game at Roosevelt Stadium.

Both touchdowns were the results of forward passes by Lester Wicklein.. The first, in the third quarter, was a 1-yard throw to Dan Boothe, lanky end, who caught the ball near the goal line and stepped over.

Then in the fourth quarter Wicklein flipped a 20-yard pass to Halfback Yankee Laddbush, to wind up the day's scoring.

The alumni threatened several times, but twice pass receivers fumbled in the clear and twice the Roosevelt line stiffened in the shadow of the goal line and held for downs.

Colleges

eran of 20 years' experience, are Syd Walchen, halfback, and Will Craft, 200 pounds of tackle.

Utter privacy was the keynote again yesterday as Catholic University continued preparation for strong St. Bonaventure's, opening game opponent Sunday. The gates to C. U. stadium were bolted and a huge canvas draped over the surrounding fence as Coach A. J. Bergman drove his charges through a tough two-hour drill.

Offense was stressed as the brains of the Cardinal coaching staff sought to smash the Saints' well-nigh impregnable defense which thrice stopped Manhattan in the shadow of the goal line Saturday when the Jaspers bowed in a stunning upset.

Passes, passes and more passes is expected to be C. U.'s line of attack Sunday, for in Burke Vidnovic the Cards have probably the most dangerous aerial specialist in the immediate vicinity.

Over at College Park, Maryland University has discovered a new star. He's Joe Murphy, a 151-pound speedster from Tome, who boasts triple-threat talents. Since Charlie Weidinger, the Terps' ace quarterback, has been on the side lines with an injury sustained in the Richmond game Saturday, young Joseph has been running wild.

Though not the forward passer Weidinger is, Murphy, who has run 100 yards in 0:9.09, is giving the ends head colds the way he breezes around the flanks.

Coach Dobson still is undecided about his ends. Francis Beamer and Nick Budkoff, starters against Richmond, are playing with the second team and making a game fight to get back on the varsity. Their old positions are held by Frank Blazcek and Frank Dwyer, but they are not certain to be in Maryland's regular line-up for the Penn State game Saturday.

Katan Meets Robert Here In Mat Bout

Pair Clash Tonight Program at Arena Rudy Dusek Booked First Match at 8:30

Yvon Robert, the reformed blacksmith, and John Katen, the erstwhile Northwest Mountie, will peck away at one another tonight at Turner's Arena in the headline wrestling bout.

This is no easy assignment and Robert, former world's champion, will consider himself lucky if he escapes defeat.

Robert's lone defeat (if you can call it that) in all his years of wrestling in Washington came a few seasons ago in the Arena. He met up with Cliff Olson. Robert was champion. The French Canadian easily had the best of it, until he fractured his leg. Olson was given the fall, though later he refused to accept it. That is how Robert lost.

Wrestling fans and veteran observers rate Robert one of the fastest workers in the ring. He goes at breakneck speed, and is capable of matching villainy with villainy, power with power.

Robert has one local win under his belt. It was achieved a few weeks ago, with staggering Emil Dusek the victim.

Katan, however, made his last two opponents give up. Executing punishing figure-four leg locks, Katan trimmed Kibbons and Red Ryan.

It is no secret that Katan would like to set up a reign of terror such as that enjoyed by his one-time rival, Laverne Baxter. Cliff Olson, who couldn't do anything clean in the ring, is on a European tour. Bibber McCoy, who considers himself the No. 1 villain, is in "Dutch" for slugging Referee Bortnick, and it appears that Katan may take over the top bad-man role.

Some expert matmen are in the supporting bouts. Hank Barber, who was some shucks as an athlete at Dartmouth, engages Ed Meske, the handsome boy who starred at Ohio State. This is a special match, by popular demand, and may project the winner into a headline role next week against the winner of the Katan-Robert bout.

Of particular interest is the return of Roughhouse Rudy Dusek, chief of the notorious "Riot Squad," who will go against Angelo Savoldi, first cousin of Dynamite Joe, in a 30-minute brawl. Rudy would like to win back some of his lost prestige.

Chris Zaharias, brother of the more famous George, comes back for a battle with Walter Podolak, the health instructor. Zaharias once was a masked marvel.

Gino (Red) Vagonne, who made a big hit last week, faces rough Ed Newman.

First bout is at 8:30.

Fred Perry Paces Pro Net Tourney; D. C. Player Loses

Chicago, Sept. 28 (AP).—Fred Perry, English professional tennis star, won his first round match in the National Professional Tennis Tournament in the Chicago Arena tonight, defeating Bill Croker, of Chicago, 6—0, 6—3, 6—4.

Perry, whose wife, film actress Helen Vinson, was injured in an auto accident, decided to remain in Chicago for the tournament after talking to her by telephone.

Lloyd Budge, brother of the famed Don and professional at Chicago's Knollwood Country Club, defeated Allan E. Wylie, Chicago, 6—0, 6—2, 6—4.

Berkeley Bell, New York, defeated George O'Connell, Chicago, 6—2, 6—1, 6—2.
Phil Greenstein, Cleveland, defeated Herb Stead, Harrisonville, R. I., 6—4, 6—3, 6—4.
Johnny Faunce, Hollywood, Calif., defeated Russell Harned, Gibson Island, Md., 6—2, 6—0, 6—1.
Joe Whalen, Troy, Ohio, defeated Frank Goeltz, Washington, D. C., 6—1, 6—2, 6—2.
Walter Senior, San Francisco, defeated Louis A. Volpe, Jr., Chicago, 6—1, 6—1, 6—4.

Rolling Road Event Shea, Burnett Play Qualify Two Days

A quartet of potential champions from Washington, Billy Shea, Billy Dettweiler, Earl McAleer and Voney Burnett, have entered the Rolling Road Invitation tournament that starts today with an 18-hole qualifying round. All told 23 local linksmen entered, with three playing today and 20 tomorrow in the second day's qualifying.

A field of 130 players, topped by the host club star Spencer Overton and including Ernie Caldwell, Baltimore C. C. Invitation champion, and Otto Greiner, the Maryland State and Middle Atlantic titleholder, have entered the event over the Catonsville, Md., course.

Post entries will be accepted by the tournament committee, with Danny Miller in charge, but must play before noon on one of the two day's qualifying. Five flights will qualify for match play, with the first and second rounds on Friday and semifinals and finals Sunday.

Dettweiler and Shea play today while local players that qualify tomorrow include Burnett and McAleer, Mel Shipley and Leroy Sasscer, co-holder of the State two-ball championship.

Cliff Spencer's course record of 67 will be the object of the field in the medal rounds the first two days of the tourney.

Tigers Bury Browns; Hank Goes Hitless

Score Is 12 to 0 Greenberg Fans George Hill Wins Mills Is Routed

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 28.—Hank Greenberg, needing two more home runs to tie Babe Ruth's major league record of 60, went hitless today as his Detroit Tiger teammates batted out a 12-to-0 victory over the St. Louis Browns. The big first baseman walked twice, struck out twice and lifted one pop fly.

George Gill scattered eight St. Louis hits to win his twelfth game of the season.

The Tigers hit Howard Mills, Brownie starting pitcher, hard, collecting six runs in the third inning on as many hits. After filling the bases with one out in the sixth, Mills retired. George Tebbetts, first to face Relief Hurler Emil Bildilli, pounded the ball into the leftfield stands to clean the sacks.

Wheat Slides 4 Cents With Peace Hopes

Trading Is Feverish
Export 3,000,000 Bu.
Liverpool Prices Dip

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—Abrupt quenching of worldwide blazing of war fears today led to sensational setbacks of wheat prices, about 4 cents here and 8 cents at Liverpool. The tumbles were from early big jumps of values that had been in process when bulletins announced Reichsfuehrer Hitler had unexpectedly halted German military mobilization, and had called a four-power European conference to settle the Czechoslovakian war crisis.

Feverish trading insued, and at some stages the simultaneous prices for wheat in different sections of the speculative pit, varied as much as 1¼ cents a bushel. Helping to bring about relative steadiness, however, at lower levels of quotations were estimates that export takings of North American wheat had broadened to around 3,000,000 bushels, more than two-thirds of it purchased from the United States largely through Federal subsidy channels.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were within about a cent of the days bottom prices, 1⅜@1¾ cents lower, compared with yesterday's finish; December, 65¼@65⅜; May, 68@66¼. Corn unchanged to ⅜ off; December, 50½@50¾; May, 53⅛@53¼. Oats at ⅛ decline to ⅛ advance. Rye showing ⅝ to 1 cent drop, and provisions unchanged to a recession of 2 cents.

Cotton Rallies; December 7.91

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—Cotton quickly rallied from early declines today when the news was flashed from London that Chancellor Hitler had called a four-power conference. December sold up from 7.73 to 7.95 and closed at 7.90, with final prices 2 to 7 points net higher.

The market opened 9 to 14 points lower under liquidation and foreign selling owing to pessimistic overnight reports from Europe. Issuance of 12 October notices depressed the near month, but spot house support soon appeared. The list steadied, and then toward the end of the first half hour prices rallied as much as $1 a bale on the European news. A little profit taking appeared on the advance, but October continued in demand and the list generally ruled steady.

FHA Plans 400,000 Units During 1938

By the Associated Press.

Stewart McDonald, the Federal Housing administrator, told President Roosevelt yesterday that approximately 400,000 new dwelling units would be built during 1938, compared with 275,000 units last year and 500,000 units in 1929.

The building this year will involve between $1,500,000,000 and 1,750,000,000, MacDonald asserted.

K. C. S., L. & A. Unification Is Approved

H. C. Couch Led Fight
No Cash Exchanged
Earnings to Increase

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 28.—The board of directors of Kansas City Southern Railway today approved unification of that line with Louisiana & Arkansas Railway. To be effective, the plan must be approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, by a stockholders meeting of the K. C. S., and by the controlling group of L & A.

The plan, originally proposed before 1929 by Leonor F. Loree, has been pressed for the past three years by Harvey C. Couch, Pine Bluff, Ark., utility magnate. Couch is chairman of the board of K. C. S., and is head of the group which has controlling interest in L. & A.

The financial aspects of the unification plan briefly are as follows: There will be no exchange of cash. There will be no increase in debt or preferred stock of either road. K. C. S. will issue an additional 210,000 shares of common stock. For that K. C. S. will receive preferred and common stock of L. & A., as nearly equivalent, dollar for dollar, as can be estimated, Couch said.

Financial arrangements were prepared by the banking houses of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co.

Net operating savings, Couch said, would be in excess of $1,000,000 (including allowances for anticipated new business). He also predicted a substantial increase in earnings of K. C. S. which in 1937 amounted to $4.01 a share on the preferred stock and 1 cent a share on the common. In 1936 earnings equaled $2.76 a share on the preferred.

Upturn Follows Parley Announcement
Buying Halts Trade in 8 Issues
Foreign Bonds Improve

New York, Sept. 28.—The most encouraging promise of peace that a harried world has received in more than a month of ear and anguish came today at a time when the clouds looked darkest and the response in financial markets was immediate and sensational. So quick was the turnabout in the stock market that in eight active issues trading had to be suspended temporarily until a fair price could be arranged.

Buying orders so outnumbered selling orders in these issues that the specialists were unable to transact business. The stocks were reopened a quarter to a half hour later, and in all but one of the eight cases the reopenings were substantially higher.

News that brought this sharp upward reversal, was of course the word that Hitler had agreed to a four-power meeting tomorrow. The fact that the German leader will sit down to talk things over with Prime Minister Chamberlain, Premier Daladier and Premier Mussolini does not in itself mean that the threatened war is over, but it is the most encouraging sign of a return to reason that we have had thus far.

Throughout the world it was hailed as the first and a fundamental step toward peace and the assumption now is that the crisis will be safely passed. Making the news all the more dramatic was the fact that it came at the time when, according to overnight rumors, the German army would be on the move to the Czechoslovakian frontier.

Sterling Stages Recovery

The most sensational comeback after the first half hour of renewed weakness which we witnessed, this morning was in sterling and the early action of this currency emphasized the seriousness of the situation which had developed. The British currency not only went to a new low since 1933, but it broke precipitously 12½ cents to $4.60, a move which constituted the most spectacular market since the World War. Then came the rebound which more than eliminated this break, sterling closing at $4.73⅝, up 1¾ for the day.

Buying Suspends Trade

Cessation in trading in eight stocks came about 10:30, and when they opened several had added 2 to 3 points. The eight were General Motors, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, United States Rubber, New York Central, Bethlehem Steel, Electric Auto-Lite and Simmons. Auto-Lite distinguished by reopening a point lower on a sale of 2,000 shares. Motors reopened with a gain of 2¼ points on 12,000 shares after having been absent from the tape 19 minutes. Chrysler was up 1⅜; Montgomery Ward, 1⅞; Rubber, 4; Central, 1¾; Bethlehem, 3½, and Simmons, 1½. Just why Simmons, a furniture manufacturer, should have encountered difficulty and be listed with the seven others, was a mild mystery, as the stock has not been unusually active during the war crisis.

The rebound of stocks, foreign currencies and bonds left little room for doubt as to what kind of a market we would have if there could be a permanent settlement of the war threat in Europe. That there could be such a quick turn just on the calling of a conference illustrates how unfortunate the business and investment interests of the world regarded the possibility of a conflict. After the first flush of buying was accommodated today, traders began to ask what was doing in business; they wanted to know more of carloadings, power production, retail trade and various other domestic happenings. Little attention has been accorded such dry statistics for the last month.

The average advance in stocks today was 1.25 points and among the leaders there were many gains of 2 to more than 3 points. General Motors, the most active, added 3½ and United States Rubber 3¼. Electric Auto-Lite was up 2⅜; Bethlehem, 2¾; General Electric, 2; Yellow Truck, 1½; Steel, 3⅛, and Chrysler, 3¾.

Foreign Bonds Advance

After initial uncertainty, United States and foreign government bonds advanced briskly in the listed market today. The change that came over the market was electric as the news spread that the leading heads of European regimes would assemble in Munich to discuss the problem of war or peace. The initial decline was halted and an abrupt advance began that lasted through the rest of the session. All important groups of issues shared in the betterment, and turnover increased to $9,250,000, or almost double the total of the previous day.

Active bonds in the foreign section reflected the relief occasioned by the four-power meeting. Czech bonds gained 5 points, on turnover of only seven bonds. Italian 7s advanced 5¼ points, and German government issues were up a point or more. Australian bonds, as leaders of the British Empire group, gained 2 to 4¾ points. French and Belgian bonds were sharply better, and Scandinavian obligations likewise reflected buying. Latin-Americans were neglected.

Treasuries Higher

In the United States Government Division some heavy trading was done initially but the market soon quieted to usual proportions. After a few sizable blocks of the more vulnerable issues were absorbed, apparently by a Federal agency, the market rallied and at the close gains ranged from 1-32 to ¾ point. Guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations also improved. Among best rated corporate bonds, small gains were the rule.

Railroad bonds of the more speculative classifications shared somewhat in the enthusiasm that swept all markets, but the uncertain state of the transportation business restrained the movement. Nickel Plate issues advanced sharply, but other rails were up 2 points at the most, while a few losses also appeared. Convertible bonds moved forward with their related equities. Most holding company issues did well, and communications bonds also improved. Local fractions proved a dull group.

Are You Listening?

I SAW ALICE TODAY AND SHE TELLS ME SHE HAS BEEN TERRIBLY SICK
DOC SAYS IF I TAKE A FIRM GRIP ON MY CLUBS I CAN STOP THAT SLICE THOUGHT
SHE THINKS IT'S MALARIA, AND THAT HE CAUGHT IT ON HIS TRIP TO SOUTH AMERICA
I THINK THE TROUBLE IS TOO MUCH RIGHT ARM IN MY SWING
THOUGHT
HE HAS CHILLS AND FEVER, AND THAT LOOKS LIKE MALARIA
I MUST TUNE IN ON LOWELL THOMAS AND HEAR HOW THE SOFT BALL GAME CAME OUT
THOUGHT
JOE INSISTS IT'S NOTHING BUT THE GRIPPE, AND HE WON'T CALL A DOCTOR
SOON BE TIME TO START THE OLD FURNACE. HARD TO REALIZE SUMMER'S GONE
THOUGHT
ALICE IS WORRIED ABOUT HIM. HE WAS ALWAYS SO DELICATE, EVEN AS A CHILD
HOPE WE HAVE STEAK FOR DINNER—STEAK AND ONIONS
THOUGHT
AND I'M WORRIED TOO. AFTER ALL, HE'S MY BROTHER
HUH? WHAT? OH, SURE, THAT'S WONDERFUL—SIMPLY SWELL, YES INDEED

Bob Burns Says—

The more two people are interested in each other, the more interesting their conversation will be to each other and the closer they are, the less apt their talk is to interest anybody else in the world.

When my Cousin Wafford was out here, he got a letter from his girl down home, contain' 16 pages closely written. When he got through devourin' it, I says, "There must be a whole lot going on down home?" And Wafford says, "Well, I don't know—she said if anything happened worth mentionin', she'll drop me a postcard."

Permanent Traffic Body Sought for D.C.

Idea Framed as Bill To Go to Trade Board Advisory Unit Asked

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Support of legislation to establish in the District a permanent traffic safety commission, patterned after the present Washington Criminal Justice Association, will be sought tomorrow at a meeting of the Board of Trade traffic committee, it was learned last night.

A proposal, drafted for Congressional action and outlining functions of a commission, will be submitted to the group by Col. L. C. Crawford, trade board traffic chairman.

Designed to provide the city with a medium through which all traffic control activities will be co-ordinated, the suggested safety commission would be headed by a paid executive officer and salaried civil service personnel.

Ex-officio members of the commission, said Col. Crawford, would include municipal department heads, chairmen of the House and Senate District Committees, a traffic court judge, newspapermen and representatives of the city's business and professional life.

Seeks Coordination

"We now have close to 100 civic traffic committees and activities and approximately 25 branches of the District government co-ordinately interested in traffic matters," said Col. Crawford. "It is believed these uncorrelated activities prove a tremendous disadvantage in handling the traffic problem."

The suggested bill provides:

"That there is hereby established in and for the District of Columbia a traffic safety commission, whose duty it shall be to keep fully informed on the traffic situation, to coordinate traffic activities, to carry on a constructive educational program in traffic matters, to supervise preparation and publication of traffic reports, to receive traffic complaints and to co-operate with traffic authorities of adjoining jurisdictions."

Col. Crawford pointed out that the proposed commission would act strictly in an advisory capacity.

St. Louis Man Hurt

Only minor mishaps were reported on Washington streets yesterday. A St. Louis man was brought to Casualty Hospital from an accident on the Defense highway near Bladensburg. He gave his name as Clarence Minor and was treated for a possible fractured skull. Police said he was struck by a car while walking along the highway.

A District fireman was charged with reckless driving after a collision which sent one man to the hospital with serious injuries.

The fireman was John A. Mohr, 35, of 11 Seaton place northwest, attached to No. 20 Engine Company. The injured man was Elliott Jones, colored, 29, of 1905 Eleventh street northwest. He was treated at Casualty Hospital for a possible fractured skull and lacerations. The accident occured at Ninth street and North Carolina avenue southeast.

Exchange Names New Governors

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago; Gen. Robert E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and Carle C. Conway, chairman of the Continental Can Co., today were elected members of the board of governors of the New York Stock Exchange as representatives of the public interest.

Nomination of the three men was made by William McC. Martin, president of the exchange, and all were unanimously elected. Conway was chairman of the committee which drafted the plan for the recent reorganization of the exchange.

The election of the three rerepresentatives of the public as governors of the exchange was in accordance with the recommendation of the so-called Conway committee which stated:

These Men Head the Staffs of Foreign Correspondents Who Send News to The Post by Special Cables

In the most important world capitals the New York Herald Tribune service has its own offices, staffed by expert correspondents available to send at a moment's notice to spots where the news is breaking. These correspondents send their stories by direct cables to the New York Herald Tribune, which in turn relays them to The Washington Post. These correspondents not only supplement the news supplied by the AP and UP, but also provide special news stories of great importance, because they shed a new light on the day's developments.

Meaning of Events Abroad Made Clear Thru Outsta

Editorials by Felix Morley

Before taking on the duties of an editor, Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, spent a number of years abroad as a foreign correspondent. His editorials reflect that experience in the foreign field, reflect, too, the ability as analyst and writer which won him the Pulitzer Prize for the excellence of the editorials in The Washington Post. You will find that The Washington Post's editorials give you a new insight as to the meaning of events.

"Today and Tomorrow" by Walter Lippmann

His work with Col. House during the peace treaty negotiations gave Walter Lippmann an invaluable understanding of the hates, fears, passions, ambitions, which keep Europe in a turmoil. His later work as editor of the New York World established his reputation as a writer of remarkable insight and ability to interpret the news in plain terms to the reader. His column, "Today and Tomorrow," in The Washington Post makes world events clear and easily understandable.

Pictures by Radio and Telegraph Show European Events

Something happened in Europe yesterday. An Associated Press photographer, on the spot, got the picture, rushed it to the developing room. Then, by a modern miracle, the picture was flashed across the Atlantic by either radio or cable, then sent by wire from New York to Washington. Only a few hours from the click of the camera to the desk of The Post's picture editor. And the picture of yesterday's European incident appears at your breakfast table in this morning's Post.

tstanding Editorials and World-Famous Columnists

"On the Record" by Dorothy Thompson

Dorothy Thompson spent eight years in Europe, showing an uncanny ability to be where things were happening. She has interviewed Europe's leading statesmen, and it was her interview, "I Saw Hitler," that caused her expulsion from Germany, where she had been chief of a central European news bureau. She has a complete understanding of motives as well as events and the courage to speak out against the wrongs she feels must be righted. Her column appears exclusively in The Post in Washington.

Articles by Barnet Nover

Of Barnet Nover, The Post's own expert on foreign affairs, John Gunther, author of "Inside Europe," wrote recently: "His columns on foreign news seem to me to be far and away the best comment of this type that I have seen anywhere in America . . . really first-rate, full of good information, good sense, and good writing." Nover's articles on foreign affairs appear on the Current Events Page of The Washington Post and give Post readers still more information on what is happening abroad.

Your editorial of September 24 agrees with my view of things and when I was in Berlin I wrote many reports and recommendations as to our attitude toward Hitler which were almost the same as suggested in your editorial. I am making addresses in Kansas from September 30 to October 7 in which I shall repeat what I have often said officially and almost the same as you have said today.
